Capitol Journal
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 24,213)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corps Switch Confirmed

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — Officials of the Job Corps announced today the conversion of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center from a training center for men to one that will ultimately house 600 women.

Confirming the switch, reported earlier by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., was Dr. Bennetta Washington, associate director of the women's Job Corps.

She read statements from Office of Economic Opportunity Director R. Sargent Shriver, Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, and William P. Kelly, acting head of the Job Corps.

The University of Oregon operates Tongue Point in conjunction with Philco Ford Corp. The center is near Astoria at the northwest tip of Oregon.

Flemming said it is hoped that 650 young women will be accommodated at the center by the end of fiscal 1967.

It will be the 16th women's Job Corps center in the nation, and the first in the Northwest. Dr. Wendell Van Loan is expected to continue as its head.

"In the recent session of Congress," said Shriver, "the Economic Opportunity Act was amended, providing that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women. After examining each of our 11 men's centers, Tongue Point was found to be best suited for a women's center."

Flemming said the 300 men in the automotive corps and the 200 in the appliance repair corps will be transferred to other centers, possibly by June.

About 70 men taking marine engineering will be transferred to the Breckinridge Job Corps Center at Morgan Field, Ky.

Kelly said that during Febru- and the first half of March, there will be staff training and program development for the center's new role. He said there will be a minimum of changes in staff or facilities.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 340,562 - S 384,694)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Center Officials Await Details Of Job Corps New Program

Details of a new program for the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria will be aired Thursday at 1 p.m. at the center, Dr. Wendell Van Loan, center director, told The Oregonian Wednesday.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., reported Tuesday from Washington, D.C., that negotiations were under way to convert the center, now housing 500 young men, into a women's training unit.

Dr. Van Loan, who was in Portland Wednesday, said he has not been informed of pending changes although "it had been rumored for about a month," he said. No program changes are to be made.

Change Recommended

"Everything is locked up in advance," said Director (Sargent) Shriver's and President (Arthur) Flemming's offices," said Van Loan.

According to Sen. Morse's announcement the change was recommended by the Office of Economic Opportunity, of which Shriver is director, and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, which has the major contract for operation of the centers.

Center staff members will meet Thursday with Job Corps officials from Washington, D.C., including Richard Jaffe, project manager, and Dr. Selma Lippeatt, assistant to Dr. Bennetta Washington, Women's Job Corps associate director.

"They are the ones who are going to tell me what to say tomorrow," said Dr. Van Loan, 64, who took over duties as director of the center last September.

Director Not Consulted

He said he had not been consulted in any discussions about proposed changes.

"I suppose I don't recall very many instances where Washington goes out and takes many people into the planning of a program," said Dr. Van Loan.

The director said that there has been talk among corps men at the center during the past few weeks questioning where—and if—they will be moved.

"They have been curious and so has the staff but we know absolutely nothing," he said.

Dr. Van Loan said he had not been advised of what staff changes will be made or if he is to continue as director. He also said he did not know how extensive—or how costly—the remodeling would be to change the center into a women's operation.

Along with the educational program trainees undergo at the center, instruction includes training in automotive repair, appliance repair, electronics and small boating industry skills. Buildings of the old Tongue Point Navy facility were extensively remodeled for vocational training shops when the Job Corps program was established there almost two years ago.

Asked if he thought community objection to the center had anything to do with the change, Dr. Van Loan answered that he considered that unlikely.

He said relations between the center and the Astoria community "have been excellent."

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 21,429 - S 22,348)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888
18561

gue Point Job Corps May Switch to Women

Headlight-Herald
Tillamook, Oregon
(Cir. W. 3,449)
JAN 1 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

To the Editor —

The following is a copy of a letter written to True Magazine by Sargent Shriver, director of the Job Corps. I would appreciate your sharing it with your readers.

Richard W. Schlachter
Center Director
Tillamook Job Corps

Mr. Douglas Kennedy, Editor
True Magazine
67 West 44th Street
New York, N. Y. 10036

Dear Mr. Kennedy:

I have just read in proofs a story, "Scandal in the Job Corps" by Gene Caesar, which will appear in the December issue of TRUE. It is shocking and surprising to read such a one-sided, biased presentation in a magazine of national circulation which purports to be concerned with the truth.

The writer of the story has collected distorted and exaggerated accounts of happenings of six to 18 months vintage and presented them as a startling "expose" of the program. Mr. Caesar exhibits a preconceived animosity by finding only stories critical of the program. He never talked to anyone in Job Corps to find out if there might be another side to any of the stories he had collected—and there are. Obviously this would have spoiled his "expose."

Each of the "incidents" cited with obvious glee by Mr. Caesar has been answered and explained many times in the public press and on the floor of Congress. It would serve no purpose to take his story and answer it, charge by charge. However, let me make just a few points about Job Corps:

1. The impression given by Mr. Caesar's story is that Job Corps is a haven for a criminal element of society. The "true" story is that 63 percent of the young men and women coming into Job Corps have had no previous record of any kind, 27 percent had a record of minor anti-social behavior (truancy, breaking curfew, etc) and 10 percent had one conviction but on the advice and urging of local authorities were accepted by Job Corps.

2. The impression Mr. Caesar tries to create is that young men and women in Job Corps centers spend all their time fighting, rioting, pilfering, etc. The "true" story is that since the programs began nearly two years ago, the arrest rate of Job Corps volunteers has been about half the national arrest rate for this age group.

3. Mr. Caesar declares that "from all corners of the country" there are complaints about Job Corps behavior. Had he taken the trouble to check, he would have found that in most of the communities adjoining the 112 centers now in operation, the relationship between the center and the community is one of harmony, understanding and cooperation.

4. In a sort of grandstand effort to show his fairness, Mr. Caesar says there have been a few successes in the program. If he had bothered to check, he would have found that more than 10,000 young men and women have completed their training, with 70 percent of them going into gainful employment at an average wage of $1.71 an hour (only 10 percent had worked before coming into the program, earning about 80 cents an hour); 21 percent had entered the armed forces (two-thirds of those eligible for military service could not pass the entrance exams before entering Job Corps), and the remainder returned to school, many of them to college after earning their high school equivalency certificates in Job Corps.

He also would have found that Job Corpsmen in the conservation centers during the first year did more than $30 million worth of work in the national forests, parks and grasslands—work which could not have been done by the operating agencies with their present work force and budget.

Mr. Caesar, had he tried, would also have found that there are hundreds and hundreds of cases of Corpsmen assisting communities and individuals in many, many ways. For example, 120 Corpsmen have just completed helping the citizens of Belmond, Iowa, clear up the debris left by a tornado. Some months ago, Corpsmen—all volunteering for this duty—helped Topeka, Kansas, in a similar operation.

I would be the last to say that Job Corps has not had its troubles in the early days of the program. However, there is no pioneering venture which does not have such early troubles. But I have visited a great many of our centers and have seen the wonderful things which are happening to young men and women as they take full advantage of the Job Corps opportunity.

Your story does a great disservice to the thousands of young men and women who are benefitting from the program and who only wanted and needed the chance.

Valid criticism of the program is something which is beneficial but a story such as Mr. Caesar's leads one to believe that his only purpose was to get into print and the only motivations for using it in TRUE was to sell magazines.

I would be very happy if you would assign a writer to write a "true" story of Job Corps and visit some of the centers, talk to the young men and women, and to residents of communities near the centers. That, I am sure, would result in a story far closer to the name and purpose of your magazine.

Sincerely,
/s/ Sargent Shriver
Director

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,158)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Center may be too big for women's facility

PORTLAND (AP)—U.S. Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., says the Tongue Point Job Corps Center may be too large for an all-women's facility.

The center near Astoria, which now has all men, is expected to be converted as early as next month.

Mrs. Green said in an interview on KGW-TV Wednesday that she wants Congress to authorize a study with the government or the University of Oregon on the use of the center.

She said the government has room nationally for 45,000 Job Corps men and women but has only 29,000 enlisted so far.

Mrs. Green said she would not object to the land being given to industry if that is found to be the best way to use it.

The World
Coos Bay, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,650)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Plans Told

ASTORIA (UPI) — Plans to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, which now has about 500 young men, to a women's training center were formally announced today.

The announcement said that initially it was desired to have 650 young women in training at the end of the current fiscal year. The majority of the young men will be transferred to other centers.

Word of the shift was released late Tuesday in Washington, D.C. by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., after a briefing of the Oregon congressional delegation by officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO).

Tongue Point began operations as a Job Corps center in February of 1965. It is operated by the University of Oregon.

The joint announcement by Sargent Shriver, head of OEO, and Dr. Arthur Flemming, president of the university, was released here and in Washington, D.C.

Shriver said that at the recent session of Congress the Economic Opportunity Act was amended providing that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 340,562 - S 384,694)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Astoria Unit May Swit To Women's Job Center

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations are under way in Oregon to convert the Tongue Point, Ore., Job Corps training center from men to women, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said Tuesday.

Officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity outlined the plan Tuesday to members of the Oregon congressional delegation and their representatives.

Morse said after the meeting that the negotiations are progressing between the OEO and the University of Oregon which operates the Tongue Point center at Astoria, now housing 500 young men trainees.

He said it was indicated that the conversion would mean "a minimal displacement of the present staff."

Details of the plan are expected to be announced later this week in Oregon and in Washington, Morse said.

The change was recommended, Morse said, by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Tuesday's briefing of the congressional delegation was conducted by David Squire, deputy director of the Job Corps, and Dr. Bennetta Washington, associate director.

Attending the meeting, in addition to Morse, were Reps. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Sen.-elect Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone of the substance of the meeting.

Participants said the congressional representatives offered no objections to the change.

News-Review
Roseburg, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,200)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Astoria Job Center Will Train Girls

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Plans are being made to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps training center near Astoria, Ore., to a facility for women, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said Tuesday.

About 500 young men are in training there now.

A statement by Morse said Office of Economic Opportunity officials briefed members of the Oregon Congressional delegation on the proposed change.

Those who attended the briefing included Morse, Rep. Wendall Wyatt, R - Ore.; Congressman-elect John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., of the discussion by telephone.

Recommendation for the change was made by the OEO and the president of the University of Oregon, Arthur S. Flemming. The university operates the Tongue Point Center.

The delegation was told that negotiations are being conducted in Oregon between the University of Oregon and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women's Training Center

Tongue Point Switch Planned

By LLOYD PASEMAN
Of the Register-Guard

Negotiations were under way Wednesday between the University of Oregon and the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) in Washington, D.C., to convert the UO-operated Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria from a men's training center to one for women.

The negotiations were announced Tuesday by Oregon Senator Wayne Morse, following a meeting in Washington between OEO officials and members of the Oregon congressional delegation.

Morse said the change was being recommended by the OEO and UO President Arthur Flemming.

Pending a formal release from Washington later this week, Flemming declined to comment on the reason for the recommendation.

However, the Register-Guard learned Wednesday that the change was proposed by OEO to help meet a requirement set by the 89th Congress that a minimum of 22 per cent of the Job Corps' enrollees be women. Sources said women enrollees presently make up only approximately 10 per cent of the total enrollment in the United States. Regional considerations — there is presently only one women's center on the West Coast —and the success of the UO's operation at Tongue Point reportedly influenced the recommendation by OEO.

Flemming did say, however, that "The women's center people in Washington are very enthusiastic about this possibility, and we're equally enthusiastic about working with them.

"The people in charge of the women's center program are very fine—they're experienced in the field of education, and we feel in terms of our educational objectives, this new arrangement will undoubtedly work out very well."

Flemming said it would be a "fair statement" to say that criticisms leveled against the Tongue Point Center since it opened in early 1965—and reported friction between some Job Corps enrollees and members of the Astoria community—had nothing to do with the recommended change.

Tongue Point and other Job Corps centers around the country have been criticized by some as providing unnecessarily expensive job training for too few people. The program is designed for out-of-school, out-of-work youth, ages 16 through 21, from underprivileged homes.

Flemming said the switchover, when formally appoved, will provide for the enrollment of some 600 young women from all parts of the country. He said the new center will be one of only 13 such centers in the United States.

The Tongue Point center was opened in February, 1965, on the site of the old Naval Air Station with an 18-month, $8.1-million renewable contract from the federal government. More than 500 youths have graduated from the Tongue Point camp during the past two years, and approximately 500 young men are presently enrolled.

(See earlier story, Page 6B)

Negotiation for Replacement Of Men Begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations are under way in Oregon to convert the Tongue Point, Ore., Job Corps Training Center from men to women, Sen Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said Tuesday.

Officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity outlined the plan Tuesday to members of the Oregon congressional delegation and their representatives.

Morse said after the meeting that the negotiations are progressing between the Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, which operates the Tongue Point center, now housing 500 young men trainees.

Would Retain Staff

He said it was indicated that the conversion would mean "a minimal displacement of the present staff."

Details of the plan are expected to be announced later this week in Oregon and in Washington, Morse said.

The change was recommended, Morse said, by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Tuesday's briefing of the congressional delegation was conducted by David Squire, deputy director of the Job Corps.

Officials Attend

Attending the meeting, in addition to Morse, were Reps. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone of the substance of the meeting.

Participants said the congressional representatives offered no objections to the change.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,463)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Camp To Train Girls

By TOM STIMMEL
Journal National News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Job Corps Urban Center at Tongue Point near Astoria will shift emphasis from training boys to training girls.

The transition is expected to begin in late February or early March and will be completed about June.

The first - phase goal is for enrollment of about 650 girls.

Details of the transition will be announced Thursday at Astoria by the Office of Economic Opportunity — the government's antipoverty agency — and the University of Oregon.

The university and Philco Corp. have been operating the center to train school dropouts since it opened two years ago this month.

Much of the training has been vocational.

Since its inception the center has been under frequent criticism from townspeople because of real or feared juvenile disturbances and from congressmen because of its high cost.

Rep. Edith Green, D - Ore., has pointed out several times that the average cost of training one individual there, $12,000, is twice the cost originally anticipated.

Two representatives from the OEO met with members of the Oregon congressional delegation in the office of Sen. Wayne Morse Tuesday to discuss the transition.

Argus-Observer
Ontario, Oregon
(Cir. W 6,644)
JAN 2 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

REFRESHMENTS at a holiday party held last week at the state employment office for vocationing Job Corps students, home for Christmas, included a special cake. Getting ready to sample it are (from left) Guadalupe Fuentes, Nyssa; Ida Van Buren, Nyssa; Ralph Portillo, Jr., Nyssa, and Elia Fuentes, Guadalupe's sister, also of Nyssa. Ida studied under Job Corps for women center last year.

Job Corpsmen Meet At Holiday Get-Together

By Mary Ann Campbell

A group of Ontario, Vale and Nyssa Job Corpsmen, home for the Christmas holidays, were entertained last week at a party by the state employment service. Over cake and coffee, they exchanged their impressions of the education they are receiving and concluded the Job Corps is the best thing that could happen to them.

Although the students say that some Job Corpsmen are interested more in getting a high school diploma and then leaving the school than in the technical training, the practical work rates highly with the Malheur county group.

"There's no time to learn how to do something on the job," said Guadalupe Fuentes, Nyssa, who is studying radio and television electronics at Gary, near San Marcos, Texas. "The Job Corps has time to help and show you the right and wrong way to do something. I'm glad to be taught."

"You learn respect for the equipment and the tools," added Bennie Fuller, Ontario. "You learn how to do something right and then it goes better."

Fuller completed half the course at the Tongue Point camp, near Astoria, and is transferring to Gary.

They like the Job Corps system of sending students to the highly specialized centers to learn a particular trade under the best teachers.

The system, as explained by Albert Stockdale, Nyssa, who is studying heavy equipment operation at the Weber Basin center, Ogden, Utah, starts with a trainee at a conservation center. There, he said, students who have quit school with a first to ninth grade education alternates weeks of classroom study and work. After graduation from the conservation center, they go on to an urban center, where they receive on-the-job vocational training.

"You take all the tests you can pass in the conservation center," he said. "Then, as soon as you pass the tests, you can ask for a transfer to an urban center."

Stockdale, who spent seven months in the service, emphasized the difference between the Job Corps and military system.

"There's no comparison," he said. "You're in the Job Corps to learn and you can't learn without making mistakes.

No one punishes you for mistakes."

Ralph Portillo, Jr., Nyssa, who is going into a Job Corps school in a few days, asked about discipline in the schools.

"If you break a dorm rule or if you skip classes, you get a work detail," Fuller told him. "If you get in a fight and beat somebody up, they fine you and suspend your passes. Otherwise, they aren't too harsh."

Fuller added that there are "a lot of rules and restrictions you won't like at first, and you'll feel it's unfair. But remember, they have to have rules in order to run the place. There are rules anywhere you go or whatever you do."

The students are enthusiastic about the Job Corps system of letting each one progress at his own pace.

"There's no push," Stockdale said. "In high school certain assignments have to be done at a certain time, and that's why lots of fellows drop out."

"I went through math and didn't think I'd ever learn after the first time," Fuller said. "The small classes are good and so is the individual help."

Morale is high among the Job Corpsmen, from the way the young men talked, and a certain spirit holds them together, through the common experience.

However, they feel the public does not know enough about the Job Corps and that residents in towns near the centers are inclined to scorn the program.

Stockdale described conversations with Ogden residents, who did not know he was attending the school, and who expressed dislike of the center, usually, he said, on a thinly-informed basis.

Stockdale feels that Job Corpsmen who return home in less than three months should have to pay for their return ticket themselves.

"In the service, you stay," he said. "You can't say, 'I want to go home' any time you feel like it."

He also would like to see a more extensive recruiting campaign for Job Corps.

(Continued on Page 8)

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 2 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Big Change at Tongue Point

After two years of trial and error, the Tongue Point Job Corps Center is getting into high gear. Mistakes have been corrected, enrollees are apparently becoming more contented and willing to stay, discipline has improved, relations with the community are measurably better.

So what does the US government do? It tosses the whole project into the ash can, moves out the young men and will move in young women. The whole period of adjustment, of trial and error, will have to be gone through again.

Political necessity, to raise the present ratio of 10 per cent girls and 90 per cent boys, to a Congress-ordered ratio of 23 per cent girls to 77 per cent boys, is apparently the reason beyond this otherwise wasteful and senseless change. The quickest way to up the girl ratio was apparently to take a going Job Corps Center of substantial capacity and swiftly convert it into a girls' center.

Economically and otherwise, this transaction is utter nonsense. Rep. Edith Green of Portland, who was a sponsor of the 23-77 per cent legislation, apparently feels this move is made, in part at least, to "show her up" by turning a center in her own area into a girls' center.

We share Rep. Green's dislike of this change, but don't agree with her apparent opinion that Tongue Point is no good either for a boys' or girls' center. It has become a good institution, either despite or because of its location. We can't go along with Rep. Green's apparent desire to abandon the whole project. The plant is there, it is worth $30 to $40 millions, and there would have to be something seriously wrong with it to justify abandoning it and rebuilding a plant of comparable cost elsewhere.

Rep. Green complains, with merit, that the boys at Tongue Point have to be sent to Portland and Seattle for holidays in order to find girls for social activities. Same problem would exist, no doubt, when 800 girls come.

Perhaps a co-educational Job Corps Center here would make more sense than a center exclusively for men or women. Equipped with more recreational programs that would help keep the trainees contentedly on campus. Apparently the Job Corps dare not attempt such a program for fear of public criticism. First time a girl trainee became pregnant, there would be public outcry that the government was promoting a den of vice. But an occasional girl becomes pregnant in our colleges, our high schools, even our junior high schools, and we don't shut them down because of it.

One aspect of this big change at Tongue Point which burns us a good deal is that it is going to be expensive. The OEO people who ordered the change apparently were blithely indifferent to what it will cost the taxpayers—an attitude which seems all too prevalent in that federal agency.

Obviously all the equipment that has been assembled at Tongue Point, at substantial cost, can be moved to new centers only if additional cost is involved. Massive personnel transfer also will cost considerable money. Installation of new equipment for new types of training programs obviously will cost more money.

We will probably never see a financial report on the expense of convertin Tongue Point from a boys' center to a girls' center, but it obviously will cost well into five figures and probably six.

And, as Rep. Green says, this expenditure is not necessary. The OEO could have started a new girls' school somewhere—there are other abandoned military bases around the country—rather than wreck a going institution out of what may have been political spite against the Oregon congresswoman.

Junior Guard
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 26,290)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Round the State

Job Corps Center To Train Women

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegates and their representatives.

Senator Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Also attending the meeting were Representatives Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Senator-elect Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Representative Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone.

The congressmen and delegates offered no objections to the change.

Spokane, Wash.
Spokesman-Review
(Cir. 89,899 - Sun. 131,331)
JAN 5 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Solon Wonders If Corps Center Not Too Large

PORTLAND (AP) — U.S. Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., says the Tongue Point Job Corps Center may be too large for an all-women's facility.

The center, near Astoria, which now has all men, is expected to be converted as early as next month.

Mrs. Green said in an interview on KGW-TV Wednesday that she wants Congress to authorize a study with the government or the University of Oregon on the use of the center.

She said the government has room nationally for 40,000 Job Corps men and women but has only 28,000 enlisted so far.

Mrs. Green said she would not object to the land being given to industry if that is found to be the best use.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 21,439 - S 32,348)
JAN 9 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Betrothal of Couple Told

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Hamilton are announcing the engagement of their daughter Charlene Elaine Hamilton to Clarence Allen Bryant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bryant of Boomer, West Virginia.

Miss Hamilton is a graduate of Dallas High School and is currently employed at Waverly Children's Home in Portland.

Her fiance is a member of the Tongue Point Job Corps and will attend Mount Angel College winter term.

The couple announced their engagement at a Christmas Eve party at her parents home to the immediate family and friends. A May wedding is planned.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

College Board Meet

A recently completed Tillamook and Clatsop county vocational study will be discussed at the board of directors meeting tonight at Clatsop Community college. Other topics of discussion include possible acquisition of surplus Tongue Point Job Corps property and budget committee member replacement.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 2 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

WOMEN OF MANY FAITHS SEND COOKIES TO PARTY

The 500 people, composed of townspeople, Job Corpsmen and staff, consumed 20 gallons of punch and 3000 cookies during the evening's entertainment show Thursday night in the theater at the center. What they didn't know was that the variety of decorated cookies came from the many churches in town, where Finnish, Norwegian, Slavonian, German and Jewish women responded to the call and, from recipes of their homelands, baked batches of goodies for the party. "This is something that could only happen in Astoria," was the comment from William Roberts, recreational director at the Job Corps center, who was assisted by Teresa Mirack, representing the student government of the corps, and a group of local women.

Signal
Seaside, Oregon
(Cir. W 2,360)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpsmen going to Mount Angel

Ten Tongue Point Job Corpsmen, including the student body president, have been selected to participate in Mount Angel College's upward bound program beginning January 15.

They are Clarence Bryant of Smithers, W. Va.; student body president, Joe McElhannon of Sacramento, Calif.; treasurer; Robert Schoppert, Juneau, Alaska; John Mash, Salt Lake City, Utah; Jack Figwood, Fontana, Calif.

Harold McThay, Deerfield, Fla.; Kevin Terhune, Lincoln, Neb.; Joseph Bugerson, Merlotta, Wash.; Charles Ray and Arec Jones, Cleveland, Ohio.

They are among 60 other 11th and 12th grade level young people from disadvantaged backgrounds who will participate in the eight-month residence program.

Basic goals of the project are to acquire a high school equivalency diploma, preparation for regular college work, participation in college-level courses and placement in college work or similar programs in which the student can support himself and complete his college education in a four-year school, vocational school or community college.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Staff Cuts Affect 140

ASTORIA (UPI) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Staff of 417 will be reduced 30 to 35 per cent to meet needs of the new 650 trainee women's Urban Center to be established there by June 30, officials said.

This will be a reduction of about 140 persons, mostly in the fields of physical education, vocational training and group life supervision.

Termination notices will be sent within a few days to all persons on the staff. They are automatic upon termination of the University of Oregon contract to operate a men's Job Corps Center, Wendall Van Loan, director, said.

Most of the staff personne will be offered new contracts under the women's center program.

Van Loan said there apparently will be no difficulty in finding new jobs for staff members who are not reemployed. He said that requests for people are coming from school districts and vocational schools as far away as Edmonton, Canada.

A woman director is being sought for the women's center and Van Loan said he probably will return to University of Oregon. He was on a temporary leave basis from the university to Tongue Point.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corps Staff Gets Notices

ASTORIA — About 350 staff members of the Job Corps at Tongue Point Monday received notices of dismissal, ranging from 10 to 90 days.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said the notices were "normal" under Office of Economic Opportunity regulations. Paul Jacobson, dean of the School of Education at the University of Oregon, said "many" of those dismissed would be re-employed when the center opens in March. Women's Job Corps unit.

(Turn to Page 6, Part 3)

Signal
Seaside, Oregon
(Cir. W 2,360)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Juniors to sell book

The Seaside Junior Women's club at a meeting Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Gerald Outslay decided to sell cookbooks as a fund-raising project. The book is entitled "Favorite Recipes of the Great Northwest" and contains 900 recipes for deserts and party beverages from club leaders in the northwest. Senator Maurine Neuberger and the wife of Senator Wayne Morse have featured recipes in the cookbook.

Local women who have submitted recipes include Mrs. Robert Ewing, Cannon Beach, and Mrs. C. L. Moon and Mrs. Myra Wilson of Seaside. Many organizations are represented in the book including AAUW, PTA, hospital auxiliaries, Jay-C-Ettes, American Legion auxiliary, Woman's club and church groups. The book will go on sale Saturday in the local Safeway.

Other business included discussion of the Miss Seaside Pageant, set for April 22. Program for the evening was presented by Bill Sager of the Job Corps.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

We are curious to know why Tongue Point should be changed to girls' center

It would probably be futile to try to find out just why the Tongue Point job corps center should be changed from a boy's institution to a girl's center. But certainly one must be curious as to this somewhat amazing situation. It has taken Tongue Point many months to become more or less of a going concern for boys. It cost many hundreds of thousands of dollars to prepare it for use in the first place, and a great deal of this money went into facilities for vocational training for boys. In spite of talk about moving this equipment we doubt if there will be much salvage.

It has been hinted that the move was to get even with Mrs. Green, representative from the second Oregon district, for her demand that the ratio of girls to boys in job centers be increased, and for her skepticism toward the whole program. This would seem highly improbable, but it certainly is not outside the realm of possibility.

In any event the whole thing seems to be a bureaucratic fiasco. It will require many months to effect the change-over, and to create an organization and to provide facilities to meet the new situation. Why it is necessary to interrupt the operation of this center, rather than to create a new center for girls, is something we cannot understand.

Could it be possible that the move is the initial step toward "phasing out" (please excuse this expression) the center? Could it be that the election of a Republican senator and a Republican congressman might have something to do with it?

Idaho Daily Statesman
Boise, Idaho
(Cir. D 39,602 - S 48,405)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Director Tells Plans

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — The director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria, Dr. Wendell Van Loan, said Tuesday he will probably return to the University of Oregon when the new center opens this summer. He told an Astoria newspaper that a woman director for the center is being sought. He said he is on temporary loan from the university, where he is a faculty member.

Tacoma, Wash.
News-Tribune
(Cir. D 88,811 - S 84,388)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Conversion Is Step Closer

ASTORIA (AP)—The conversion of Tongue Point Job Corps Center into a women's center took another step Monday when the University of Oregon sent dismissal notices to the 350 staff members of the men's center.

The federal government announced just one week ago that the center would be converted into a women's center. Most of the young men will be gone by the end of the week and the women start arriving in March.

The dismissal notices are temporary for about two-thirds of the staff, officials said, but about one-third will be dismissed because women will be required in such positions as group life supervisors and physical education and vocational instructors.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, was one of those who may not be back. He said Monday he does not picture himself as a dean of women.

Van Loan said the wholesale dismissal notices are routine in the process of cancelling a contract and negotiating another with the Office of Economic Opportunity. The University of Oregon holds the prime contract.

Democrat-Herald
Baker, Oregon
(Cir. D 3,470)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Shift Of Tongue Point Trainees Complete Today

ASTORIA (UPI)— A shift of Job Corps trainees from Tongue Point to other centers in the country is expected to be completed Tuesday night, leaving only 81 of the 450 on hand when word came it would be convert-women's Job Corps unit.

81 who will remain are those who can complete their courses by the end of this month.
Twenty-five corpsmen have left the Job Corps since last week's announcement, some to go home and others to take jobs.
About 350 staff members Monday received notices of dismissal, ranging from 10 to 90 days. Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said the notices were "normal" under Office of Economy Opportunity regulations.
Paul Jacobson, dean of the School of Education at the University of Oregon, said "many" of those dismissed would be re-employed when the women's center opens in March.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
JAN 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Training Plan Studied

ASTORIA — A review committee has been set up by the University of Oregon to recommend courses for women Job Corps trainees who are slated to start arriving at Tongue Point in March.

Dr. Harold McAbee of Tongue Point and Dr. Harold Abel of University of Oregon are co-chairmen.

Subjects which may be recommended include drama, art, music, homemaking, citizenship training, recreation, health, driver education, mathematics, culinary skills, clerical and stenographic training, social service activities and electronic assembly.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

UO Signs Pact With TP Crews

EUGENE (UPI) — The University of Oregon has signed a collective bargaining agreement with members of the Building and Construction Trades council employed at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The agreement recognizes the employes as members of a union with bargaining rights.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Building Union UO Sign Pact

EUGENE (UPI) — The University of Oregon has signed a collective bargaining agreement with members of the Building and Construction Trades Council employed at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The agreement recognizes the employes as members of a union with bargaining rights.

The center is managed by the university.

Capital Journal
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 24,210)
JAN 9 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

776

OPENS MONDAY IN MT. ANGEL

Upward Bound to Draw 60

MT. ANGEL — Sixty young men and women from low-income surroundings will begin an eight-month Upward Bound study program on the Mt. Angel College campus next Monday.

Project Director Gary Lansing said purpose of the project is to determine if young people, stopped from continuing their education by economic or social reasons, can become successful college students if they have the intellectual capacity.

All the participants will have dropped out of school before graduation from high school.

Not all of them will be single persons.

One young woman, 22 years old, has four children whose father deserted his family. Care for the children will be arranged while she attends school. Two married couples have been accepted. One couple has a small child.

Another of the applicants is a 18-year-old Indian youth from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center with an IQ of 122. He has been learning a vocation at Tongue Point because the administrators of the high school he attended thought he was unfit to continue academic studies.

Early this week, project counselors still were screening applicants.

Of 35 who were accepted, 10 were from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, 13 from the Portland Youth Opportunity Center; three from the Timber Lake Job Corps Center at Estacada, three from MacLaren School for Boys, four from Hillcrest School for Girls and one each from the Clackamas County Juvenile Department and the Valley Migrant League.

The single girls will be housed in a wing of Mt. Angel Towers, a retirement center which is only partly occupied. The boys will live temporarily in Woodburn. They will be moved to the campus when a dormitory is finished in a few weeks.

The project's chief counselor, John Criqui, was in Los Angeles over the weekend interviewing applicants at a women's Job Corps center.

A special curriculum has been organized by teachers in the project. Temporary classrooms have been partitioned off in the basement of Marmion Hall, a regular girls' dormitory. Classrooms in college buildings also will be used.

Members of the college faculty will teach some subjects to Upward Bound students as they move into college preparatory and college-level study.

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,150)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women to be trained at Job Corps center

776

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegates and their representatives.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Also attending the meeting were Reps. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone.

The congressmen and delegates offered no objections to the change.

Malheur Enterprise
Vale, Oregon
(Cir. W, 1,568)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

THE EDITOR'S MAILBAG

776

Letter to the Editor:

I, Adolfo C. Rodriquez, am stationed in the Job Corps Center at Tongue Point, just about two or three miles out of the town of Astoria, Oregon. I would like to take this precious time of yours and tell you a few things about the Job Corps, what life in the Job Corps center is like and what they do there. I, myself, dropped out of school my junior year in high school because of financial reasons. Dad, as some of you know is handicapped, has and artificial leg. He, by himself, couldn't support, well, let's put it another way, he can support the whole family, but sometimes it gets too difficult for him by himself. I have three more sisters and four more brothers, besides myself and I, myself, being the oldest at the age of eighteen years of age. I know what it is like to look for work without an education. It's really hard, and take my advice, don't think school is rough, cause life is worse off without an education.

I am now in the Job Corps and have been in there since September 10, 1965, and up to date, I am glad to be called a corpsman, I have learned to take care of my own responsibilities, do what I think is right.

In the Job Corps you learn to take care of yourself and to get along with others and be somebody, sure, they'll say do this and do that but look at it this way, what would happen if everybody did what they wanted to do? We would have a mess, wouldn't we? Well, they don't try to boss you around, they just tell you for your own good.

I am now in the field of electronics, in a technician course, they have to offer, and I really enjoy it. In my opinion, I have really taken into consideration that the Job Corps is a place where I will learn my trade and be somebody, in this vast land known as EARTH. I know what it's like to be alone now that I've been in the Job Corps for four months, when I say alone, I don't really mean by yourself, but without your parents. Sure, there are alot of men in the Job Corps to keep you company, but don't take it wrong just because there are Negroes, Spanish, Puerto Ricans and whites, they are all still human beings living in one place and getting along with all the rest of the others.

You have probably read about the Job Corps in a prominent magazine, but look at it this way, they don't ever mention one good thing about the Job Corps. Do they know that some of our corpsmen have given their time to help make gifts for Christmas for needies; also, do they know that they also help on weekends to paint babies homes and do other good things around the city.

No they don't. They say that the job corpsmen did this and did that, but why don't they get the facts about the corpsmen themselves. Sure, there are some of the corpsmen who had life rough and up-to-date that is the only way they know life to be. But to me, I am really proud and would like to thank my Job Corps screener, Mr. Joaquin Hernandez; Mrs. Betty Coan, my counselor; Mr. John Lake, my educational advisor; and Mr. H.M. (Tiny) Thornton, my cadet supervisor, and thank them for taking their time to help me and to show me that life as a corpsman is really a magnificent thing.

Thank you,
Adolf C. Rodriguez

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oregon
(Cir. D. 19,194)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Plan Finds Opposition

776

PORTLAND (UPI) — Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., said Wednesday she had some reservations about converting the Tongue Point Job Corps center near Astoria to a facility for girls.

About 500 young men are now in training at the center which once had around 900 enrollees.

Mrs. Green said she would seek to have a study team appointed under congressional direction to determine if the location would have a reasonable chance of success in developing a program for girls.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said plans were being made to convert the facility and that members of the Oregon congressional delegation in Washington were briefed Tuesday.

Mrs. Green, who was in Portland, asked that if Tongue Point was an ideal spot to train girls "why wasn't it originally made into a girls' center instead of a boys' center."

Daily Courier
Grants Pass, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,000)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Astoria Center Scheduled to Train Women

776

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegates and their representatives.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D [illegible] S 324,694)
JAN 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Volunteer Sees Trouble In Tongue Point Switch To Women

776

The Portland area director of Women In Community Service (WICS) foresees difficult problems arising when the Tongue Point Jobs Corps Center becomes a young women's center.

But, said Mrs. Aileen Christensen, "We finally have gotten a women's center in this area and we're going to do everything to help make it a success."

Mrs. Christensen said a crew of about 40 women volunteers — all members of WICS, the group that helps in the recruiting and screening of Job Corps applicants — will be increased.

WICS operates the screening center in Portland, located at the Neighborhood House, and offices in Salem, Eugene and Lebanon.

Local Workers Disturbed

"We haven't been able to cover Eastern Oregon adequately. We need workers in the Klamath Falls area, as well as more in southern Oregon and in the coast areas," said Mrs. Christensen.

Mrs. Christensen said local workers were disturbed because "we weren't even contacted through this whole thing (the conversion of the Astoria center)."

"We're always the last to know things. We're the last to know when girls graduate, when they are sent home — we're never involved in planning," said Mrs. Christensen.

The director said she understood that national leaders of the WICS organizations were involved in the conversion discussions.

"But I feel that we should have been contacted locally. I think of Office of Economic Opportunity would profit by talking to volunteers," she said.

The director said that part of the coming accelerated effort in recruiting for Tongue Point could include a volunteer-manned bus traveling to various points in Oregon. She said she hoped churches and other organizations would donate space where girls can be screened for the Job Corps.

One of the major problems she foresees when the girls' center is established will revolve around recreation. The trainees come to Portland to make use of local recreational facilities.

"But what happens when a girl misses a bus? The boys were always able to hitch-hike to get back to camp on time. Girls can't do that sort of thing," said Mrs. Christensen.

The failure of the women's center in St. Petersburg, Fla., Mrs. Christensen said, resulted because of its location in the middle of a senior citizen retirement area.

A girl's center in downtown Los Angeles, she said, is "really fabulous" and "doing beautifully."

The Los Angeles center, which houses about 250 young women, utilizes many of the area's educational facilities for training.

"The girls have access to the city colleges, beauty colleges. They can study everything from theater arts to scientific police work," said Mrs. Christensen.

Mrs. Christensen, who paid a recent visit to the Los Angeles center, said she was impressed with the "wonderful rapport between the girls and their advisers."

"It was like a private boarding school," she said.

Olympia, Wash.
Olympian
(Cir. D. 15,536 - S. 15,848)
JAN 4 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Soon To Train [illegible] Women

776

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegates and their representatives.

* * *

Senator Wayne Morse, D-Oregon, said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Also attending the meeting were Representatives Wendell Wyatt, R-Oregon, and John Dellenback, R-Oregon; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Senator-elect Mark Hatfield, R-Oregon; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Representative Al Ullman, D-Oregon.

Morse said he advised Representative Edith Green, D-Oregon, by telephone.

The congressmen and delegates offered no objections to the change.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,650)
JAN 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Not U of Oregon's Fault

776

Language of the press release officially announcing the change-over of Tongue Point Job Corps center to a women's center may have been misleading, indicating as it did that the change was announced jointly by the Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon.

This may mislead people into thinking the university was responsible for the change, in part at least. No so, the way we understand it. The switch-over was ordered from Washington, D.C., by the OEO, and apparently for the purely political purpose of building up the enrollment of female Job Corps trainees to the 23 per cent of the total ordained by federal law.

The university, it appears, had no voice in the decision, which was purely an OEO matter.

The Portland Oregonian says that "implicit in the announcement is the admission that the training program for men that began at Tongue Point two years ago has been a failure."

This does not seem to be a logical deduction. The political basis for change-over is obvious and it certainly does not justify an inference that the present program has failed. Twenty per cent of the 2,353 young men who have gone into Tongue Point Center have completed the program and graduated and a few more will do so before it closes.

This is not a bad record for a program that was admittedly experimental when it started two years ago, and has been going through a period of trial and error. Actually, the program has been junked too soon for anyone to be able to say it succeeded or failed.

The most valid criticism of the program has been its high cost. It would have been preferable to keep the program and try to bring its cost per pupil down to a reasonable level, rather than to junk it, spend $100,000 or more changing over, and launch a new program that also is bound to be expensive at the start.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,841)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Job Center To House 650 Women

776

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — Officials of the Job Corps announced today the conversion of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center from a training center for men to one that will ultimately house 650 women.

Confirming the switch, reported earlier by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., was Dr. Bennetta Washington, associate director of the women's Job Corps.

She read statements from Office of Economic Opportunity Director R. Sargent Shriver, Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, and William P. Kelly, acting head of the Job Corps.

The University of Oregon operates Tongue Point in conjunction with Philco Ford Corp. The center is near Astoria at the northwest tip of Oregon.

Flemming said it is hoped that 650 young women will be accommodated at the center by the end of fiscal 1967.

It will be the 16th women's Job Corps center in the nation, and the first in the Northwest. Dr. Wendell Van Loan is expected to continue as its head.

"In the recent session of Congress," said Shriver, "the Economic Opportunity Act was amended, providing that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women. After examining each of our 11 men's centers, Tongue Point was found to be best suited for a women's center."

Flemming said the 300 men in the automotive corps and the 200 in the appliance repair corps will be transferred to other centers, possibly by June.

About 70 men taking marine engineering will be transferred to the Breckenridge Job Corps Center at Morgan Field, Ky.

Kelly said that during February and the first half of March, there will be staff training and program development for the center's new role. He said there will be a minimum of changes in staff or facilities.

Tongue Point opened as a men's Job Corps center in February, 1965.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,570)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

650 Women Due At Center

776

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — Officials of the Job Corps announced today the conversion of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center from a training center for men to one that will ultimately house 650 women.

Confirming the switch, reported earlier by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., was Dr. Bennetta Washington, associate director of the women's Job Corps.

She read statements from Office of Economic Opportunity Director R. Sargent Shriver, Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, and William P. Kelly, acting head of the Job Corps.

The University of Oregon operates Tongue Point in conjunction with Philco Ford Corp. The center is near Astoria at the northwest tip of Oregon.

Flemming said it is hoped that 650 young women will be accommodated at the center by the end of fiscal 1967.

It will be the 16th women's Job Corps center in the nation, and the first in the Northwest. Dr. Wendell Van Loan is expected to continue as its head.

"In the recent session of Congress," said Shriver, "the Economic Opportunity Act was amended, providing that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women. After examining each of our 11 men's centers, Tongue Point was found to be best suited for a women's center."

Flemming said the 300 men in the automotive corps and the 200 in the appliance repair corps will be transferred to other centers, possibly by June.

About 70 men taking marine engineering will be transferred to the Breckenridge Job Corps Center at Morgan Field, Ky.

Kelly said that during February and the first half of March, there will be staff training and program development for the center's new role. He said there will be a minimum of changes in staff or facilities.

Tongue Point opened as a men's Job Corps center in February, 1965.

Daily Tidings
Ashland, Oregon
(Cir. D 3,881)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

[illegible] River slough.

ASTORIA (UPI) — The Tongue Point Job Corps staff will be reduced 30 to 35 per cent to meet needs of the new 650-trainee women's urban center to be established by June 30, officials said Tuesday.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,650)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

776

Male Trainees Slated for Transfer

Tongue Point to Become Girls' Job Center

Tongue Point Job Corps Center will be converted from a training school for boys and young men to a school for 800 girls and young women, the change to be completed by the end of June.

Formal announcement of the change will be made Thursday at 1 p.m. at Tongue Point theater by University of Oregon and Office of Economic Opportunity officials.

The female trainees will come from all over the United States. The approximately 500 male trainees still at the center will be distributed to other Job Corps centers over the United States. Preparation for these transfers has already begun.

The University of Oregon, prime contractor during the two years the center has operated as an urban center for boys, will continue to be prime contractor under the new program, reliable information obtained here indicates.

Philco May Continue

Philco Corporation, which has had the sub-contract for vocational and technical training, is expected also to continue as subcontractor, but this information could not be confirmed positively Wednesday.

Decision to make the change was not finally made by Office of Economic Opportunity until last week, although it has been under study for considerable time before that.

Announcement that the change is being considered was made Tuesday in Washington, D.C., by Sen. Wayne Morse after a briefing for the Oregon congressional delegation conducted by OEO.

A similar briefing was given Rep. Edith Green in Portland Wednesday morning by Dr. Wendell Van Loan, Tongue Point director, and Dr. Selma Lippeatt of the women's division of the Job Corps.

This brought immediate criticism from Mrs. Green who said she is not convinced that Tongue Point is a suitable location for a girl's Job Corps Center.

Wants Investigation

Mrs. Green told the Daily Astorian Wednesday she will demand, as soon as she returns to Washington in a few days, that there be an investigation of this change by an independent agency.

"If they can convince me this project has a reasonable chance of success, I will withdraw my objections," Mrs. Green told the Daily Astorian. She said she was skeptical that such a large girls' center was practical. Smaller ones seem to work much better, she said.

"I think it would have been better if Tongue Point had gone to the city of Astoria for development by local business men, as was planned a few years ago," Rep. Green declared.

OEO has indicated that the reason for the change at Tongue Point is to help get the ratio of girls to boys in the Job Corps up to 22 per cent, as required by a law which Mrs. Green had a hand in getting passed.

Suggests New Centers

"Congress has been concerned more than a year at the Job Corps' slow progress in setting up programs for girls," she said. "Last April there were 1,600 girls and 18,000 boys enrolled. Congress set a 22 per cent ratio for girls, out of a ceiling of 45,000 total enrollees, to be achieved by the end of this fiscal year.

"They are far short of this ceiling, and have not yet reached a 10,000 total," she added. "Rather than convert Tongue Point, they could establish new centers for girls."

Sen. Morse told the Daily Astorian by telephone Tuesday there would be "minimal displacement" of staff.

Out of a total of 450 staff people, however, about 50 are engaged in the work of eight group life cadres that supervise living conditions for the boys. These will obviously have to be replaced with women.

New Programs Planned

Also, it seems certain that some of the instructors in the electronics, automotive repair, boat repair and other training programs for boys will probably be replaced. It is understood that programs involving secretarial work, cosmetology, library work and similar skills primarily for women workers will be established.

Philco Corporation has experience in handling women's Job Corps training, as it is already prime contractor for a women's urban center in Guthrie, Okla.

Although no definite date has been announced, plans are believed to contemplate moving the male trainees out as quickly as possible, so the women can begin arriving in February, in hopes of reaching the planned 800 total by the end of June.

Dr. Van Loan was not available for comment this week. He was in Eugene Tuesday for conferences with University of Oregon officials, met with Mrs. Green in Portland Wednesday morning, and was to return to Eugene with Dr. Lippeatt for further conferences with university officials and Richard A. Jaffe, project manager for the men's urban centers of the Job Corps, Wednesday afternoon.

Formal Report Slated

Wednesday night Dr. Van Loan is to return to Tongue Point and is expected to address a meeting of the civic officials' advisory council for Tongue Point, to explain the pending changes.

The formal announcement will follow at 1 p.m. Thursday in the Tongue Point theater, for staff and trainee personnel. Here for the meeting will be Jaffe, Dr. Lippeatt, Dr. Ray Hawk of the university and Dr. Van Loan.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,340)

JAN 9 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Mt. Angel College Opens New Door to Tongue Point Student

Statesman News Service

MOUNT ANGEL — At Tongue Point Job Corps Center is a young man, 19 and with an IQ of 122.

He has been learning a vocation at Tongue Point because the administrators of the high school he attended thought he was unfit to continue a career of academic study, so he was expelled.

His sin was tardiness. Counselors in the Mount Angel College Upward Bound project suspect his being an indigent member of a minority race also had something to do with the administrators' decision. The boy is an American Indian.

Project director Gary Lansing said the boy will have a new chance to move on to a college education because he was accepted into the Mount Angel Upward Bound program.

The youngster will be one of 60, equally divided between young men and women, who Monday, Jan. 16, will begin the eight-month program.

Intellectual Capacity

The purpose of the project is to determine if young people, stopped from continuing their education by economic or social reasons, can become successful college students if they have the intellectual capacity.

The project will last for eight months. Those who complete the program will be able to study at college.

All the participants will have dropped out of school before graduation from high school. The first step here will be to qualify them for their high school diploma equivalency. Next, they will be enrolled in college preparatory classes, then will enter college-level courses when qualified.

Although residency in living quarters provided by the college will be required, not all students will be single persons.

Two Married Couples

One young woman, 22 years old, has four children whose father deserted his family. Care for the children will be arranged while she attends school. Two married couples have been accepted. One couple has a small child.

Last week, project counselors still were screening applicants, who will not be accepted if they have serious behavioral or emotional problems. Of 35 who were accepted, 10 were from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, 13 from the Portland Young Opportunity Center, three from the Timber Lake Job Corps Center at Estacada, three from MacLaren School for Boys, four from Hillcrest School for Girls and one each from the Clackamas County Juvenile Department and the Valley Migrant League.

From Migrant League

Lansing said more will be selected from the Migrant League. The project originally was proposed for the children of migrant workers who were to be helped by a college in a rural setting.

The Office of Economic Opportunity, however, broadened the program to include others.

The project is financed by a $80,000 OEO grant, partially matched by the college.

The single girls will be housed in a wing of Mount Angel Hall, a retirement center which is only partly occupied. The boys will live temporarily in Woodburn. They will be moved to the campus when a dormitory is finished in a few weeks.

The project's chief counselor, Jan Criqui, was in Los Angeles over the weekend interviewing applicants at a women's Job Corps center.

A special curriculum has been organized by teachers in the project. Temporary classrooms have been partitioned off in the basement of Marmion Hall, a regular girls' dormitory. Classrooms in college buildings also will be used.

Members of the college faculty will teach some subjects to Upward Bound students as they move into college preparatory and college-level study.

Enterprise-Courier
Oregon City, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,965)

JAN 5 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Conversion Set At Tongue Point

ASTORIA (UPI) — Plans to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, which now has about 500 young men, to a women's training center were formally announced today.

The announcement said that initially it was desired to have 650 young women in training at the end of the current fiscal year. The majority of the young men will be transferred to other centers.

Word of the shift was released late Tuesday in Washington, D.C., by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., after a briefing of the Oregon congressional delegation by officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO).

Tongue Point began operations as a Job Corps center in February of 1965. It is operated by the University of Oregon.

The joint announcement by Sargent Shriver, head of OEO, and Dr. Arthur Flemming, president of the university, was released here and in Washington, D.C.

Shriver said that at the recent session of Congress the Economic Opportunity Act was amended providing that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 320,605 - S 384,084)

JAN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Green To Request Study Of Job Corps Decision

U.S. Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., said Friday she will ask for the formation of a study group to determine impartially whether or not the Tongue Point Job Corps Center is suited for a program for young women trainees.

Mrs. Green said that calling for formation of the committee will be one of the first things on her agenda on her return to Washington, D.C., Saturday.

Office of Economic Opportunity and University of Oregon officials this week announced that the Tongue Point site, which has been operating as a young men's center since February, 1965, will be converted to a women's center, probably by this coming June.

Officials said the decision to convert the center resulted from a mandate from Congress that at least 23 per cent of all Job Corps training spots be filled by young women.

Officials said that after studying all men's training centers in the country, Tongue Point was deemed the best site for a program for women.

Reasons Asked

"If Tongue Point is such an ideal location, why wasn't it made one in the beginning? What is the reason they decided to make a switch at this time?" Mrs. Green said, adding that those are among the questions she hopes the committee's study will be able to answer.

She said the committee will be composed of individuals with background and training in working with disadvantaged young women.

University of Oregon and OEO officials said the center is planned to accommodate about 650 young women.

But that proposed population figure rankles Mrs. Green.

Expense Questioned

"The original task force committee that set up the program for girls stressed that centers should have no more than 300 girls. The committee felt it was necessary to keep the groups small so that a more effective training job could be done with them," Mrs. Green said.

Mrs. Green also argued that the expense involved in converting the center has not been determined.

"I don't think anybody really knows what it's going to cost," said Mrs. Green.

She said she inquired about the cost involved and OEO officials were not able to give her a figure.

Richard A. Jaffe, project manager for Job Corps men's centers, said at Tongue Point Thursday the cost would be "under $100,000," the majority of that money going for transportation expenses in moving youths to other centers and bringing the young women to Oregon.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)

JAN 6 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Center Change Now Official

Official confirmation came Thursday for plans to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria from a men's to a women's training center.

The announcement was made jointly by Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, in Washington, D.C., and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, which operates the center.

Flemming said the university hopes to have some 650 women in training at Tongue Point prior to July 1.

He said the majority of the 500 men now in training at the center will be transferred to other centers, near their homes, where they will be able to continue their education.

Some 70 men taking specialized marine engineering courses will be transferred to the Breckinridge Job Corps Center at Morganfield, Ky., where a similar course is offered.

William Kelly, acting Job Corps director, said that during February and the first half of March, staff will be trained and programs developed for the center's new role. He said a minimum of rehabilitation of the quarters will be required to accommodate women's training programs.

Bennetta Washington, director of women's centers, said the University of Oregon will submit its proposals for work skill training programs in the next week or two. She anticipates that many of the present educational, administrative and support services staff will continue to work at the center.

The conversion of Tongue Point to a women's center will give the Job Corps 16 women's centers. Several existing centers will be expanded and a contract for one more additional center expected to be awarded in the near future, according to Kelly. These moves, he said, will provide approximately 9,300 places for young women by July 1967.

Shriver said the decision to convert Tongue Point to a women's training center was prompted by an amendment to the Economic Opportunity Act requiring that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women.

"To meet this mandate, we've to convert one men's center for women," he said. "After examining each of our 11 men's centers, Tongue Point was found to be best suited."

Further, he said, the Tongue Point center will provide a facility in the Pacific Northwest, where there are currently no women's centers.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

JAN 5 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Clatsop's Mat Season Starts

Seven matches during the season, and tournament participation are booked for Clatsop college wrestlers, according to Indian mat Coach Al Anderson.

The first meet is scheduled Friday against Blue Mountain community college of Pendleton and takes place at 2 p.m. at the Astoria Armory.

Remainder of the schedule is as follows:

January 14, at Longview; January 20, at Tongue Point versus the Job Corps; January 27, Longview here.

February 3, SWOC, there; February 10, Blue Mountain, there; February 17, SWOC, here at 4 p.m.; February 24-25, tournament at Pendleton.

Columbia Press
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. W 2,000)

JAN 5 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Vic Kee photo

Mrs. Betty Workman serves punch to some of the 400 people who attended the steak dinner and entertainment Christmas party sponsored by the Astoria Community Relations Council at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center last Thursday Evening. Hostesses were: Mrs. Helmer Lindstrom, Mrs. Robert Neikes, Mrs. Maurice Hendrickson, Miss Quinn, Freda Cowling and Adelaine Sather.

The World
Coos Bay, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,830)

JAN 4 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Center To Be Converted For Women

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Plans are being made to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps training center near Astoria, Ore., to a facility for women, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore. said Tuesday.

About 500 young men are in training there now.

A statement by Morse said Office of Economic Opportunity officials briefed members of the Oregon Congressional delegation on the proposed change.

Those who attended the briefing included Morse, Rep. Wendall Wyatt, R - Ore.; Congressman-elect John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., of the discussion by telephone.

Recommendation for the change was made by the OEO and the president of the University of Oregon, Arthur S. Flemming. The university operates the Tongue Point Center.

The delegation was told that negotiations are being conducted in Oregon between the University of Oregon and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

It is expected that these negotiations, when formulated, will include plans for minimal displacement of the present staff, Morse said.

Daily Tidings
Ashland, Oregon
(Cir. D 3,881)

JAN 4 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Center Conversion Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Plans are being made to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps training center near Astoria, Ore., to a facility for women, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said Tuesday.

About 500 young men are in training there now.

A statement by Morse said Office of Economic Opportunity officials briefed members of the Oregon Congressional delegation on the proposed change.

Those who attended the briefing included Morse, Rep. Wendall Wyatt, R - Ore.; Congressmen-elect John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al wullman, D-Ore.

Morse advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., of the discussion by telephone.

Recommendation for the change was made by the OEO and the president of the University of Oregon, Arthur S. Flemming. The university operates the Tongue Point Center.

The delegation was told that negotiations are being conducted in Oregon between the University of Oregon and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

It is expected that these negotiations, when formulated, will include plans for minimal displacement of the present staff, Morse said.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,241)

JAN 4 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point To Be Women's Job Center

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegates and their representatives.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Also attending the meeting were Reps. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone.

The congressmen and delegates offered no objections to the change.

Olympia, Wash.
Olympian
(Cir. D. 15,536 - S. 15,848)

JAN 5 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point —Too Large?

PORTLAND (AP) — U.S. Representative Edith Green, D-Oregon, says the Tongue Point Job Corps Center may be too large for an all-women's facility.

The center near Astoria, which now has all men, is expected to be converted as early as next month.

Mrs. Green said in an interview on KOW-TV Wednesday that she wants Congress to authorize a study with the government or the University of Oregon on the use of the center.

She said the government has room nationally for 45,000 Job Corps men and women but has only 29,000 enlisted so far.

Mrs. Green said she would not object to the land being given to industry if that is found to be the best way to use it.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,340)

JAN 10 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Center May Train Women

The Tongue Point Job Corps Center soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegates and their representatives.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Also attending the meeting were Reps. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Wayne Nunn, administrative assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone.

The congressmen and delegates offered no objections to the change.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,340)

JAN 10 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

One-Third to Lose Jobs at Tongue Point

ASTORIA (AP) — The University of Oregon issued dismissal notices Monday to its 350 staff members at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Officials said, however, that about two-thirds of the staff would be re-employed in the new women's center in March.

The dismissal notices came one week after the federal government announced the center would be changed from a men's to a women's center.

San Francisco, Calif.
Examiner & News Call Bulletin
(Cir. D. 260,000)

JAN 5 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Move

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Office of Economic Opportunity announced today 650 women will move into the men's Job Corps center at Tongue Point, Ore., and 500 men now at the center will be transferred.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 168,201)

JAN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

BAKER'S DOZEN

North YMCA Will Open Second 'Coffee Center'

By DOUG BAKER

James Jones Willis, better known around Portland's nightspots as "Keith Berkley," was a three-time loser who spent time in various prisons for such things as mail and car theft. He was also a guy well-liked in some quarters who had been, among other things, a dancing instructor and club manager. Last January, shortly after his release from the federal penitentiary at McNeil Island, he figured prominently in the news following revelations in this column that he had been named "coordinating director for Oregon" of the Pearl Buck Foundation. On the heels of these disclosures, Willis was relieved of his duties with the charitable foundation, subsequently was permitted by federal probation officers to move to Miami, Fla. Not one to stay put for long, Willis was back in Portland about six weeks ago, also stayed for a time in New Orleans. Last Monday he was admitted to a hospital in Atlanta, Ga., with a massive blood clot on his brain. On Wednesday he died while in surgery. He was 31.

La Brinker A 'Star' In Vietnam

Onetime Portland model, chanteuse, comedienne and housewife Jan Brinker, who's been peregrinating about the Far East with her new comedian husband, made it big in Time magazine this week. Time described an enlisted men's club north of Saigon where "a striking blonde" created cheers, stomps and table-pounding. "Busty, freckle-faced Jan Brinker, 30," was described as singing "I've Got The Sun In The Morning" and making jokes with bashful soldiers. "Most people in the U.S. have never heard of Jan Brinker," reported the news magazine. "But in South Vietnam she is almost as famous as Doris Day." In her letters to Portland, Jan has mentioned the big money to be made on Vietnam's club circuit. The Time article confirms that the slot-machine-rich GI clubs in Vietnam are able to pay two to three times as much for entertainers as do clubs of the same stature in the U.S. . . . LBJ's complaints about the Peter Hurd portrait ("The ugliest thing I ever saw," said the President), coupled with increasing attacks on the administration's foreign and domestic policies for some reason or other, prompted Julius Zell, one of this town's better story tellers, to recall the plight of the little man on a train with a 3-year-old daughter and a baby boy who was crying. When a fellow passenger told the man he would "make trouble for him" if he didn't stop the baby from crying, the man replied: "My wife's body is in the baggage car and I'm taking her to Portland for burial; my oldest son is in Sing Sing prison; my little girl has just eaten my train ticket and the baby has wet my pants. How are you going to 'make trouble' for me?"

So, What Else Isn't So New?

Also making the rounds is the story about Congressman Adam Clayton Powell telling another congressman, "I'm just as honest as you are—you dirty crook!" . . . The Portland Silent Movie Club meets next on Jan. 17 at N. Greeley and Jessup when the 1923-vintage "Covered Wagon" with Warren Kerrigan, Lois Wilson and Alan Hale will be shown, along with a Laurel and Hardy film. There's a small charge. Information available from Mrs. H. Woekner, BUtler 1-7171 . . . The second Hi-Club Coffee Center (the term "coffeehouse" is taboo because of certain associations) sponsored by the North Portland branch of the YMCA will open its doors at 4 p.m., Jan. 13, for students of Jefferson, Benson and Girls Poly high schools. Located at 728 NE Killingsworth St., the new club was outfitted by Jefferson High manual training students, using materials furnished by North Portland merchants. To aid in the final decoration and outfitting of both the yet-unnamed coffee center on Killingsworth and the first such club, the "Would You Believe?" on NE Lombard Street, there'll be a "Talent A-Go-Go" night at the Oriental Theater on Friday, Jan. 20 featuring talent from such places as the Tongue Point Job Corps Center. TV star Bill Cosby has cut promotion spots for both radio and TV to help promote the benefit . . . On Monday, as on each Jan. 7 for the past 10 years, Oscar Funke will give the entire proceeds of his restaurant, Milton & Oscar's, 3720 NE Union Ave., to the American Cancer Society. Milton's Day, each year, raises something like $1000 for cancer research and commemorates the death of Oscar's 13-year-old son a decade ago.

Tacoma, Wash.
News-Tribune
(Circ. D. 38,811 - S. 84,838)

JAN 4 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Center To Change Sexes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegates and their representatives.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Also attending the meeting were Reps. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone.

The congressmen and delegates offered no objections to the change.

Daily Asforian, Astoria, Oregon (Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 2 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

...b Corpsmen ...elected for ...ollege Program

Ten Tongue Point Job Corpsmen, including the student body president, have been selected to participate in Mount Angel college's Upward Bound program beginning January 15.

They are Clarence (Al) Bryant of Smithers, W.V., student body president; Joel A. McElhannon of Sacramento, Calif., treasurer; Robert Schoppert, Juneau, Alaska; John Marsh, Salt Lake City, Utah, and Jack Fagwood, Fontana, Calif.

Harold McThay, Deerfield, Fla.; Kevin Terhune, Lincoln, Neb.; Joseph Burgerson, Marietta, Wash.; Charles Ray and Arec Jones, Cleveland, Ohio.

They are among 60 other 17th and 12th grade level young people from disadvantaged backgrounds who will participate in the eight-months resident program.

Basic goal of the project is to acquire a high school equivalency diploma, preparation for regular college work, participation in college-level courses and placement in college-work or similar programs where the student can support himself and complete his college education in a four-year school, vocational school or community college.

Daily Asforian, Astoria, Oregon (Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Will Become 16th Women's Center

Tongue Pt. Conversion Plan Formally Told

Announcement that the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will become a women's training center was made at 1 p.m. Thursday at Tongue Point theater by representatives of Office of Economic Opportunity.

The same announcement was made simultaneously in Washington, D. C., by Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The announcement came as no surprise. It has been fairly common knowledge in Astoria, the rest of the northwest and in Washington since late last week.

Announcement was made at a public meeting in the Tongue Point theater building by Richard Jaffe, assistant project manager of OEO for the Job Corps. Present also were University of Oregon officials.

A prepared news release announcing the conversion was distributed. It quoted Shriver and Dr. Arthur Flemming, U. of Oregon president, as making the announcement.

To Convert Center

"In the recent session of Congress, the Economic Opportunity Act was amended providing that 23 per cent of the Job Corps enrollment be young women," Shriver said. "To meet this mandate, we have to convert one men's center for women. After examining each of our 11 men's centers, Tongue Point was found to be best suited for a women's center.

"The Tongue Point Center will provide a facility in the Pacific northwest, where there are currently no women's centers. The living quarters at Tongue Point are well suited for housing young women.

"The University of Oregon, which operates the Tongue Point Center in conjunction with the Philco-Ford Corporation has been most cooperative in working out the plans for conversion," Shriver said.

Dr. Flemming is quoted as saying the University of Oregon, which pioneered in the operation of men's urban center at Tongue Point, will continue to devote its best efforts to the training for young women. Initially it is desired that 650 women be accommodated at Tongue Point prior to the end of the current fiscal year.

To Transfer Men

The majority of the 500 young men now in training at the center, which began operations in February, 1965, will be transferred to other centers near their homes where they will be able to continue the education and work skill training they are now receiving, the official statement said.

Approximately 70 young men are taking marine engineering and most of these will be transferred to the Breckinridge Job Corps Center at Morganfield, Ky., where a similar course is being given. Those in the group who are taking boat building will either be transferred or have the opportunity to accelerate their training.

The 300 young men in the automotive course and the approximately 200 in the appliance repair course will be transferred to other men's centers.

Acting Job Corps Director William P. Kelly said in the official announcement that during February and the first half of March there will be staff training and program development for the center's new role. He said there will be a minimum of rehabilitation of the facility to accommodate women's training programs.

16 Women's Centers

Dr. Bennetta B. Washington director of women's centers said the University of Oregon will propose work skill training programs to be given for Job Corps approval in the next week or two. She anticipates that many of the present education administrative and support services staff will continue to be utilized.

The conversion of Tongue Point to a women's center will give Job Corps 16 women's centers. A contract for an additional center is expected to be awarded in the near future. Several women's centers will also be expanded.

These moves, Kelly said, will provide approximately 9,300 spaces for young women by July 1, 1967.

Twelve women's centers now in operation are located in Albuquerque, N. M.; Charleston, W. Va.; Cleveland, O.; Clinton, Ia.; Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Guthrie, Okla.; Huntington, W. Va.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Marquette, Mich.; Omaha, Nebr.; Poland Spring, Me.; and St. Louis, Mo. Three other centers expected to open in March, are located in Drums, Pa.; Jersey City, N. J., and McKinney, Tex.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, Tongue Point director, said it is planned to move the 450 boys still enrolled here to other centers as fast as possible.

Will Graduate Many

"We will graduate as many as we can as fast as we can," he said. "Maybe 100 can complete their courses."

Policy will be to transfer boys to centers where comparable programs are offered and located as close to their homes as possible.

Much equipment will follow the boys to their new centers and many staff members will also go along.

"Every consideration will be given corpsmen and staff members to ease this transfer," Van Loan said.

The 300 boys who went home for Christmas will pack up their things and head for the new centers just as soon as they arrive, he said.

Dr. Van Loan warned that the Job Corps' plans for converting Tongue Point could be "shot down" in Congress, which convenes next week.

Rep. Edith Green, Portland, is leading for Washington, D.C., with a demand for an independent study which might support her argument that Tongue Point is an unsuitable place for a woman's Job Corps Center.

Dr. Van Loan said he believes it highly unlikely the center would be closed, however.

Said Excellent Facility

"We believe Tongue Point, in spite of its location, is an excellent facility and will continue to be used, either for men, for ... or possibly co-education-...

...ally," he said.

"Much needs to be done to make Tongue Point self-contained," Von Loan added. He listed a bowling alley, swimming pool, rink, lighted field, bigger library, music and art facilities and more imported entertainment as items that would make Tongue Point less dependent on the community for off-time recreation.

U. of Oregon's present contract to operate Tongue Point runs out next June 30, but is cancellable on 30 days' notice.

So far as is known here, the university will bid again as prime contractor after June 30, and Philco Corporation as subcontractor for vocational training.

Pressure Likely

Dr. Van Loan noted that congressional pressure on the White House in the next 10 days might change all plans. "It may be risky to say just what will happen in that period," he said.

The TPYDC director reviewed the two years of operation of the center, noting that 2,353 corpsmen had entered the institution, of whom 500 completed their training programs.

"This is 20 per cent," he said, "and 20 per cent is not bad when you consider that 94 per cent of the men we received were school dropouts; it is easy for them to continue in this pattern."

Van Loan predicted that the Job Corps center would be maintained regardless of politics, or who might be the contractor.

Among those scheduled to be present for the formal announcement this afternoon were Dr. Raymond Hawk, representing U. of Oregon; Dr. Selma Lepplatt of OEO's women's Job Corps Division and others.

Observer, LaGrande, Oregon (Cir. D. 3,660)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Center will be converted

WASHINGTON (UPI)— ... are being made to convert Tongue Point Job Corps train center near Astoria, Ore., a facility for women, Sen. Wa Morse, D-Ore., said Tuesday.

About 500 young men are training there now.

A statement by Morse s Office of Economic Opportun officials briefed members of t Oregon Congressional delegati on the proposed change.

Those who attended the bri ing included Morse, Rep. We dall Wyatt, R - Ore.; Congres man-elect John Dellenback, R Ore.; Warne Nunn, assistant Sen.- elect Mark Hatfield; an Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., of the discussion by telephone.

Recommendation for the change was made by the OEO and the president of the University of Oregon, Arthur S. Flemming. The university operates the Tongue Point Center.

The delegation was told that negotiations are being conducted in Oregon between the University of Oregon and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

It is expected that these negotiations, when formulated, will include plans for minimal displacement of the present staff, Morse said.

Gazette-Times, Corvallis, Oregon (Cir. D 9,570)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women Will Train At Astoria Center

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegation and their representatives.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Also attending the meeting were Reps. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield, R.-Ore.; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone.

The congressmen and delegates offered no objections to the change.

Mail Tribune, Medford, Oregon (Cir. D. 19,194)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point To Be Women's Post

ASTORIA (UPI) — Plans to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, which now has about 500 young men, to a women's training center were formally announced today.

The announcement said that initially it was desired to have 650 young women in training at the end of the current fiscal year. The majority of the young men will be transferred to other centers.

Word of the shift was released late Tuesday in Washington, D.C., by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., after a briefing of the Oregon congressional delegation by officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO).

Tongue Point began operations as a Job Corps center in February of 1965. It is operated by the University of Oregon.

The joint announcement by Sargent Shriver, head of OEO, and Dr. Arthur Flemming, president of the university, was released here and in Washington, D.C.

Shriver said that at the recent session of Congress the Economic Opportunity Act was amended, providing that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women.

Local citizens' advisory groups to the Tongue Point Job Corps Center were briefed Wednesday evening on changes in operation of the center to be announced Thursday afternoon. From left, Lynn Wykoff, community relations director at TPJC; Chairman D. O. Bergey of community relations council; mayor Harry Steinbock; center director Dr. Wendell Van Loan. About 50 citizens attended the meeting.

The Oregonian, Portland, Oregon (Cir. D 260,582 - S 394,984)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

350 Job Corps Staffers Fired At Tongue Point

Additional Details on Page 16

About 350 staff members of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria were informed Monday they had been dismissed — less than a week after the government announced plans to convert it from a men's to women's center.

The notices of dismissal ranged from 10 to 90 days.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, center director, said the dismissal notices were "perfectly normal" under regulations set forth by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The OEO made the change-over decision last week in order to meet a new Job Corps requirement that 23 per cent of its enrollment be young women. To meet this figure, it had to convert one of its 11 men's centers — and Tongue Point was selected because there are no women's centers in the Pacific Northwest.

Paul B. Jacobson, dean of the school of education at the University of Oregon at Eugene, the center, the new conversion program means the loss of jobs, most of which range from $8,000-$15,000 yearly in pay.

Director Out

One of these affected will be Dr. Wendell Van Loan, center director, who took over the center's top job last September. He previously had been a University of Oregon education professor and prior to that president of the Southwestern Oregon College in North Bend.

"I'm afraid I don't qualify to become Dean of Women now," Van Loan said. He indicated Monday he did not know who would head up the Astoria center after March.

Van Loan said everyone employed at the center "from the top on down" received notices of the contract cancellation and its effect on their present jobs.

In Eugene, Dr. Paul B. Jacobson, dean of the UO School of Education, said notices sent to Tongue Point staffers and employes carried three different dismissal "deadlines."

UO personnel received word giving some of them up to 90 days notice of job termination. However, this notice was mainly for permanent UO staffers; temporary staffers received much less severance time.

Hope Voiced

"We hope we can rehire as many as possible under the new conversion plan," said Jacobson. "But there will have to be some relocations, too."

Van Loan said that about 60 employes of the Ford-Philco corp. who were vocational education personnel at the center, received two weeks dismissal notices.

"Since Philco already has people working at the women's Job Corps center at Gutherie, Okla., we expect that many of these people also will be rehired," said Van Loan.

The Philco group has had a contract with the government similar to the UO agreement.

The majority of the Tongue Point employes are members of the State Civil Service System — and these persons received 10 days notice. They handle such jobs as bus driver, clerk, typist, food handler, janitor, etc.

Effort Pledged

Van Loan said that "every effort" will be made to rehire these persons who handle "housekeeping chores" at the center — and in order to protect their seniority, many will be granted temporary leave until the center reopens for women trainees.

Jacobson said the first women trainees would arrive in March, "probably about 100 late that month."

One hundred more would then arrive every two weeks after that until there is a full complement of 650 women at the center by June 30.

Most of the current 400 men trainees are expected to be transferred to other centers around the nation before the week was out.

They will go on chartered buses from Astoria to Portland for embarkation on commercial airliners to their new centers.

Remaining will be 10 trainees scheduled for transfer to Mt. Angel, Ore., to complete their high school education in an Upward Bound program there. Eighty one will remain at Tongue Point to complete their training courses and graduate by the end of January.

Twenty-five Corpsmen have been severed from the training program since the conversion announcement was made last week.

Change At Tongue Point Hard On Academic Staff

See Story on Page One Also

Cancellation of the government's contract with the University of Oregon for the operation of a men's Job Corps training center at Tongue Point will leave about 350 staff members "in limbo" for at least two months.

Many will be rehired under the university's new contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity when it reopens Tongue Point in two months as a women's training center.

Others will relocate with Job Corps men's centers around the nation. But for those in the academic end of Oregon Statesman, Salem, Oregon (Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,348)

JAN 6 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Shift Confirmed; Base To Train Women

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — The Women's Job Corps will move into Tongue Point, officials announced Thursday.

By the end of fiscal 1967 it is expected 650 women trainees will be in residence at the center now occupied by some 500 men.

The male trainees will be transferred to other centers, possibly by June.

Tongue Point will be the 16th women's Job Corps center in the nation and the first in the Northwest.

Daily Journal of Commerce, Portland, Oregon (Cir. D. 4,054)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Center Conversion Planned

(O. J. of C.—Jan. 5, 1967)

The Tongue Point Job Corps Training Center at Astoria will be converted from a men's training center to one for women, according to information provided to the Oregon congressional delegation by the office of Economic Opportunity.

The change was recommended by OEO and by the president of the University of Oregon, Arthur S. Flemming. The university operates the Tongue Point Center.

Daily Courier, Grants Pass, Oregon (Cir. D 9,638)
JAN 3 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point May Be Altered

ASTORIA (AP)—Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the Tongue Point Job Corps center, told staff members last week that persistent rumors pointed to the likelihood of a change at the center.

There was speculation this meant addition of female trainees. The Office of Economic Opportunity said today that some changes are under consideration, but these do not include the possibility of a coeducaitonal setup.

A spokesman at the center said that they know there is definitely going to be some kind of a change, and that an announcement will come from the center by the end of the week.

Bulletin, Bend, Oregon (Cir. D 7,823)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Plans told to convert Corps center

ASTORIA (UPI) — Plans to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, which now has about 500 young men, to a women's training center were formally announced today.

The announcement said that initially it was desired to have 650 young women in training at the end of the current fiscal year. The majority of the young men will be transferred to other centers.

Word of the shift was released late Tuesday in Washington, D.C., by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., after a briefing of the Oregon congressional delegation by officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO).

Tongue Point began operations as a Job Corps center in February of 1965. It is operated by the University of Oregon.

The joint announcement by Sargent Shriver, head of OEO, and Dr. Arthur Flemming, president of the university, was released here and in Washington, D.C.

Shriver said that at the recent session of Congress the Economic Opportunity Act was amended providing that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women.

"To meet this mandate, we have to convert one men's center for women," Shriver said. "After examining each of our 11 men's centers, Tongue Point was found to be the best suited for a women's center."

Shriver, who was in Washington, D.C., noted there were currently no women's centers in the Northwest and that living quarters at Tongue Point were well suited for housing young women.

Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., Wednesday said she had reservations about the conversion. She questioned if it was the best location and cited lack of recreational facilities. She said she planned to ask Congress to appoint a team of experts to make a study.

The announcement quoted Dr. Flemming as saying the university, which pioneered in operation of a men's center at Tongue Point, would continue to devote its best efforts to training of young women.

Signal, Seaside, Oregon (Cir. W. 2,360)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job corps center shift to women plans revealed

Plans to shift the Tongue Point job corps center from a training project for men to one for women were announced by the Office of Economic Opportunity at a meeting with members of the Oregon congressional delegation in Washington Tuesday. Further information on the change is expected to be released later this week.

The change is expected to mean the replacement of the about 500 young men at the center with a like number of young women. Little change in the staff of the center is expected, according to the first announcement. Officials at the center were not able to provide additional details.

President Arthur Flemming of the University of Oregon, which supervises the training program at the center, and the Office of Economic Opportunity were reported to have recommended the change. The university and OEO were said to be negotiating details.

Unofficial reports indicated that the change would mean termination of the contract with Philco for training at the center about five months ahead of schedule and rebuilding of the plant to accommodate women instead of men.

Mail Tribune, Medford, Oregon (Cir. D. 19,194)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Plan To Convert Corps Site Told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Plans are being made to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps training center near Astoria, Ore., to a facility for women, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said Tuesday.

About 500 young men are in training there now.

A statement by Morse said Office of Economic Opportunity officials briefed members of the Oregon Congressional delegation on the proposed change.

Those who attended the briefing included Morse, Rep. Wendall Wyatt, R-Ore.; Congressman-elect John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, assistant to Sen.- elect Mark Hatfield; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., of the discussion by telephone.

Recommendation for the change was made by the OEO and the president of the University of Oregon, Arthur S. Flemming. The university operates the Tongue Point Center.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Circ. D 240,582 - S 284,694)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,582 - S 284,694)
JAN 6 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees Call Change At Tongue Point Job Corps Site 'Cheap Deal'

By ROBERT OLMOS
Staff Writer, The Oregonian

ASTORIA (Special) — "It's crummy." "Lousy." "It's a cheap deal." "I'm used to moving around." "We don't like it."

Those were some of the reactions from trainees at the Tongue Point Job Center here Thursday on learning that they are to be moved from the center, which will be converted to a women's training center.

Announcement of the changeover was made officially at a meeting held in the center's gymnasium. Attending the session were Job Corps officials from Washington, D.C.; representatives from the University of Oregon, which operates the center, as well as center leaders.

The changeover had been rumored for about a month and was unofficially announced earlier this week through the office of Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore.

Job Corps officials told 350 center staff members (and a sprinkling of Astoria community residents) that the changeover is necessary to meet a Job Corps requirement that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women.

The percentage was provided in amendments made by Congress to the Economic Opportunity Act. In order to meet that mandate, the Office of Economic Opportunity decided to convert a men's center for women. After examining each of 11 men's urban centers in the country, the Tongue Point establishment was found to be best suited for a women's operation, Job Corps officials said.

The university will continue to operate the center. The majority of some 500 young men now in training in the center, which began operations in February, 1965, will be transferred to other locations where they will continue the education and work skill training they are now receiving, Job Corps officials said.

About 70 trainees are taking marine engineering and most of these will be transferred to the Breckinridge Job Corps Center at Morganfield, Ky., where a similar course is given, officials reported. The 300 trainees in the automotive course and the approximately 200 in the appliance repair course will be transferred to other men's centers.

Paul B. Jacobson, dean of the school of education at the University of Oregon and "father" of the university's Job Corps program, told staff members that "no one will be displaced."

"You are all employes of the University of Oregon," Jacobson said.

He added that "we will talk to those who wish to relocate."

The changeover is expected to be completed by June.

Richard A. Jaffe, project manager for Job Corps men's centers, said that he expected the conversion to be accomplished at a cost of "under $100,000."

The biggest cost to be incurred, he said, will be for transportation but he described that cost as "minimal, compared to what it would cost to build a new center" for women.

Machine shop equipment now being used at Tongue Point will be transferred to other men's centers, he said.

"We anticipate a no-loss rate where the equipment is concerned," he said.

There will be virtually no remodeling done in the conversion program, he said.

Asked if he felt the move would result in low morale among the trainees, Jaffe answered: "I don't think it will discourage them. Kids like to move. They like to go to new places."

But that was not the reaction among trainees questioned following the announcement session.

Al Bryant, 18, president of the Tongue Point Job Corps student body, was asked for reaction on the move.

About that same time, Dr. Selma F. Lippeatt, assistant to Dr. Bennetta Washington, associate director of Women's Job Corps, was passing by.

"Oh, I'm sure all the boys will be pleased after they hear the details we've given here today," Mrs. Lippeatt said.

Bryant smiled politely at Dr. Lippeatt.

The student body president, who hails from West Virginia, said later that the majority of between 200 to 250 youths now at the center (the rest have not returned from trips home for the holidays) don't want to move.

"It's hard to accept a thing like this," said articulate Bryant. "We've been moved from one environment to this, we've gotten used to it and now we're going to have to move again. I think it's going to discourage some of the guys and that they will drop out — particularly the boys who are getting ready to graduate."

One trainee said the changeover, which has been talk among the youths for weeks, resulted in his dropping out of Job Corps.

Richard Kenner, 16, of Portland, said he is leaving the Job Corps because of the change, which he feels will mean a move "away from my mother."

"My dad just passed away and I don't want to get too far away from my mother. I've been able to get regular week-end passes to see her but I wouldn't be able to do that if I was moved to a camp in California," he said.

"I think this is all a pretty cheap deal," said Kenner, "I feel they should have told us about it before."

Tom Petrovich, 18, of Fremont, Calif., who has been at the center for six months, said he thought the move would be "all right."

"But I'm used to moving around," Petrovich said. Born in Oneida, N.Y., Petrovich said his family has made some seven major moves around the country since he was born.

Jose Reyna, 20, of Mission, Tex., also said he would not mind the move if it would take him to Texas and closer to his home.

Charles Crepeau, 22, Great Falls, Mont., felt discouraged in making a move that means "we'll have to start all over again."

"I think what they're doing is lousy," Crepeau said, but added "I'm not going to drop out. I want to go on with my training."

Glendel Banks, 18, Norfolk, Va., said: "the change is okay as long as its a change for the better for Job Corps but the change affects me a great deal. I was told I could get a job with the (Job Corps) travel department but I think that's out now. I sure don't want to have to go back home."

"Ray Simon, 18, Lake Charles, La.: "How do I feel? There's nothing to feel. They're the ones who are making the decisions."

Ronald Ballew, 19, Lexington, Ky.: "I don't see why they waited this long to decide to turn this into a girl's center. I think they should have let it stay a boy's center."

A group of boys playing dominoes in one of the dormitory areas answered, one by one, as follows: "I refuse to go." "I don't want to move." "It'll be okay." "I have nothing against it." "I want to stay." "I just got here — I don't want to leave."

Many of the boys questioned felt discouraged because they have only recently begun to feel "at home" in Tongue Point and "just got to know the town and make friends."

"Why couldn't they let us finish our training in one place? You're just beginning to find yourself and then this happens," said Henry Lopez, 18, of Midland, Tex., "Sure, I feel bad about it."

About 650 young women between the ages of 16 to 21 will be accommodated at the center. Officials said that during February and the first half of March there will be staff training and program development for the center's new role.

Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., has voiced disapproval of the change, reportedly because she feels the center is too large to handle a program for young women and that it is too distant from Portland, the major recreation area used for Job Corps trainees.

Jaffe was asked about the concern expressed by Mrs. Green.

"I think (Sargent) Shriver (director of the Office of Economic Opportunity) will be able to demonstrate to Mrs. Green in coming months that it was a good decision," said Jaffe.

CHARLES CREPEAU

RONALD BALLEW

AL BRYANT

GLENDEL BANKS

JOB CORPS officials from Washington, D.C., Richard A. Jaffe (left) and Dr. Selma F. Lippeatt hold conversation with University of Oregon's Paul B. Jacobson, "father" of the university's Job Corps program, following meeting where it was announced Tongue Point Job Corps Center would become women's center.

MAJORITY OF about 350 persons attending Thursday session in Job Corps center gymnasium were members of center staff, Jacobson, shown at microphone, assured staff members "no one will be displaced." (Staff Photos by Pete Corvallis)

Capital Journal
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 24,212)
JAN 3 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

New Deal At Point

The piecemeal manner in which the switch in the function of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center has come to be known suggests that the decision was made in Washington, with a minimum of consultation with those in charge here. That has been a big weakness in the administration of Office of Economic Opportunity programs. It is perhaps one of the reasons that the Tongue Point training program for men has not been a success.

It is said that another Job Corps center for women is urgently needed on the Pacific Coast. There is only one thus far, at Los Angeles; and it has an enrollment of only 250 women. It will be remembered that the OEO at one time considered establishing such a center in Portland on the Rocky Butte site once occupied by Hill Military Academy.

It is also said that 1967 budget restrictions do not permit establishment of a new center. Redoing Tongue Point facilities to serve women rather than men is considered by federal officials to be a more economic project. But one cannot expect the automotive shops to be of much service to women, and it has not yet been determined precisely what vocational courses will be offered under the new setup.

Although officials do not say so, implicit in the announcement of the new arrangement is the admission that the training program for men that began at Tongue Point just two years ago has been a failure. Projected enrollment was 1,200, and it scarcely reached half that. Turnover has been heavy; and Rep. Edith Green has pointed out that the average cost of training per individual has been about $12,000, twice that originally forecast.

Mrs. Green has suggested that such trainees could be much better and more efficiently served in established state vocational schools. The same is probably true, also, for women. However, for the sake of the hundreds of women who may be assigned to Tongue Point, we hope the new program will enjoy better fortune than has that begun in January, 1965. It would help to leave some of the key decisions to the Oregon educators in

Capital Journal
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 24,212)
JAN 3 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corps Change Seen

ASTORIA (AP)—Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the Tongue Point Job Corps center, told staff members last week that persistent rumors pointed to the likelihood of a change at the center.

There was speculation this meant addition of female trainees. The Office of Economic Opportunity said today that some changes are under consideration, but these do not include the possibility of a coeducational setup.

A spokesman at the center said that they know there is definitely going to be some kind of a change, and that an announcement will come from the center by the end of the week.

In November, Van Loan said the center would become regional and that trainees would no longer come from the East and Southwest. Whether this will be the upcoming change is not known. Some months ago, there were reports that a women's section would be added, in part to give some social life to the trainees. This prompted the speculation on the nature of the expected announcement.

The center has received no new trainees for some time.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
JAN 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

650 Girls To Train At Job Corps Camp

ASTORIA (UPI) — Plans to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, which now has about 500 young men, to a women's training center were announced formally Thursday.

The announcement said that it had been planned to have 650 young women in training at the end of the current fiscal year. The majority of the young men will be transferred to other centers.

WORD OF the shift first was released late Tuesday in Washington, D.C., by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., after a briefing of the Oregon congressional delegation by officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Tongue Point began operations as a Job Corps center in February of 1965. It is operated by the University of Oregon.

The joint announcement by Sargent Shriver, head of OEO, and Dr. Arthur Flemming, president of the university, was released here and in Washington, D.C.

Shriver said that at the recent session of Congress the Economic Opportunity Act was amended to provide that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women.

"TO MEET this mandate we have to convert one men's center to a women's center," Shriver said. "After examining each of our 11 men's centers, Tongue Point was found to be the best suited for a women's center."

Shriver, who was in Washington, D.C., noted there are no women's centers in the Northwest and that living quarters at Tongue Point are well suited for housing young women.

Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., said Wednesday that she has reservations about the conversion. She questioned whether it is the best location and cited lack of recreational facilities. She said she plans to ask Congress to appoint a team of experts to make a study.

IN ASTORIA, Mayor Harry Steinbock said he welcomes the changeover from a boys' to a girls' training center.

"We'll certainly have different problems with girls," he said, "but I don't think we will have as many."

Steinbock, who operates an Astoria drug store, said that the girls generally have a better educational background and fewer tend to drop out of school.

"And, I think the girls will be better behaved," he said.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,582 - S 284,694)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Coed Rumor Brings Denial

ASTORIA (AP) — Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the Tongue Point Job Corps center, told staff members last week that persistent rumors pointed to the likelihood of a change at the center.

There was speculation this meant addition of female trainees. The Office of Economic Opportunity said Tuesday that some changes are under consideration, but these do not include the possibility of a coeducational setup.

A spokesman at the center said that they know there is definitely going to be some kind of a change, and that an announcement will come from the center by the end of the week.

Shift Outlined

In November, Van Loan said the center would become regional and that trainees would no longer come from the East and Southwest. Whether this will be the upcoming change is not known. Some months ago, there were reports that a women's section would be added, in part to give some social life to the trainees. This prompted the speculation on the nature of the expected announcement.

The center has received no new trainees for some time.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,241)
JAN 3 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Center Changes Seen

ASTORIA (AP) — Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the Tongue Point Job Corps center, told staff members last week that persistent rumors pointed to the likelihood of a change at the center.

There was speculation this meant addition of female trainees. The Office of Economic Opportunity said today that some changes are under consideration, but these do not include the possibility of a coeducational setup.

A spokesman at the center said that they know there is definitely going to be some kind of a change, and that an announcement will come from the center by the end of the week.

In November, Van Loan said the center would become regional and that trainees would no longer come from the East and Southwest. Whether this will be the upcoming change is not known. Some months ago, there were reports that a women's section would be added, in part to give some social life to the trainees. This prompted the speculation on the nature of the expected announcement.

The center has received no new trainees for some time.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,498 - S 32,348)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Upward Bound Choice's Near At Mt. Angel

Statesman News Service

MOUNT ANGEL — Process of selecting students for the Upward Bound program at Mount Angel College is nearing completion, Assistant Director Lane Williams reported here Tuesday.

About half of the 60 total have been screened and selected from some 120 to 150 referrals, Williams said. These include boys from the Job Corps Center at Tongue Point and the centers for Girls at Los Angeles and Guthrie, Okla.

The 8½-month education program will get under way here Jan. 16 with a goal of bringing the youths through a high school educational level and preparing some for college studies.

Williams said it appeared the group would be about evenly divided between boys and girls. The girls will be housed in Mount Angel Towers. Boys will be housed in the dormitories now under construction. Temporary housing is being planned until the dormitory space is available.

Capital Journal
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 24,212)
JAN 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Center To Switch Sexes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria soon will train women instead of men.

Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Plans were outlined Tuesday for the switch to Oregon's congressional delegates and their representatives.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said the change was recommended by the OEO and Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon.

Also attending the meeting were Reps. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., and John Dellenback, R-Ore.; Warne Nunn, administrative assistant to Sen.-elect Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; and Ron Ahern, administrative assistant to Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.

Morse said he advised Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., by telephone.

The congressmen and delegates offered no objections to the change.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
D 31,429 - S 32,348
JAN 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Mrs. Green Critical Of Job Corps Switch

By YVONNE FRANKLIN
Statesman Correspondent

WASHINGTON (Special) — Rep. Edith Green suspects that Office of Economic Opportunity officials were trying to soften her criticisms of Job Corps operations in making their decision to convert the Tongue Point camp for boys into a training center for girls —but it won't work.

Yvonne Franklin

She said in an interview this week that she intends to ask for an "independent study" by experts trained in working with disadvantaged girls to see whether Tongue Point is a good site.

Mrs. Green and Rep. Wendell Wyatt characterized the move as "wasteful of taxpayers' money." Wyatt represents the Astoria area where the center is located.

Mrs. Green has been critical of the costs of operating the Job Corps urban centers and also critical of the fact that more girls were not being helped. Congress last year wrote into the law that 23 pct. of the total enrollees must be women.

"In view of the criticism, it (the conversion) impresses me as too clever by half," she said " . . . there has been criticism of the waste in the program, and yet they take one of the most costly sites in the country with a capacity of 1200 with the intention of using it for 600 girls . . .

"If the intention is to keep me from criticizing, I would have to say this is why I am asking for the study to find out if it is a good site. And if they are going to bus kids from East to West I will continue to be critical."

The changeover was announced last week and the reasons given for the move by OEO officials were: There was no women's job corps in the Northwest; that Congress had told them to increase the percentage of girls; and that the changeover would not be costly.

Fifty girls are expected by late March and 600 by June. Boys are presently being transported to other training camps.

Mrs. Green said that a member of her staff returned by plane from Portland last week along with 20 boys from Tongue Point who were being flown to a center in Kentucky.

She has criticized this practice and the law was changed last year to require that trainees be recruited from areas near the camps to eliminate cross-country "busing."

She noted that "the original task force had said that the centers for girls should be no larger than 300 to 350." Why, then, she asked was it necessary to choose a camp with a capacity for 1200?

She thought Astoria too far away for on-the-job training for girls. She pointed out that the boys were taken into Portland and Seattle for recreation; would this be done for girls? She also questioned the expense of changing over the equipment used for training boys in automotive and appliance repair and the like.

An OEO official said the decision had not been reached about what to do with equipment. He said perhaps some of it could be kept at the camp and used to train the girls. He suggested that they could learn to repair appliances and learn to paint cars as well as boys.

Wyatt said he had been told about the changeover after the decision had been made, but that he would be "patient for a few months" to see how it works. Mrs. Green was told about it last month and objected at that time.

Wyatt said he had been given a figure of $100,000 as the possible cost of conversion. An OEO official said it would be "nominal."

"My reaction to the changeover is that there is a terrific waste of taxpayers money involved here," Wyatt said. "They set this up on a cash basis originally and then completely change directions by 180 degrees with completely different vocational training involved. I don't like the disruption for the trainees nor the disruption of the staff."

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 340,856)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Director Stays Until Ordered Out

"The captain stays on the bridge until the water floats his hat," said Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan Wednesday in describing his current duties as director at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon recently announced the center will be converted from a young men's to a young women's training site.

Dr. Van Loan is on leave from the university's School of Education, having taken over duties at the Job Corps site last Sept. 27. Douglas Olds, who directed the center since it began operation in February, 1967, until that time is on the staff of the School of Education.

Dr. Van Loan told The Oregonian that he did not know when he will leave his job as director to return to university faculty duties.

"It may be tomorrow or it may be six months from now. I will leave when the president (Arthur Flemming, university president) says I may," said Dr. Van Loan.

Flemming said Wednesday no decision had been made on when Van Loan will return to the university faculty.

W. L. VAN LOAN

Flemming said "various persons" are being considered for new director of the women's center, which will have an enrollment of 650.

Asked if the director will be a woman, Flemming said "it might or might not be."

A committee headed by Dr. Harold McAbee of the Tongue Point staff and Dr. Harold Abel of the university is working out a recommended curriculum under a new program for women.

Flemming said only two of the country's 12 centers for girls have women as directors.

Clatskanie Chief
Clatskanie, Oregon
(Circ. W 1,655)
JAN 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Employee Status at Tongue Point Explained

Approximately 300 staff members will be required to operate Tongue Point Job Corps Center, speculate Job Corps administrators who are working on a new proposal for training women at the center. Of the estimated 300 staff members, the majority will be personnel already on the payroll. At present, 417 are employees of the Job Corps Center.

As a matter of normal procedure, all of the 142 University of Oregon academic employees will receive notices of termination this week, according to Dr. W. L. Van Loan, center director. This is automatic upon termination of the University's contract to operate a men's Job Corps center. However, academic staff members will be notified by Jan. 20 if they're to be rehired under a new contract for women.

Academic personnel receive 90 days notice, so those rehired to work under the new program will not lose a days pay, despite the transition period all are expected to work during the 90 days). Those not rehired will also receive 90-days notice and be given assistance in securing new jobs through the U. of O. Placement Bureau.

In addition, representatives from several men's urban Job Corps centers have been on campus, conducting interviews with those interested in acquiring positions at other centers.

Requests for personnel also have been coming from school districts and vocational schools as far as Edmonton, Canada.

Also to be affected by the changeover to a women's center will be 222 classified Civil Service personnel and 55 employees of Philco-Ford. But officials emphasized there will not be a general Civil Service layoff. No classified Civil Service staff member will be given a 15-day notice until it is clearly established that his employment isn't needed.

Civil Service personnel who will be re-employed will receive a notice of layoff, and if work at the earliest possible date, both in accordance with Civil Service rules.

Philco-Ford employees have not received notices of termination. Whenever possible, these employees are given two week's notice, an official said. It's anticipated that many of the vocational instructors not needed under a new contract, will be transferred to other Philco-Ford operations in the the world.

Vocational training is continuing, with fewer than 81 Corpsmen working to complete their vocational training by Jan. 20. On that date the last corpsman will leave the Center.

The other Corpsmen left early last week for other urban centers where they will complete their training.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
JAN 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Vocational Training Lagging, Experts Say

By MILES GREEN
Journal Education Editor

EUGENE — New types of institutions and new programs are needed to provide high school - age students with vocational education which will be of real value to them, Oregon secondary school principals were told here Friday.

Both Paul B. Jacobson, dean of the school of education at the University of Oregon, and J. Chester Swanson, professor of education at the University of California at Berkeley, stressed the need for a different and improved kind of vocational education, instead of "more of the same."

THEY SPOKE to about 300 participants in the annual winter conference of the Oregon Association of Secondary Principals meeting in Erb Memorial Union on the UO campus.

Jacobson called for development of "semiresidential" schools which would provide meals, supervision and counseling, and vocational training for young people — mostly high school dropouts — who would attend from early in the morning until late at night.

This kind of school is needed in addition to vocational education programs within the high schools and residential Job Corps centers, such as Tongue Point, operated by the university, he added.

HE ESTIMATED it would cost $3,000 per student per year to operate a semiresidential vocational school, but he maintained that it would be worth it to make it possible for dropouts to get and hold jobs.

Experience at Tongue Point has shown that most high school dropouts can be trained for jobs, "but not in the traditional education program," he added.

Swanson told the principals that most high school vocational education programs have been ineffective because they have been viewed as a "dumping ground" for students who couldn't be handled otherwise.

"NO PERSON should be placed in a vocational education program unless he has the motivation and ability to succeed in it," he said.

Swanson said studies have shown that high school vocational education works when it is done well. He estimated that between 75 and 80 per cent of students in good vocational programs are able to get and hold jobs in the area in which they are trained.

The principals installed Don James of Portland's Roosevelt High School as their president for 1967-68.

Other officers elected at the meeting are Earl Hampton of Judson Junior High School in Salem, vice president and president - elect for 1968-69; Marve Rasmussen, principal of Portland's Polytechnic High School, and Elden King, principal of Mapleton High School, members of the executive committee.

News-Review
Roseburg, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,200)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Reduction Set At Job Camp

ASTORIA (UPI)—The Tongue Point Job Corps staff will be reduced 20 to 25 per cent to meet needs of the new 650-trainee women's urban center to be established by June 30, officials said Tuesday.

This will be a reduction of about 140 people, mostly in the fields of physical education, vocational training and group life supervision.

Most of the staff personnel will be offered new contracts under the women's center program.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, center director, said there apparently will be no difficulty in finding new jobs for staff members who are not re-employed. He said requests for people are coming from school districts and vocational schools are as far away as Edmonton, Alta.

A woman director is being sought for the center. Dr. Van Loan said he probably will return to University of Oregon.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 40,812 - S 48,290)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

U of O, Union Sign Second Pact

A collective bargaining agreement with the Building and Trades Construction Employees of Tongue Point was signed Monday by University of Oregon President Arthur S. Flemming.

The agreement recognizes the Tongue Point Building and Trades Construction Employes as a union with bargaining rights as established by the Oregon Legislature.

The Tongue Point unit is the second public employees' group in Oregon to negotiate and reach a bargaining agreement. The Food Service Employees of Tongue Point concluded the first such agreement last month with the University of Oregon.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 340,856)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

UO Accepts Employe Pact

The University of Oregon has concluded an agreement with building and trades construction employes of Tongue Point — the second public employees' group in Oregon to negotiate such a pact.

The agreement recognizes the Tongue Point Building and Trades Construction Employes as a union with bargaining rights established by the Oregon Legislature.

The Tongue Point workers are officially represented by the Clatsop-Tillamook Building and Construction Trades Council. Earlier, the food service employes at Tongue Point concluded an agreement with UO.

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,136)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Exodus under way at Tongue Point

ASTORIA (AP)— An exodus of people is under way at Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria.

Most are the 500 male trainees who are being shifted to other centers to make room for the 650 young women that the Office of Economic Opportunity says will be training at the center by June 30.

Some are among the 350 staff members handed their dismissal notices Monday. Most, however, will be re-hired when the women's center opens in March.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said Tuesday he will return to the University of Oregon where he is a faculty member. He said a woman director is being sought.

The university operates the center with the Philco Ford Corp.

Stubborn President Stands Alone

With his back to the political wall, heedless of the meaning of the 1966 election returns, President Lyndon B. Johnson doggedly proposed in his State of the Union message that Congress and the American people continue the headlong plunge into fiscal chaos.

While repetitiously pleading for America to meet its responsibilities to its underprivileged, the world's underprivileged, and the war against Communist aggression, the President utterly failed to meet his own responsibility.

He did not suggest a single reduction in costly federal domestic programs, some of which have failed, others notorious for waste and inefficiency and political padding. Instead, he asked for at least a $300 million increase—to start—in antipoverty programs, including 90 per cent federal contributions to local crime-fighting.

He did not even mention the expenditure of billions of dollars for space exploration and the obsolescent agricultural subsidies program. But he called for vastly increased outlays to relieve municipal slum, delinquency and crime problems and to preserve and beautify the countryside.

He asked for a 6 per cent surtax on individual income and business taxpayers to increase federal revenues by $4.5 billion in the fiscal year starting July 1. But he conceded a deficit in the administrative budget this July 1 of $9.7 billion and an expected deficit July 1, 1968, despite the tax increase, of $8.1 billion.

Is this responsibility? The President says we can afford it, as do such Democratic-liberal economists as Walter Heller, who base their opinions on the dollar increases in personal and corporate earnings rather than on the declining value of the dollar in purchasing power brought about by profligate spending and consequent inflation.

It seems the President is uncertain of his grounds. If the nation can afford all these Great Society experiments while fighting an astronomically costly war in Southeast Asia, why not a tax increase large enough to pay the bills? Obviously, Mr. Johnson is not sure that the part-way tax increase he asks—a surtax he says should remain in effect as long as the war continues—will not depress the economy and federal revenues as well. Certainly he should know that the budget cannot be balanced without drastic reductions in domestic expenditures. He is not even going to try.

Some parts of the President's program — the most detailed in memory, but not yet supported by the facts and figures to be supplied by later messages — will be generally accepted as necessary and beneficial. Many others will not.

Some liberals instantly responded by terming his message "bland" and uninspiring — meaning that he did not propose enough spending to create Utopia overnight. Some conservatives say the fiscal irresponsibility is scandalous and a threat to the nation's economic underpinnings. Civil rights workers complain that he did not put enough emphasis on progress in that field. Organized labor was shocked that he did not again pledge his efforts to repeal of Sec. 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act which permits states to adopt laws forbidding compulsory union membership contracts. The proposal to combine the Labor and Commerce departments—as was the case originally — will get little support from either labor or business. And so it goes.

In summary, President Johnson bullheaded demanded more of the same —spending more than the government gets each year in tax revenues to finance Great White Father programs at home and abroad while trying to pay the accelerating costs of a war against communism in Vietnam. We believe the people would willingly pay higher taxes to support our troops overseas, but not if the President insists on simultaneously maintaining and expanding programs like the Job Corps installation at Tongue Point where $12,000 is spent for inadequate education and training of each boy from the slums.

Will Congress be more responsible than the President? Our guess is that Congress, which has heard the voters' voice, will trim the budget, but not enough; that it will increase taxes, but not enough to balance the ledger. Fiscal responsibility is not likely to become national policy again until there are many more new faces in Congress and a man of greater integrity in the White House.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,812 - S 40,290)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

350 in Limbo

As the Tongue Point Job Corps center undergoes a change from a boys' center to one for girls, some staff changes are inevitable and understandable. But the way they are being made does not encourage good people to lend their talents to Job Corps programs.

For the better part of the next two months some 350 staff members will be in limbo, not knowing if they have jobs at Tongue Point, Job Corps jobs elsewhere, or any jobs at all. That many were given notices of dismissal this week, with notices effective in from 10 to 90 days. Some, Job Corps officials said, will be retained. But which ones?

Those who have families, even those who like to eat themselves, may start casting about now for new jobs—just in case. And their experience will not encourage others to take their places.

Permanent University of Oregon faculty members will have university jobs of some kind. But where? Those whose only connection with the university has been at Tongue Point may not be even that sure.

Good employes deserve time to plan —to plan to stay, to plan to move or to plan to look for other work. The majority of these employes are able people with skills that are sorely needed many places. They'll have no trouble getting new jobs. But one wonders how many of them will opt again to work for the Job Corps.

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oregon
(Cir. D 19,194)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Staff Reduction Scheduled

ASTORIA (UPI)—The Tongue Point Job Corps staff will be reduced 20 to 25 per cent to meet needs of the new 650-trainee women's urban center to be established by June 30, officials said Tuesday.

This will be a reduction of about 140 people, mostly in the fields of physical education, vocational training and group life supervision.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,590)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Review Committee to Draft Women's Corps Curriculum

University of Oregon has set up a review committee to prepare recommendations for a curriculum for women Job Corps trainees who are to be moved into Tongue Point starting in March.

Co-chairmen of the committee are Dr. Harold McAbee, No. 2 man at the Tongue Point Center, and Dr. Harold Abel, University of Oregon.

Among possible subjects that may be recommended for inclusion in the curriculum are drama, art, music, homemaking, citizenship training, recreation, health, driver education, mathematics, culinary skills, clerical and stenographic, social service activities, electronic assembly and others.

The center was empty of corpsmen, except for 81 who will remain to complete their courses by end of next week, and a few straggling back from holidays who are being transferred to others centers as soon as they pack.

Job Interviews Continue

Representatives of other Job Corps centers and school districts continued to interview staff members for possible new jobs. A University of Oregon placement official is due Thursday to help displaced staff members relocate.

Astoria chamber of commerce directors Wednesday morning approved a statement to be sent to Office of Economic Opportunity saying that the Job Corps is of substantial economic benefit to the community, that it is being run efficiently and cooperatively by University of Oregon, and urging maintenance of a Job Corps installation at Tongue Point, with the University of Oregon or any other equally competent contractor. The statement also requests that some advance warning be given if there is any intent to close the center or make any other major change.

May Hurt School District

Roy Seeborg, Astoria city school superintendent, said that a staff reduction at Tongue Point could hurt the school district financially by reducing revenues from the federal government for education of children of Tongue Point families.

Seeborg said there are 300 children of Tongue Point staff families in the system, that the teaching staff and equipment and supply purchases were set up with a view to keeping this number through the year.

He said federal aid is based on average daily attendance, and that it is estimated at $90,-000 for the current fiscal year. A substantial staff change that reduces daily attendance of Tongue Point children for the second half of the school year could cost the district several thousand dollars, he said.

Seeborg deplored the drastic change in Tongue Point operation being made with no warning to the community.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 340,856)
JAN 15 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Delay Felt By Teachers

ASTORIA (AP) — Academic staff members at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will know Jan. 20 whether they will be out of a job.

That is the date the center will notify those who are to be retained when the operation shifts to training young women.

The last of the young men leaves on that date.

Dr. W. L. Van Loan, center director, said in a statement Saturday that a total staff of about 300 would be required. The staff now totals 417 with 142 of them academic employes of the University of Oregon. The others are civil service employes of vocational training leaders employed by Philco-Ford.

Dr. Van Loan said academic employes will get 90 days notice of termination. It is expected that most of these not retained will be able to get teaching jobs elsewhere. He said requests for personnel have come from as far as Edmonton, Canada. The Philco-Ford workers are expected to be transferred to other jobs with the corporation.

Columbia Press
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. W 2,000)

JAN 12 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

"It is doubtful if the Office of Economic Opportunity will continue the mechanics courses for the girls, Sneedsby!"

NO "PHASE OUT" PLANS BEHIND JOB CORPS CHANGE

Center Switches Sex Like Oyster Bed

The Tongue Point Job Corps Center is living up to its reputation as an experiment in educati on. It is now undertaking to change over from a school for young men to a school for young women. By April 5, the last of the 2353 young men who were enrolled at Tongue Point since the center was established will be gone , 500 of them with diplomas.

When word first came out about the impending change from Washington, D.C., there was concern that the federal establishment here was to be "phased out" in a novel way. These suspicions were understandable after local people had seen not only the U.S. Navy "phase out" the Tongue Point base but also the U.S. Maritime Administration get ready to "phase out" the mooring basin.

It was natural that Astorians assumed something new in "phasing out" had been developed for slipping the Job Corps out of Tongue Point.

It is definite now, however that the Job Corps will hold out in the local center even though Congresswoman Edith Green remains unhappy about its eqiuational costs. They were boosted by the junking of the male educational program.

The Job Corps girls will not be taking courses in automotive repair, boat building and marine repairs, outdoor motor repairs, appliance repairs and welding. Some of the educational equipment for these abandoned courses will be moved to other male centers, but obviously the cost of transportation is high. The new courses may include those for instruction in child and general health care, recreation direction, cosmetics, medical assistance and others.

There will be other losses involved in the changeover from instructing young men to instructing young women. Much of the extensive public relations work for creating and understanding and good will between the center and the community will have to be worked over to fit the change in sex.

At first the local public hesitated to believe the story put out by the Office of Economic Opportunity that the change was necessary to comply with the amendment of the Job Corps legislation by Congress in June. It specified that 23 percent of Job Corps enrollees must be women. The Office of Economic Opportunity explained that the Tongue Point center was most easily converted for use of the woman enrollees and that its changeover would give the Pacific coast a women's center.

Because no fantastic explanation developed for the fantastic change, Astorians accepted the change in sex of the center as tourists do oysters changing sex in Willapa Bay. It doesn't sound sensible, but it is so.

If the Office of Economic Opportunity had settled for a half way measure and ordered women enrollees to make Tongue Point co-educational, it would have removed the most serious complaint against the establishment. Its many male enrolees haven't enjoyed full social life because nothing in the community outside the center adequately could make up for Tongue Point having no young women.

Sunday night the first bus load of 24 trainees left for Breckenridge Job Corps Center, Kentucky. Small boat repair training is offered there.

Monday departures sisters were 15 for Kilmer JCC, N.J. and 31 for Gary JCC, Texas in the morning, and in the evening 2 departures for Atterbury JCC, Indiana and Breckenridge, JCC, Ken.

Tuesday departure schedule included arrival at Parks JCC, California, Custer JCC Mich., Clearfield JCC, Utah; and McCoy JCC, Wis.

Since the announcement last week 25 Corpsmen have left to go home and some to jobs. A group of 10 will go to Mt. Angel, Oregon on the Upward Bound program and will continue their high school studies toward their diplomas.

The remaining will be graduating from their courses at Tongue Point by the end of January and are staying to continue their studies.

There were 570 trainees on base when the order came

Perhaps the next change will be for a co-educational institution. Anything can now be expected to happen at Tongue Point.

All employees under the original Job Corps setup here apparently are receiving termination notices, but many are expected to be re-hired under the new setup. Some personnel, including security, will be considerably reduced.

Woodland, Wash.
Lewis River News
(Cir. W. 1,360)

JAN 12 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point trip ok'd by directors

A field trip to Tongue Point and a Saturday morning recreation program were given approval Monday night by the Woodland School Board of Directors.

The field trip is to be taken by boys from Dan Kilty's and Mrs. Louis Van Brenk's remedial classes next week Jan. 17. They will tour the living facilities of the Job Corps training center and also be introduced to the many skills being taught. A similar tour for the girls of the remedial classes may be worked out after the change underway is complete to make Tongue Point a girls' training center.

In making the request, Kilty said the object of the tour would be to give his students some idea of the training available beyond high school through federal programs.

Terry Gatz will oversee a two-hour recreation program each Saturday morning for any fifth or sixth grade boy interested in learning basketball fundamentals. The program will begin this Saturday. Last year between 20 and 30 youth availed themselves of the opportunity each week when the gym was kept open for several weeks during the winter months.

Board members authorized calling a special election Mar. 7, asking voters to pass a special levy for general operating funds to be collected in 1968. The levy failed at the November election, lacking the necessary 60 percent margin, although the "yes" votes were in the plurality.

On Mar. 8 the levy request will be for 8 mills. Recognizing the need to educate the public to the need for the levy, board members discussed various ways of getting the message across. Suggested were coffee klatches and the cooperation of the PTA and other organiza-

In further business the Board set Feb. 6 for the next meeting date and heard English instructor Richard Cook outline the curriculum for the juniors and seniors (see story elsewhere). The Directors also agreed to cooperate with other schools in Cowlitz and Wahkiakum counties on an in-service training program being sought for the teachers. The training would be financed by federal funds which have already been allocated. Each school would be asked to provide a substitute for the teacher undergoing instruction during school time. In the past such training programs have been accomplished after-school hours or on Saturday.

It was also agreed the school district would continue its present policy of not charging a fee for sending transcripts of high school grades for graduating seniors to any college. However in the future a fee of $1 will be charged for all post-graduate transcripts requested.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,890)

JAN 11 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Ruthless Uncle Sam

Once again this community is having a lesson in the uncertainty of federal payrolls. The axe fell on the men's urban Job Corps center at Tongue Point suddenly, with no advance warning.

A smaller establishment to train women is being substituted, with 30 to 35 per cent payroll reduction, with no consultation with this community.

We have learned before, from the fate of the Tongue Point naval station and the attempt to eliminate the already-slashed Maritime Administration base, how ruthless the US government can be in cutting off at the pockets a community which depends greatly on a federal payroll for its economic well-being.

One of the factors in putting the Job Corps here in the first place two years ago was to aid an economically distressed community. We were at that time on the Economic Development administration's list of depressed areas, which needed federal help. Now, partly due to the new Job Corps payroll, we are off that list.

But, if the Job Corps were to be removed completely, we could get back on the list again.

The community made a big effort to adjust to the men's Job Corps center and was doing so successfully. Relations had greatly improved, and were perhaps better than are enjoyed by most of the urban men's Job Corps centers.

Now suddenly the center is wiped out and a new project started, evidently for political reasons. The new project is already under political attack.

It might be well for the community's leadership to let the Office of Economic Opportunity in Washington know that this meat-axe treatment of the Tongue Point center made a poor impression, that it was poor reward for the successful effort made here to welcome the Job Corps, and that elimination of the new women's program would be a hard blow to the area.

Benton County Herald
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. W 3,852)

JAN 12 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

May Have 650 Women At Center

Officials of the Job Corps announced the conversion of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center from a training center for men to one that will ultimately house 650 women.

Confirming the switch, reported earlier by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., was Dr. Benjamin Washington, associate director of the women's Job Corps.

She read statements from the Office of Economic Opportunity Director R. Sargent Shriver, Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, and William P. Kelly, acting head of the Job Corps.

The University of Oregon operates Tongue Point in conjunction with Philco Ford Corp. The center is near Astoria at the northwest tip of Oregon.

Flemming said it is hoped at 650 young women will be accommodated at the center by the end of fiscal 1967.

It will be the 16th women's Job Corps center in the nation, and the first in the Northwest. Dr. Wendell Van Loan is expected to continue as its head.

"In the recent session of Congress," said Shriver, "the Economic Opportunity Act was amended, providing that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollment be young women. After examining each of our 11 men's centers, Tongue Point was found to be best suited for a women's center."

Flemming said the 300 men in the automotive corps and the 200 in the appliance repair corps will be transferred to other centers, possibly by June.

About 70 men taking marine engineering will be transferred to the Breckinridge Job Corps Center at Morgan Field, Ky.

Kelly said that during February and the first half of March, there will be staff training and program development for the center's new role. He said there will be a minimum of changes in staff or facilities.

Tongue Point opened as a men's Job Corps center in February, 1965.

Olympia, Wash.
Olympian
(Cir. D. 15,836 - S. 15,843)

JAN 11 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Exodus Is On

ASTORIA, Oregon (AP) — An exodus of people is under way at Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria.

Most are the 300 male trainees who are being shifted to other centers to make room for the 650 young women that the Office of Economic Opportunity says will be training at the center by June 30.

Some are among the 350 staff members handed their dismissal notices. Most, however, will be re-hired when the women's center opens in March.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said Tuesday he will return to the University of Oregon where he is a faculty member. He said a woman director is being sought.

The university operates the center with the Philco Ford Corp.

Van Loan said about 140 staff members will be permanently dismissed, primarily in physical education, vocational training and group supervision.

Center officials say some trainees will remain until Jan. 20 to finish courses.

However, about 450 were on their way today to these centers:

Breckinridge Center at Morgan field, Kentucky; Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wisconsin; Atterbury Center, Edinburgh, Indiana; Parks Center, Pleasanton, California; Custer Center, Battle Creek, Michigan; and Clearfield Center, Clearfield, Utah.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)

JAN 11 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point

Corps Exodus Under Way

ASTORIA (AP)—An exodus of people is under way at Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria.

Most are the 300 male trainees who are being shifted to other centers to make room for the 650 young women that the Office of Economic Opportunity says will be training at the center by June 30.

Some are among the 350 staff members handed their dismissal notices Monday. Most, however, will be re-hired when the women's center opens in March.

Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said Tuesday he will return to the University of Oregon where he is a faculty member. He said a woman director is being sought.

The university operates the center with the Philco Ford Corp.

Van Loan said about 140 staff members will be permanently dismissed, primarily in physical education, vocational training and group supervision.

Center officials say some trainees will remain until Jan. 20 to finish courses.

However, about 450 were on their way today to these centers:

Breckinridge Center at Morgan field, Ky.; Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wis.; Atterbury Center, Edinburgh, Ind.; Parks Center, Pleasanton, Calif.; Custer Center, Battle Creek, Mich.; and Clearfield Center, Clearfield, Utah.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,570)

JAN 14 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

300 Staff Needed For Women Corps

ASTORIA (AP) — Academic staff members at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will know Jan. 20 whether they will be out of a job.

That is the date the center will notify those who are to be retained when the operation shifts to training young women.

The last of the young men leaves on that date.

Dr. W. L. Van Loan, center director, said in a statement today that a total staff of about 300 would be required. The staff now totals 417 with 142 of them academic employes of the University of Oregon. The others are civil service employes or vocational training leaders employed by Philco-Ford.

Dr. Van Loan said academic employes will get 90 days notice of termination. It is expected that most of those not retained will be able to get teaching jobs elsewhere. He said requests for personnel have come from as far as Edmonton, Canada. The Philco-Ford workers are expected to be transferred to other jobs with the corporation.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)

JAN 10 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps To Complete Shift Tonight

ASTORIA (AP) — A shift of male Job Corps trainees from Tongue Point to other centers in the country is expected to be completed Tuesday night.

Tongue Point will be converted to a women's Job Corps unit.

The 81 out of 450 trainees who will remain are those who can complete their courses by the end of this month.

Twenty-five corpsmen have left the Job Corps since last week's announcement, some to go home and others to take jobs.

About 350 staff members Monday received notices of dismissal, ranging from 10 to 90 days. Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said the notices were "normal" under Office of Economic Opportunity regulations.

Paul Jacobson, dean of the School of Education at the University of Oregon, said "many" of those dismissed would be re-employed when the women's center opens in March.

Oregon
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 31,429 - S 33,042)

JAN 11 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Shift at Job Corps

The Job Corps Center for boys a Tongue Point, Astoria, had hardly completed its shakedown cruise before it was terminated, to be reopened as a center for girls. The boys will be transferred to other centers.

The reason given for the change was the requirement in the law that 22 per cent of the Job Corps appropriation be spent on training of girls. This meant either that some new center be opened, or some existing ones shifted to girls. Astoria drew the short straw and must take the shift.

This will mean a lot of extra cost — the job courses offered at Tongue Point won't appeal to girls. Staff members will have to be moved around, at government expense. This is a sample of what occurs all too often in government projects, with a waste of public funds. The government will pull a muscle running down a shortage of curry combs in the old cavalry barns, but not bat an eye spending thousands of dollars because of some regulation or bureaucratic blunder. In this case though the bureau passes the blame onto Congress.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,890)

JAN 12 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Final Assembly For Job Corps Features Awards

Service awards were presented to Tongue Point Job Corpsmen, staff members and townspeople at the Associated Corpsmen's final awards assembly and "Bye Bye Blowout" held before the first busload of Corpsmen left the center this week.

Special certificates for service to the corpsmen in community projects were given to Mrs. Adelaine Sather, Mrs. Bernice Buck, Mary Lee Haddix, Madeline Prinkki and John Titus, all of Astoria. Titus also received a service pin.

Seven Job Corps staff members were presented service pins for extensive contribution to the corpsmen organizations. They are Dr. Harold McAbee, Ben Johnson, Terry Miracle, Virgil Savage, Kenneth Grothe, Walter Edmonds and Richard Pride.

Also receiving the gold pins for outstanding sustained service to the center were the following Job Corpsmen:

Len Bright, Joel McElhannon, Cleo Smith, Booker Partee, Charles Mayberry, John Martinez, George Lee, Tony Pacheco, Clarence Reese, Ray Mason, Glendell Banks, James Moore, Charles Campbell and Al Bryant.

More than 300 corpsmen attended the assembly and farewell party at the center theater. Entertainment included games and a movie.

Capital Journal
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 24,233)

JAN 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Phasing Out

ASTORIA (UPI)— A shift of Job Corps trainees from Tongue Point to other centers in the country is expected to be completed Tuesday night, leaving only 81 of the 450 on hand when word came it would be converted to a women's Job Corps unit.

The 81 who will remain are those who can complete their courses by the end of this month.

Twenty - five corpsmen have left the Job Corps since last week's announcement, some to go home and others to take jobs.

About 350 staff members Monday received notices of dismissal, ranging from 10 to 90 days. Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said the notices were "normal" under Office of Economy Opportunity regulations.

Eugene
Bend, Oregon
(Cir. D 7,220)

JAN 10 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Shift underway at Tongue Point

ASTORIA (UPI) – A shift of Job Corps trainees from Tongue Point to other centers in the country is expected to be completed Tuesday night, leaving only 81 of the 450 on hand when word came it would be converted to a women's Job Corps unit.

The 81 who will remain are those who can complete their courses by the end of this month.

Twenty-five corpsmen have left the Job Corps since last week's announcement.

About 350 staff members Monday received notices of dismissal, ranging from 10 to 90 days. Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said the notices were "normal".

Spokane, Wash.
Chronicle
(Cir. 71,055)

JAN 10 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Center Change Under Way

ASTORIA (AP)—The conversion of Tongue Point Job Corps Center into a women's center took another step yesterday when the University of Oregon sent dismissal notices to the 350 staff members of the men's center.

The federal government announced just one week ago that the center would be converted into a women's center. Most of the young men will be gone by the end of the week and the women start arriving in March.

The dismissal notices are temporary for about two-thirds of the staff, officials said, but about one-third will be displaced because women will be required in such positions as group life supervisors and physical education and vocational instructors.

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Sellwood-Moreland Bee
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. 2,031)
JAN 12 1967

REP. GREEN QUESTIONS MOVE

One might expect U. S. Rep. Edith Green, one of the early proponents of a girl's Job Corps, to refrain from any criticism of its administration, particularly when the Office of Economic Opportunity decided to bring such a facility to Oregon.

Mrs. Green has, however, kept faith with her constituents by questioning the wisdom of the decision for a sudden change-over from a boys' to a girls' center at Astoria. She has vigorously protested the conversion about which she was never consulted.

The recent installation of equipment for better vocational training for boys, the development of a dedicated staff and the bridging of a gulf between the young Corpsman and the Astoria community had all been accomplished. The extremely high cost of training was being reduced, probably largely due to Rep. Green's demands on this score, and the young men themselves were responding in a new way to the opportunity offered them. Suddenly the word came down from Washington, D. C. to disrupt this program, switch the Astoria Center to girls and, this is the most amazing of all, go out and recruit girls to train.

The disadvantages of the site for a girls' Job Corps Center are so obvious that to disregard them is to court disaster. When Rep. Green finally learned of the decision, possibly through the newspapers, it was too late to change it, but it is to be hoped that she will somehow make her clear view of the problems felt in Washington and that whatever can be salvaged from the situation will be.

The entire incident is so frustrating to the average taxpayer that he cannot discuss it without anger. The one comforting aspect of it is that the Third Congressional District and the people of Oregon have again been assured that they have at least one U. S. Representative who is not afraid to speak up against such high-handed procedures. We only wish the federal people who head such programs as this could be forced to listen.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 340,386 - S 450,890)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Fast Transfers Prevent Brawls At Tongue Point

Job Corps trainees were speedily hustled out of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center to stem disturbances that appeared about to break out, a Job Corps spokesman told The Oregonian Monday.

The youths got into "loud arguments" and threw things out the windows" following the announcement last Thursday that the center is to be converted from a young men's unit to a young women's training site, the spokesman said.

Minor incidents followed a Friday night party and awards assembly that the corpsmen tagged "The Bye - Bye Blow-Out."

"That was one of the reasons we moved them out so fast. We didn't want to give them time to mull things over," said the Job Corps spokesman.

The first group of trainees was moved out Sunday night. The last group of transfers was moved out Tuesday. Approximately 456 corpsmen were involved in the transfers, which saw them being bused to Portland then put on commercial airlines bound for other camps.

The youths were sent to Breckinridge Center, Morganfield, Ky.; McCoy Center, Sparta, Wis.; Atterbury Center, Edinburg, Ind.; Parks Center, Pleasanton, Calif.; Custer Center, Battle Creek, Mich., and Clearfield Center, Clearfield, Utah.

Job Corps officials said they were attempting to contact — by telephone and telegram — an undetermined number of corpsmen who were away from the center on holiday leaves.

Those youths will receive transfer instructions by telephone or through screening agencies in their hometown areas. The youths are scattered all over the country and attempting to reach them has turned into "a complicated process," a Job Corps spokesman said.

About 81 corpsmen will remain at the center, receiving speeded-up training that will allow them to graduate by Jan. 20.

Spokesmen said staff members were in the process of receiving "formal" termination notices.

Spokesmen said that some staff members will be reassigned to other duties during the transiting period. Representatives from other centers have been at Tongue Point conducting recruitment programs since last Thursday.

Among courses being considered for the young women's program are drama, art, music, homemaking, citizenship training, recreation, health, driver education, physical education, language arts, mathematics, culinary arts, clerical and stenographic, social service occupations, electronic assembly, and work experience.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Pt. Staff to Be Cut 140

The Tongue Point Job Corps staff of 417 people will be reduced 30 to 35 per cent to fit the needs of the new 650-trainee women's urban center to be established there by June 30, officials said Tuesday.

This will be a reduction of approximately 140 people, mostly in the fields of physical education, vocational training and group life supervision.

Formal termination notices will go to all people on the staff within a few days, which is automatic upon termination of the U. of Oregon contract to operate a men's Job Corps Center, officials said.

Most of the staff personnel will be offered re-employment under the new contract to run a women's center, Director Wendell Van Loan said.

"We are not dismissing people if we can help it," he said. "We are simply cancelling a contract, with a new one to follow it. We will have to trim the ship to fit the needs of the new program."

3 Types Of Employment

No termination notices have gone out yet, officials at the center said.

There are three categories of employees at Tongue Point—222 maintenance and clerical workers under Oregon civil service classification, 142 academic employees of the university, and 53 on the Philco-Ford vocational staff.

The civil service employees will receive 15-day termination notices, but re-employment will be offered most of them, to be negotiated individually.

Ninety-day termination notices have been agreed upon for the U. of O. academic employees, many of whom will be retained under the new program.

Philco-Ford will give 15 days notice to members of its vocational instructional staff who will not be re-hired, but will keep its own administrative personnel on the assumption that it will again be sub-contractor under the new contract.

New Jobs Plentiful

Dr. Van Loan said it appears that there will be no difficulty in finding new jobs for the people who will not be needed in the new program.

Some will go to other Job Corps centers, and representatives of these have been on Tongue Point campus for several days interviewing people for new vocational and other jobs. Requests for people are coming from school districts and vocational schools as far as Edmonton in Canada.

By January 20 all concerned should know if they will have jobs under the new contract, officials said.

Few Corpsmen Remain

Job Corpsmen were scarce on the Tongue Point campus Tuesday after 180 departed Monday. Final bus loads of those transferring to other centers were to leave late Tuesday.

Remaining will be 81 trainees who will complete their training programs by January 20.

Dr. Van Loan said that a woman director for the new center is being sought, and that he probably will return to University of Oregon.

He said he is on a temporary loan basis from the university to Tongue Point and is supposed to return to the campus when the new center is established.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,241)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees Rushed Out of Astoria

ASTORIA (AP)—A spokesman for the Tongue Point Job Corps Center says trainees were hustled out of town to their new assignments earlier this week to stem the threat of disturbances.

Last Thursday, after it was announced that the camp would be converted into a training center for girls, there were several instances of loud arguments and of equipment being thrown out of windows. Minor incidents followed a farewell party Friday.

The first group of boys moved out Sunday and the last left Tuesday. About 80 are still at the center, completing the training course.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,570)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

350 Job Corps Workers Fired

ASTORIA (AP)—The conversion of Tongue Point Job Corps Center into a women's center took another step Monday when the University of Oregon sent dismissal notices to the 350 staff members of the men's center.

The federal government announced just one week ago that the center would be converted into a women's center. Most of the young men will be gone by the end of the week and the women start arriving in March.

The dismissal notices are temporary for about two-thirds of the staff, officials said, but about one-third will be displaced because women will be required in such positions as group life supervisors and physical education and vocational instructors.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, was one of those who may not be back. He said Monday he does not picture himself as a dean of women.

Van Loan said the wholesale dismissal notices are routine in the process of cancelling one contract and negotiating another with the Office of Economic Opportunity. The University of Oregon holds the prime contract.

Daily Courier
Grants Pass, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,000)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Staff Undergoes Upheaval

ASTORIA (AP)—The conversion of Tongue Point Job Corps Center into a women's center took another step Monday when the University of Oregon sent dismissal notices to the 350 staff members of the men's center.

The federal government announced just one week ago that the center would be converted into a women's center. Most of the young men will be gone by the end of the week and the women start arriving in March.

The dismissal notices are temporary for about two-thirds of the staff, officials said, but about one-third will be displaced because women will be required in such positions as group life supervisors and physical education and vocational instructors.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, was one of those who may not be back. He said Monday he does not picture himself as a dean of women.

Van Loan said the wholesale dismissal notices are routine in the process of cancelling one contract and negotiating another with the Office of Economic Opportunity. The University of Oregon holds the prime contract.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,241)
JAN 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees Rushed Out of Astoria

ASTORIA (AP)—A spokesman for the Tongue Point Job Corps Center says trainees were hustled out of town to their new assignments earlier this week to stem the threat of disturbances.

Last Thursday, after it was announced that the camp would be converted into a training center for girls, there were several instances of loud arguments and of equipment being thrown out of windows. Minor incidents followed a farewell party Friday.

The first group of boys moved out Sunday and the last left Tuesday. About 80 are still at the center, completing the training course.

The World
Coos Bay, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,630)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Completion Of Shift Near

ASTORIA (UPI)— A shift of Job Corps trainees from Tongue Point to other centers in the country is expected to be completed Tuesday night, leaving only 81 of the 450 on hand when word came it would be converted to a women's Job Corps unit.

The 81 who will remain are those who can complete their courses by the end of this month.

Twenty - five corpsmen have left the Job Corps since last week's announcement, some to go home and others to take jobs.

The 81 who will remain are those who can complete their courses by the end of this month.

Twenty - five corpsmen have left the Job Corps since last week's announcement, some to go home and others to take jobs.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Trainees Moving From Astoria

ASTORIA (UPI) — A shift of Job Corps trainees from Tongue Point to other centers in the country is expected to be completed Tuesday night, leaving only 81 of the 450 who were here recently when word came it would be converted to a women's Job Corps unit.

The 81 who will remain are those who can complete their courses by the end of this month.

The first busload of 24 trainees left Sunday night for Breckinridge, Ky., where small boat repair training is offered.

On Monday morning a group of 15 left for Kilmer N.J., and 31 for Gary, Tex. The Tuesday schedule called for departure of groups for Parks, Calif.; Custer, Mich.; Clearfield, Utah; and McCoy, Wis. Ten corpsmen will go to Mt. Angel, Ore., for an Upward Bound program leading to high school diplomas.

Twenty-five corpsmen have left the Job Corps since last week's announcement, some to go home and others to take jobs.

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oregon
(Cir. D. 19,194)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Shift Nearly Completed

ASTORIA (UPI) — A shift of Job Corps trainees from Tongue Point to other centers in the country is expected to be completed tonight, leaving only 81 of the 450 on hand when word came it would be converted to a women's Job Corps unit.

The 81 who will remain are those who can complete their courses by the end of this month.

Twenty - five corpsmen have left the Job Corps since last week's announcement, some to go home and others to take jobs.

In such positions as group life supervisors and physical education and vocational instructors.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, was one of those who may not be back. He said Monday he does not picture himself as a dean of women.

Van Loan said the wholesale dismissal notices are routine in the process of cancelling one contract and negotiating another with the Office of Economic Opportunity. The University of Oregon holds the prime contract.

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,138)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point change takes another step

ASTORIA (AP)—The conversion of Tongue Point Job Corps Center into a women's center took another step Monday when the University of Oregon sent dismissal notices to the 350 staff members of the men's center.

The federal government announced just one week ago that the center would be converted into a women's center. Most of the young men will be gone by the end of the week and the women start arriving in March.

The dismissal notices are temporary for about two-thirds of the staff, officials said, but about one-third will be displaced because women will be required in such positions as group life supervisors and physical education and vocational instructors.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, was one of those who may not be back. He said Monday he does not picture himself as a dean of women.

Van Loan said the wholesale dismissal notices are routine in the process of cancelling one contract and negotiating another with the Office of Economic Opportunity. The University of Oregon holds the prime contract.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)
JAN 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

UO Dean Cites Values

More Vocational Schools Needed

By BOB NEWCOMB
Of the Register-Guard

Approximately 400 principals —representing nearly all of Oregon's junior and senior high schools — Saturday in Eugene ended what unofficially is described as "the largest meeting of secondary school administrators in the state's history."

The school administrators, attending the 17th annual winter conference of the Oregon Association of Secondary School Principals (OASSP), concentrated on programs aimed at expanding vocational-technical education.

Most sessions were held in Erb Memorial Student Union on the University of Oregon campus. A. C. Hearn, a member of the OASSP executive committee, said the conference attendance is believed to have topped all previous records. About 350 persons had been expected.

Don James, principal of Roosevelt High School in Portland, who served as vice president of the association last year, automatically becomes president this year. He and other new officers were installed Friday.

Named vice president Friday was Earl Hampton, principal of Judson Junior High School at Salem. Elden Kling, principal of Mapleton High School in Lane County, and Marvin Rasmussen, principal of Benson High School, Portland, each were elected to the executive committee.

Among speakers Friday was Paul Jacobson, dean of the UO School of Education. "The most glaring defect in vocational education today," he said, "is that it's not widespread enough —so that every boy and girl can learn a saleable skill."

Jacobson, who serves as an unpaid consultant to the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria, spoke about the youths who have been served by that vocational training school. (This year, the center will serve women. For the past two years it has served young men—about 80 per cent of them high school dropouts.)

"We had some pretty mixed up boys," said Jacobson — "everything from accomplished hoods to naive little boys who had never been off the farm."

One of the first questions asked of the Tongue Point youths, he said, was "why did you drop out of school?" The answer frequently was, said Jacobson: "Because nobody at home cares. Nobody at school cares. So I quit with the hope of finding a job."

To the principals in the audience, Jacobson said: "You're not responsible for the home conditions. But, you are responsible, at least in part, for the second part of that statement."

Needed, he said, are "male teachers, to provide a father image of the type these boys never had."

Interviews of the Tongue Point students, he said, revealed that 90 per cent of the youths had "a good image of their mothers. But, when it came to the father, he was the man who drank up the rent money and beat their mother."

Youths coming from such homes, he said, "don't like fathers, policemen or male teachers."

Such youths, he said, "are not the nice little boys like you've got in high school. But they're still willing to learn." He added, however, that they are lacking in "social skills" as well as in technical skills.

Spending public funds to assist such persons to become "productive citizens" is justifiable, Jacobson said—"if you believe in young people. "Spending as much as $3,000 a year, for instance, to train such youths is worthwhile "if you can prevent a boy or girl from becoming a public charge."

The experience at Tongue Point, he said, has shown that such efforts are justified.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

'Israel in Crisis' To Be Subject Of 1st Lecture

DR. LEONARD RICE

"Contemporary Israel in Crisis" is topic of Dr. Leonard W. Rice, president of Oregon College of Education in Monmouth, for his talk in Astoria Thursday, January 19.

Dr. Rice will be the first speaker in a newer series of by the Women's Activities committee at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center. He will talk at 7:30 p.m. in the Community hall on Naval Heights.

The series of five lectures has been arranged by the Tongue Point women in conjunction with the Division of Continuing Education of the Oregon State System of Higher Education. Series tickets will be available at the door at the first program. Lectures will be open to the public, according to Mrs. Anthony Zener, 1 Nimitz drive, Apt. 2, chairman of the lecture series group of the Women's Activities committee.

Dr. Rice was chairman of a team of American educators who made a study tour of Israel last year. The tour was sponsored by the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education and the US Department of Education to give college administrators an opportunity to study teacher education in another cultural setting.

According to Dr. Rice, the American team found that the basic problems Israel faces are same as those faced throughout the world: separation of church and state, integration, education, industrialization, automation, water and war.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 21,429 - S 22,348)
JAN 15 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Schools Ask For Point's Instructors

ASTORIA (AP)—Jan. 20 is the day the last of the Job Corpsmen leave the Tongue Point Job Corps Center and the day the academic staff members learn whether they will be rehired to work with the new women trainees.

Dr. W. L. Van Loan, director, said there are 142 academic employes. There have been requests from many schools for personnel so those not retained are expected to find other jobs.

The Philco-Ford vocational training staff workers are expected to be reassigned by the corporation.

There are 417 staff workers at the center now. Van Loan estimates 300 will be retained.

The World
Coos Bay, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,630)
JAN 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Reduction Of Staff Seen

ASTORIA (UPI)—The Tongue Point Job Corps staff will be reduced 30 to 35 per cent to meet needs of the new 650-trainee women's urban center to be established by June 30, officials said this week.

This will be a reduction of about 140 people, mostly in the fields of physical education, vocational training and group life supervision.

Most of the staff personnel will be offered new contracts under the women's center program.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)
JAN 15 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Staff Status Due Friday

ASTORIA (AP — Academic staff members at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will know Friday whether they will be out of a job.

That is the date the center will notify those who are to be retained when the operation shifts to training young women.

The last of the young men leaves on that date.

W. L. Van Loan, center director, said in a statement Saturday that a total staff of about 300 would be required. The staff now totals 417 with 142 of them academic employes of the University of Oregon. The others are civil service employes or vocational training leaders employed by Philco-Ford.

Van Loan said academic employes will get 90 days notice of termination. It is expected that most of those not retained will be able to get teaching jobs elsewhere. He said requests for personnel have come from as far as Edmonton, Canada. The Philco-Ford workers are expected to be transferred to other jobs with the corporation.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,241)
JAN 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Staff Given Dismissals

ASTORIA (AP)—The conversion of Tongue Point Job Corps Center into a women's center took another step Monday when the University of Oregon sent dismissal notices to the 350 staff members of the men's center.

The federal government announced just one week ago that the center would be converted into a women's center. Most of the young men will be gone by the end of the week and the women start arriving in March.

The dismissal notices are temporary for about two-thirds of the staff, officials said, but about one-third will be displaced because women will be required in such positions as group life supervisors and physical education and vocational instructors.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, was one of those who may not be back. He said Monday he does not picture himself as a dean of women.

Van Loan said the wholesale dismissal notices are routine in the process of cancelling one contract and negotiating another with the Office of Economic Opportunity. The University of Oregon holds the prime contract.

Ellensburg Daily Record
Ellensburg, Wash.
(Cir. D. 2,359)
JAN 18 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Signal
Seaside, Oregon
(Cir. W. 2,360)
JAN 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Clatskanie Chief
Clatskanie, Oregon
(Cir. W. 1,655)
JAN 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women's center to require 300 staf members

Approximately 300 staff members will be required to operate Tongue Point Job Corps center, specialate Job Corps administrators who are working on a new proposal for training women at the center.

Of the estimated 300 staff members, the majority will be personnel already on the Tongue Point payroll. At present 417 are employes of the Job Corps Center.

As a matter of normal procedure, all of the 142 University of Oregon academic employes received notices of termination last week, according to Dr. W. L. Van Loan, center director. This is automatic upon termination of the university's contract to operate a men's Job Corps center.

However, academic staff members will be notified by Jan. 20 if they are to be rehired under a new contract for women.

Academic personnel receive 90-day notice, so those rehired to work under the new program will not lose a day's pay, despite the transition period (all are expected to work during the 90 days). Those not rehired will also receive 90 days notice and be given assistance in obtaining new jobs through the U of O placement bureau.

In addition, representatives of several men's urban Job Corps centers have been on campus, conducting interviews with those interested in accepting positions at other centers.

Requests for personnel also have been coming from school districts and vocational schools as far as Edmonton, Canada.

Also to be affected by the changeover to a women's center will be 232 classified civil service personnel and 53 employes of Philco-Ford.

But officials emphasized there will not be a general civil service layoff. No classified civil service staff member will be given a 15 - day notice until it is clearly established that his employment is not needed.

Civil service personnel who will be re-employed will receive a notice of layoff, and if rehired, a notice of return to work at the earliest possible date, both in accordance with civil service rules.

Philco-Ford employes have not received notices of termination. Whenever possible, these employes are given two week's notice, an official said.

It is anticipated that many of the vocational instructors not needed under a new contract will be transferred to other Philco-Ford operations throughout the world.

Vocational training is continuing, with fewer than 81 corpsmen working to complete their vocational training by Jan. 20. On that date the last corpsman will leave the center.

The other corpsmen left early last week for other urban centers where they will complete their training.

Four out of every ten American men who retire are compelled to do so because of poor health.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)
JAN 18 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Spokane, Wash.
Chronicle
(Cir. 71,058)
JAN 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Ready For Departure

Ron Dean, 20, center, points out on the map, his destination of San Francisco, Calif., where he and Bill Stevenson, 21, on the right, will enroll in vocational training courses at the Parks Job Corps Center. Looking on is Tom Bailey, 21, who will enroll in courses at the Job Corps Center in Neah Bay. The young men left Ellensburg Tuesday.

Local Men Join Job Corps

Three Ellensburg men are making up the vanguard of a Kittitas County group entering the Job Corps to seek further education and vocational training.

The three, Tom Bailey, 21, Ron Dean, 20, and Bill Stevenson, 21, left Ellensburg Tuesday for Job Corps centers in Neah Bay, and San Francisco.

Several other young men are expected to be leaving for Job Corps training as soon as their assignment papers are processed.

Bailey, Dean and Stevenson originally were assigned to the Tongue Point Center at Astoria, Ore., a 600-student facility which offered training in automotive and appliance repairing, electronics, welding and boat repairing. The facility, operated by the University of Oregon and Philco Corporation for the Office of Economic Opportunity, has been closed to new students and is being turned into a Job Corps center for young women.

The Kittitas County men were recruited for the Job Corps by a three-man team of recruiters from Tongue River, headed by Vince Hayes, staff member of the University of Oregon, assigned to the Astoria center. With him were two trainees, Charles Whittington of Wichata Falls, Texas, and Steve Kelley of Pipestone, Minn.

Bailey, who attended Kittitas schools, has been assigned to the Neah Bay center, where the training emphasis is on conservation work. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Bailey, 609 E. Sixth. Dean and Stevenson will enter the training program at Parks Job Corps Center, an urban facility at San Francisco.

Dean, a graduate of Bethel High School in Spanaway near Tacoma, plans to enroll in the machinist training course at Parks. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Dean, Rt. 1.

Stevenson, who quit school in the ninth grade, will take academic courses to earn a high school diploma, and also take instruction in electronics. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Berle Stevenson, 310 East 13th.

Job Corpsmen train at the centers for two years or until they are qualified by their studies for job placement. During the training period they also can earn $30 a month. If they make successful progress in their studies, and to tide them over until they get their first pay check, men graduating from the training centers get a $150 allotment.

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles

Eugene, Oregon
Univ. of Ore. Emerald
JAN 19 1967

Tongue Point Now Center for Women

Associated Press

The former director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Training Center says he "can't understand" a decision to convert Tongue Point from a men's center to one for women.

"Politics literally and figuratively are going to ruin the poverty programs, especially that part of them we were working on," Douglas Olds, first director of Tongue Point, told a meeting of the Eugene Rotary Club Wednesday.

Olds is now executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council at the University.

He said he has nothing against a congressional requirement that 23 per cent of the job corps trainees be women.

"But," he said, "we had a program started and pretty well accepted by the community in Astoria, and then somebody got a hare-brained idea in Washington and we changed over."

In addition to difficulties involved in changing the program, Olds said many of the men who have not finished their training will have to be moved.

"They've been pushed around all their lives," he said, and asked why the men's program could not at least have been phased out slowly.

Olds said that Tongue Point had to deal with the same kind of sudden political decisions and pressures at its inception.

The staff arrived at the ex-Navy base on January 4, he said, and on February 1—long before the facilities could be readied for them—trainees were poured into the center.

"We got 500 of them in 17 days," Olds said, "and we didn't know they were coming; and we lost (by drop-out) 300 of them."

Politics may hit the Job Corps from another angle, too, Olds said, when budget decisions are made by Congress.

Olds said that "it's always going to be expensive" to rehabilitate and train young men and women, to stop the "tremendous waste that is taking place in our nation today in manpower."

And, he said, a decision is going to have to be made soon on whether such rehabilitation "is worth a fraction of the cost of some of these other programs," such as the space race and supersonic passenger planes.

Olds said one lesson learned from the Job Corps is that "Tongue Point and other centers are not the answer to the problem; the public schools are the answer.

"Public schools in many cases are not realistic about the needs and requirements of young people today," he said. "We've got to quit educating for young people going to college only."

For about 50 per cent of the population, "there is no place in college," Olds said. "We have something around 5 million young people who are unemployable," he said, and to solve that problem "we have to start them in junior high school thinking about jobs."

"Vocational training is expensive; but it's far less expensive" than the cost of vocational training of school dropouts in the Job Corps, Olds said.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
(Cir. D 12,941)
JAN 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Poverty Program Politics Charged

EUGENE (AP)—Politics will ruin the poverty programs, says the former director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria.

Douglas Olds, first director at Tongue Point, told a meeting of the Eugene Rotary Club Wednesday that he "can't understand" a decision to convert Tongue Point from a men's center to one for women.

"We had a program started and pretty well accepted by the community in Astoria," said Olds, "and then somebody got a hare-brained idea in Washington and we changed over."

About 400 of the male trainees were moved immediately. Some stayed on to finish their training.

"They've been pushed around all their lives," he said, and asked why the men's program could not at least have been phased out slowly.

Olds is now executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council at the University of Oregon.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)
JAN 18 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Youths Charged With Burglary

Two Tongue Point Job Corps trainees have been arrested and charged with burglary in a dwelling after investigation by Clatsop county sheriff's deputies, state police and Astoria police.

Arrested Tuesday for allegedly burglarizing the home of John Raniero, Gearhart fire chief, last Saturday night were Raymond Green and Raymond Simon. They were lodged in the Clatsop county jail.

Both were to have graduated this week after completing courses. Green arrived at Tongue Point Job Corps Center in February, 1966, and Simon in May, 1965. Green is from Salinas, Calif., and Simon's home town is Iowa, La.

Among items taken from the Raniero home were a purse, billfold and credit cards.

Herald & News
Klamath Falls, Oregon
(Cir. D 14,170 - S 14,506)
JAN 15 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Firing Plan Described

TONGUE POINT (UPI)—Officials at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will utilize two different termination systems while making the upcoming change-over from men to women.

For the 142 University of Oregon academic employes the change will mean automatic termination with 90 days notice. For most of them, however, the termination will be merely procedural paperwork as they will continue working under the new contract with the university.

The school operates the center for the Office of Economic Opportunity. The switch called for new operating procedures and new contracts between the two agencies.

The academic employes are not entitled to severance pay.

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oregon
(Cir. D. 19,194)
JAN 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Plans Outlined

TONGUE POINT (UPI)—Officials at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will utilize two different termination systems while making the upcoming change-over from men to women.

For the 142 University of Oregon academic employes the change will mean automatic termination with 90 days notice. For most of them, however, the termination will be merely procedural paperwork as they will continue working under the new contract with the university.

The school operates the center for the Office of Economic Opportunity. The switch called for new operating procedures and new contracts between the two agencies.

The academic employes are not entitled to severance pay.

The termination system will not be used for some 232 Civil Service personnel and 53 employes of Philco-Ford.

The new 300 staff members at the center will, for the most part, be hired from the current 417 employes.

Civil Service employes will be given notice only when it is clearly established they will not be needed.

Those who will be re-employed will receive a notice of layoff, which doesn't carry with it severance pay, and will be re-hired immediately.

Philco-Ford employes not needed at the center will be transferred to other operations.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)
JAN 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

OCE President To Address Women

Dr. Leonard W. Rice, president of Oregon College of Education, Monmouth, will be first speaker on a series of five programs arranged by Tongue Point women in cooperation with the division of continuing education of the Oregon System of Higher Education. Lectures are open to the public.

Dr. Rice will speak on "Contemporary Israel in Crisis" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the community center on Navy Heights, under sponsorship of the lecture series group of the women's activities committee. Other programs in the series will be held in February, March, April and May, according to Mrs. Anthony Zener, chairman of the sponsoring group.

Signal
Seaside, Oregon
(Cir. W. 2,360)
JAN 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Two young men charged

Two men, Raymond Green, 19, and Raymond Simon, 21, both of Tongue Point, were being held in the Clatsop county jail Wednesday on charges of burglary at the John Raniero home in Gearhart January 14.

They are alleged to have taken money and personal articles, some of which have been recovered, from the home.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)
JAN 17 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Group Finishes Women's Corps Course Outline

A tentative program of courses to be offered by the women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point has been outlined by a review committee in session there the past several days, Tongue Point officials said Tuesday.

Courses submitted by Philco-Ford corporation, subcontractor for vocational training, include business-clerical, health service occupations, including social service; electronics assembly and technician work and culinary arts. Submitted by prime contractor U. of Oregon are courses in social service occupations and commercial art.

The committee will meet again in Eugene January 27-28 and submit a tentative plan to Office of Economic Opportunity by February 1. By February 10 the entire contract proposal for operation of the center will be submitted by U of O and Philco-Ford to OEO. Negotiations on contract details are to begin March 1.

This week the administration will send letters of intent notifying some 300 staff members that they will be re-hired, officials said.

Last male graduate of the old Job Corps Center will leave Tongue Point Friday of this week.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)
JAN 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Hospital Registry

Registered at Columbia hospital were Matt Kilponen, Deep River, surgery; John Johanson, 1455 Eighth, medical; Charles Campbell, Job Corps, medical; Walter Paschal, Gearhart, medical; George Palmrose, Rt. 4 box 192, medical; Joseph Young, Rt. 1 box 572, medical; Joseph Glaser, Rt. 1 box 5, medical; Paul Chilcott, Warrenton, medical; and John Wilks, Hammond, medical.

Job Camp Change Rapped

EUGENE (AP) — Politics will ruin the poverty programs, says the former director of the Tongue Point Jobs Corps Center near Astoria.

Douglas Olds, first director at Tongue Point, told a meeting of the Eugene Rotary Club yesterday that he "can't understand" a decision to convert Tongue Point from a men's center to one for women.

"We had a program started and pretty well accepted by the community in Astoria," said Olds, "and then somebody got a hare-brained idea in Washington and we changed over."

About 400 of the male trainees were moved immediately. Some stayed on to finish their training.

"They've been pushed around all their lives," he said, and asked why the men's program could not at least been phased out slowly.

Olds is now executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council at the University of Oregon.

The Trident

by Art Steele

"Your Taxes", publication of Oregon Tax Research, in its new January issue, gave some interesting figures on the increased cost from the state level on some of the major programs in the past 16 years.

Taking the biennium 1959-61 in comparison with 1967-69, here is the difference as they see it. Basic school support, $103,234,654 to $168,907,883; higher education, $54,172,829 to $128,175,013; public welfare, $37,100,850 to $56,157,531; community colleges, $120,000 to $27,777,669; and property tax relief from nothing to $50,-654,738.

For these five programs, the increase has been from $194,-828,333 to $431,672,254 or more than double.

† † †

It's not one bit funny.

Those individuals with a twisted sense of humor or a dangerous mental quirk who have been using the telephone in an effort to frighten some person by night calls hinting at disaster of one type or another or of calling the school offices to warn of bombs!

They may think that the absence of a telephone operator with the new dial phones opens a new door for their devilishment but if it continues, sooner or later they will be caught and the people are in no mood for light punishment.

It is time now that the practice of indescriminate use of the telephone be stopped.

† † †

It appears that most Astorians are not happy about the sudden transition of Tongue Point from a boys' school to one for girls. And that is nothing against girls.

It does work a hardship on a community, on the teaching force, on the taxpayer when an administration appears to not think far enough in advance to know what it wants or needs.

Rep. Edith Green has been a consistent critic of the Job Corps center at Tongue Point and the extremely high cost per pupil in its training program.

The cost was high in converting the Astoria installation for the boys, there will be much more in making ready for the girls in addition to the transportation charges in sending the boys elsewhere.

It is particularly hard, too, on the instructors who have had to resign with the turnover. Many gave up good jobs to go to the better paying ones at the center and now in the middle of a school term are out. It is estimated that about two-thirds of the teachers will be re-hired when the girls arrive and training begins again, but even they have an enforced vacation.

In the meantime, a truck out of Portland is touring and recruiting girls for the new Job Corp for girls center.

One cannot help but wonder if the administration knows what it is doing now, or within another few months, they will have another idea or if Congress may have some different ideas.

This is written with the full realization that Congress has stipulated that 23% of those enrolled in Job Corps must be girls and most centers are old army barracks but to station from 250-500 girls in an installation made ready for up to 1200 boys seems ridiculous.

† † †

Signal
Seaside, Oregon
(Cir. W. 2,300)
JAN 1 5 1967

College May Get Surplus Job Corps Equipment

[illegible] McCollom, presi- adult education theater class
[illegible]son Community col- that could develop into a civic [illegible] day theater for the Sunset Empire
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Greater Oregon
Albany, Oregon

May Have 650 Women At Center

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
PORTLAND
Seattle
Oregon Legal Press
Portland, Oregon

Labor hails pact with Job Corps

ASTORIA — Hailed as "a breakthrough in the area of public agencies," the Clatsop-Tillamook County Building & Construction Trades Council has signed a contract covering Tongue Point Job Corps construction and maintenance employees.

The contract, with the University of Oregon as bargaining agency, covers some 40 civil service employees. Signatories at a Tongue Point ceremony this week were Arthur Fleming, university president, and Eugene C Koch of Astoria, trades council business manager.

Also at the ceremony were Edward J. Whelan, Salem, Oregon AFL-CIO executive secretary-treasurer, Hal Morton, Portland, president, and Joe Willis, Eugene, secretary, Oregon Building & Construction Trades Council.

Signing of the university-labor contract was described as a breakthrough by Whelan, who said the agreement is the best of those with the state covering construction and maintenance workers. It is particularly strong in fringe benefits, he said.

The Tongue Point Job Corps Center currently is switching from a facility for male youths to one for young women. The transition involves separation of virtually all staff members under the original operation, to be followed by re-employment under the new set-up

Koch, who has been a member of the center's advisory board, said he expected most of the staff to be re-employed. He described the discharge and rehiring as primarily a bookkeeping operation

Job Corps Severance Pay 'Out'

Employees of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center who are officially "fired" and re-hired" during a switchover of the camp will not receive severance pay, officials said Tuesday.

The question was raised after the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity announced that all 417 employes of the center had received termination notices following a decision to convert from a men's to a women's training center.

ABOUT 300 employes, most of them from the present staff, will be rehired, the OEO said. The present payroll is about $250,000 a month. Those who will continue at Tongue Point will be notified next Friday, the final day for the present men's training program.

Two different termination systems will be used for employes not required in the new program. Provision for a 30-day termination notice means that employes eliminated by the changeover will be given opportunity to work at other jobs around the Center until they locate new employment or until the 90 days are up. No severance pay as such is provided, officials report.

EMPLOYES of the University of Oregon and Philco-Ford Corp., the two prime contractors at the training center, either will continue at the Tongue Point center under the new program or be transferred to other Job Corps centers in Utah, Michigan, Indiana, or Wisconsin.

In a relatively small number of cases, assistance in finding other employment will be given by the Tongue Point personnel department and the University of Oregon placement service, officials said.

In The Dalles, Portland and other Oregon cities have been interviewing employes. There are 142 academic employes of the University of Oregon involved in the changeover, and 53 Philco-Ford staff personnel. All Philco-Ford employes not needed in the new operation will be transferred to other operations.

BOTH of the prime contractors will continue to offer training to women in the Tongue Point facility. Almost all supervisory personnel and teaching staff will be retained, although changes will be necessitated by the different character of vocational training for women.

Poverty Programs Hurt By Politics

Eugene AP Politics will run two poverty programs, says the director of the Tongue Point Job Corps center near Astoria.

Dengeles Olds first director at Tongue Point, said a meeting of the Eugene Rotary Club Wednesday that he can't understand a decision to convert Tongue Point from a men's center to one for women.

"We had a program started and pretty well accepted by the community in Astoria," said Olds, "and then somebody got a hair-brained idea in Washington and we managed to get ..."

Olds, who left Tongue Point ... was moved immediately ... assigned to finish their training.

"They've been pushed around all their lives," he said, and asked why the men's program could not at least been phased out slowly.

Olds is now executive secretary in the Oregon School Study Council at the University of Oregon

Mrs. Green Wants Separate Study Of Center Change

By YVONNE FRANKLIN
Mail Tribune
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (Special) — Rep. Edith Green suspects that Office of Economic Opportunity officials were trying to soften her criticisms of Job Corps operations in making their decision to convert the Tongue Point camp for boys into a training center for girls—but it won't work.

She said in an interview this week that she intends to ask for a "independent study" by experts trained in working with disadvantaged girls to see whether Tongue Point is a good site.

Mrs. Green and Rep. Wendell Wyatt characterized the move as "wasteful of taxpayers' money," Wyatt represents the Astoria area where the center is located.

Critical of Costs

Mrs. Green has been critical of the costs of operating the job corps urban centers and also critical of the fact that more girls were not being enrolled. Congress last year wrote into the law that 23 per cent of the total enrollees must be women.

"In view of the criticism, it (the conversion) impresses me as too clever by half," she said. "... there has been criticism of the waste in the program, and yet they take one of the most costly sites in the country with a capacity of 1,200 with the intention of using it for 600 girls.

"If the intention is to keep me from criticizing, I would have to say this is why I am waiting for the study to find out if it is a good site. And if they are going to bus kids from East to West I will continue to be critical."

The change-over was announced last week and the reasons given for the move by OEO officials were: There was no women's job corps in the Northwest; that Congress had told them to increase the percentage of girls; and that the changeover would not be costly.

Fifty girls are expected by late March and 600 by June. Boys are presently being transported to other training camps.

Mrs. Green said that a member of her staff returned by plane from Portland last week along with 30 boys from Tongue Point who were being flown to a center in Kentucky.

She has criticized this practice and the law was changed last year to require that trainees be recruited from areas near the camps to eliminate cross-country "busing."

She noted that "the original task force had said that the centers for girls should be no larger than 100 to 350." Why, then, she asked was it necessary to choose a camp with a capacity for 1,200?

She thought Astoria too far away for on-the-job training for girls. She pointed out that the boys were taken into Portland and Seattle for recreation; would this be done for girls? She also questioned the expense of changing over the equipment used for training boys in automotive and appliance repair and the like.

An OEO official said the decision had not been reached about what to do with the equipment. It said perhaps some of it could be kept at the camp and used to train the girls. He suggested that they could learn to repair appliances and learn to paint cars as well as boys.

Wyatt said he had been told about the changeover after the decision had been made, but that he would be "patient for a few months" because of thanks.

Mrs. Green was told about it last month and objected at that time.

Wyatt said he had been given a figure of $100,000 as the possible cost of conversion. An OEO official said it would be "nominal."

"My reaction to the changeover is that there is a terrific waste of taxpayers money involved here," Wyatt said. "They set this up on a crash basis originally and then completely change direction by 180 degrees with completely different vocational training involved. I don't like the way this is done for the trainees, the disruption of the staff."

JAN 6 - 1967

Youth criticizes conversion at Job Corps center

ASTORIA (UPI) — The student body president at the Tongue Point Job Corps center said Thursday switching the center from a young men's to a young women's facility may result in many young men dropping out of the corps.

Al Bryant, 18, who came here from West Virginia, said trainees had become accustomed to the local facility "and now we're going to have to move again."

He said he believed many would drop out, especially those getting ready to graduate.

Many trainees expressed dissatisfaction at the move.

The Office of Economic Opportunity said the changeover was needed to fill a requirement that 23 per cent of Job Corps enrollees be young women. Tongue Point, the OEO said, was found best suited for conversion.

About 650 young women trainees are expected here, with the changeover due by June.

Some 500 young men are in training here now. They will be moved to other centers.

OREGON
Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco Los Angeles
Bend, Oregon
Wisconsin World
Cir. 4G

JAN 12 1967

New Budget Work Starts

A good portion of Monday night's school board meeting will be devoted to discussion of proposed changes in the administration of the grade and senior high school budget for July.

Budget supervisor Jerry Judy outlined suggested revisions of the next year's budget. Some of the changes are those that will affect the high school level, he said.

The additional funds would be used for such things as teacher salaries, plus the addition of a part-time counselor for advanced students and added.

Judy suggested that a program be established to provide for the knowledge explosion that the [illegible] curriculum should receive [illegible] This would [illegible] by the Oregon state department of education and the University of Oregon to encourage any bugs which might be in the plans.

DEPARTMENT EXPLAINED

Douglas Olds, [illegible] of Tongue Point [illegible], who is now working on the University of Oregon, explained the work of the personnel department of the [illegible] Council and invited the school district to become a member. Research in all fields of ...

--see page 2

Yvonne Franklin Says:

Rep. Edith Green Critical Of Tongue Point Change

WASHINGTON (Special) — Rep. Edith Green suspects that Office of Economic Opportunity officials were trying to soften her criticisms of Job Corps operations in making their decision to convert the Tongue Point camp for boys into a training center for girls—but it won't work.

She said in an interview this week that she intends to ask for a "independent study" by experts trained in working with disadvantaged girls to see whether Tongue Point is a good site.

Mrs. Green and Rep. Wendell Wyatt characterized the move as "wasteful of taxpayers' money," Wyatt represents the Astoria area where the center is located.

Mrs. Green has been critical of the costs of operating the job corps urban centers and also critical of the fact that more girls were not being enrolled. Congress last year wrote into the law that 23 per cent of the total enrollees must be women.

"In view of the criticism, it (the conversion) impresses me as too clever by half," she said. "... there has been criticism of the waste in the program, and yet they take one of the most costly sites in the country with a capacity of 1,200 with the intention of using it for 600 girls.

"If the intention is to keep me from criticizing, I would have to say this is why I am waiting for the study to find out if it is a good site. And if they are going to bus kids from East to West I will continue to be critical."

The change-over was announced last week and the reasons given for the move by OEO officials were: There was no women's job corps in the Northwest; that Congress had told them to increase the percentage of girls; and that the changeover would not be costly.

Fifty girls are expected by late March and 600 by June. Boys are presently being transported to other training camps.

Mrs. Green said that a member of her staff returned by plane from Portland last week along with 30 boys from Tongue Point who were being flown to a center in Kentucky.

She has criticized this practice and the law was changed last year to require that trainees be recruited from areas near the camps to eliminate cross-country "busing."

She noted that "the original task force had said that the centers for girls should be no larger than 100 to 350." Why, then, she asked was it necessary to choose a camp with a capacity for 1,200?

She thought Astoria too far away for on-the-job training for girls. She pointed out that the boys were taken into Portland and Seattle for recreation; would this be done for girls? She also questioned the expense of changing over the equipment used for training boys in automotive and appliance repair and the like.

An OEO official said the decision had not been reached about what to do with the equipment. It said perhaps some of it could be kept at the camp and used to train the girls. He suggested that they could learn to repair appliances and learn to paint cars as well as boys.

Wyatt said he had been told about the changeover after the decision had been made, but that he would be "patient for a few months" because of thanks.

Mrs. Green was told about it last month and objected at that time.

Wyatt said he had been given a figure of $100,000 as the possible cost of conversion. An OEO official said it would be "nominal."

"My reaction to the changeover is that there is a terrific waste of taxpayers money involved here," Wyatt said. "They set this up on a crash basis originally and then completely change direction by 180 degrees with completely different vocational training involved. I don't like the way this is done for the trainees, the disruption of the staff."

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
San Francisco Los Angeles
Mt. Angel News
Mt. Angel, Oregon

JAN 19 1967

UPWARD BOUND CLASSES UNDER WAY AT MAC

Astoria
(Cir. D
JAN 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

00 People Due For Planning of Women's Center

A dozen staff members from U. of Oregon were due at Tongue Point Job Corps Center Friday, headed by Dr. Harold Abel, director of Division of Psychological Services.

They are members of a proposal review committee headed by Dr. Wyatt [illegible] Tongue Point Job Corps [illegible] plan for the new women's Job Corps Center to be launched at Tongue Point in March.

Dr. McAbee said that opportunity will be given all Tongue Point staff members to become involved in the planning, if they wish.

E W [illegible] association director at Tongue Point for vocational education, has been in Fri Washington D.C. this week at head office of Philco-Ford corporation's Tech-Rep division to discuss placement of Philco-Ford personnel on the Tongue Point staff, and new programs for the women's Job Corps center.

Representatives of Oregon Employment service, U. of Oregon, and other men's urban Job Corps Centers were still on the Tongue Point campus Friday, interviewing staff members who may take other jobs.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 46,512 - S 48,290)

AAUW Sets Discussion On Saturday

Eugene Branch, American Association of University Women, will meet Saturday at the England Grill for a 12 o'clock luncheon and a panel discussion.

Speaking will be Jean Spaulding, Wendell Van Loan and Mrs. Burt Eaton. Mrs. Spaulding, who is with the State Department of [illegible] director of [illegible] Center at Tongue Point, will [illegible] Eaton, director of [illegible] Center at Tongue Point, will [illegible] Eaton.

Mrs. Eaton, a member of the Eugene branch and education area representative for the Oregon Division of AAUW, will talk on the "College Faculty Program of AAUW."

Hostess group for the meeting will be the members of the afternoon garden interest group. Further information may be obtained by callint Mrs. William J. Wheeler, 896-3897. Members will be called for reservations.

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
PORTLAND
Seattle
Oregon Legal Press
Portland, Oregon

Last Male Grads At Tongue Point End Center Phase

ASTORIA (AP) — The last 22 male graduates of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center left after a ceremony Friday.

The center will be closed until March, when training will begin for women.

More than 700 men were graduated in the center's two years. Those still in training were transferred earlier to other centers.

Signal
Seaside, Oregon

Job Corps chaplain gives talk

The Women's Service League of the Cannon Beach Community Presbyterian church met Wednesday at the [illegible] hall. Hostesses for dessert luncheon were Mrs. Charles Flory, chairman, Mrs. Robert Little, Mrs. O. [illegible], chairman and Mrs. Parker Jones.

A short business meeting was conducted by Mrs. [illegible] Spencer, president. Mrs. J. W. Sargent, spiritual life chairman, gave the devotionals.

Mrs. Edward Nelson, [illegible] secretary education, [illegible] an, reported on [illegible] who have been [illegible] each.

Mrs. Sargent [illegible] lead an inspirational [illegible] talked [illegible] Am the New Yea.

Rev. [illegible], chaplain at [illegible] Job Corps center, was [illegible] guest speaker. He talked [illegible] and has been [illegible] center since [illegible] speaking [illegible] boys, [illegible] per cent [illegible] and had [illegible]. He [illegible] persons experienced in helping the [illegible] and [illegible] vidual [illegible] told how he works [illegible] and [illegible] fidence [illegible] beater.

Mrs. [illegible] announced that the [illegible] Easter would be held [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] during [illegible] of [illegible], J. W. Sargent. The next [illegible] will be [illegible] Joy Scar [illegible] Ann [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] were [illegible] the Christian [illegible] Schools.

School

--from page 1

ucation is done by this council, and member districts get all of the results in addition to the availability of surveys for local problems. The board agreed to think over the plan and act at the next meeting.

IED SERVICES TOLD

Tom Walker, Coos County Intermediate Education District superintendent, spoke to the board about the services of the IED and urged the members to sign four resolutions seeking continuance of the services now being furnished. Services are furnished in the fields of visual aids, in-service training, attendance and cultural arts. The local district takes advantage of all of these services. The board tabled the request until their next meeting.

FLASHING SIGNALS

Chairman O. S. Valentine reported on the meeting with the Bandon Jaycees and representatives of other organizations concerning the matter of getting a School Crossing flashing signal at the intersection of 10th Avenue and Highway 101 next to Gerry's Restaurant. The highway commission set forth certain terms for the erection of the sign, with the terms to require special action by the city council. If all goes well, the sign could be erected with the highway department arranging the $1300 cost on a 50-50 basis. The Jaycees will spearhead the drive for the installation of the sign. The highway engineers who met with the Bandon group also agreed to install special "School Zone" signs at the June Avenue crossing to Bandon Heights at the north end of town.

ASK NEW BASE SALARY

Board member Marvin McCee reported on the meeting of the board committee with the Bandon Education Association committee on negotiations for a salary schedule for next year. The BEA is asking a base (or starting) salary of $6,000 for beginning teachers with a Bachelor's degree.

The board members agreed that no action could take place until word could be heard from the amount of support to be gained from the State of Oregon this coming year. It was generally agreed that much, if any, increase in property taxes would meet resistance as property tax relief is one of the big issues of the Legislature.

Tentative figures and pages of the 1967-68 budget were put in place in the budget book and Chairman Valentine set a date of Wednesday, Jan. 18, for a special meeting to get the budget ready for consideration by the full budget committee.

PUBLIC HEARING SET

The date for the public hearing on the budget is Tuesday evening, Jan. 24, at 7:30 in the school library. This meeting is an explanation of the 1967-68 budget and any patron or interested person in the district is invited to hear the message to be presented by Superintendent Roland Parks, budget director. Questions may be asked and suggestions will be received at this meeting. Members of the school board and budget committee will be on hand to offer explanations.

The next regular board meeting will be Feb. 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the district office.

Hope's Seasonal Visit Telecast

By LINDA DAHL
TV Editor

Filmed highlights of Bob Hope's ... Christmas tour of U.S. troops overseas will again be color-cast tonight on the NBC television network this year. Air time is 9 p.m. on Wednesday.

Hope and company left Los Angeles International Airport on Dec. 16 and returned home on Dec. 30. During the days between he spent his third Christmas in Vietnam, his 15th overseas entertaining American troops, during the 25 years in which he has performed for the servicemen at home and abroad.

Accompanying Hope on the 23,000-mile tour were Phyllis Diller, Vic Damone, Joey Heatherton, Anita Bryant, the Korean Kittens, Les Brown and his Band of Renown and India's Rema Fatat. Miss World. Included on the schedule were stops in Guam, Thailand and the Philippines as well as in Vietnam. Tailoring the program is Chrysler Presents the Bob Hope Christmas Special.

The following evening, Thursday at 10 p.m. ABC channels 2-9, will relate as a special documentary recording the bravery and devotion of thousands of doctors, nurses and helicopter crewmen who exchanged their own lives each day while evacuating and treating the wounded in ...

Entitled To Save a Soldier, the program will relate ... cast on Oct. 28 ... and screen actor Henry Fonda and narrator as the movement ... and treatment of one wounded American soldier from the time he ... fire to the ... happily ... at the ... Army ... Stage 67 this ...

Also on Thursday evening, ... in the local cable TV ... item will have an open ... at 7 p.m. to hear a half-hour ... of city ... in Coronado ... Valley 1967. The ... 120 year ... will be the ... topic of ... Rebekah ... leader ... was also be featured.

All good tv story fans will be happy to hear that The Avengers is back. Picked by ABC (ensannels 2-9) last summer as filler material, the import quickly proved so popular that the network was persuaded to order it back during the Second Season. Air time will be Fridays at 10 p.m. Originally seen in black and white, the series has switched to color. Starring are Diana Rigg as Mrs. Peel and Patrick Macnee as John Steed.

Cinderella, an original musical written by Richard Rodgers and the late Oscar Hammerstein II, is on television, will be color-casting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. on channel 6.

Starring in this version of the old fable, which should delight young and old alike, are Ginger Rogers, Walter Pidgeon, Celeste Holm, Jo Van Fleet, Stuart Damon, Pat Carroll, Barbara Ruick and Ann Warren. Cinderella is played by ...

On Sunday at 9 p.m. channel 6 will be televising another Carol Plus Two special starring Carol Burnett and guest Lucille Ball and Zero Mostel.

In other recently scheduled ... Sen. Wayne L. Morse ... will be featured guest on ... News Conference ... from 6:30 ... p.m. and Sunday at 10 a.m. The Vietnam war, Tongue Point Job Corps Center and the "Creamery Gap" will be discussed.

PUTTING ON AN ACT . . . Dainty Lucie Star of The Borrump-Bump Show color-casting Wednesday on the NBC television network at 8 (3) will perform as a magician during one segment of the comedy special ... Also appearing will be recording star Vikki Carr and actress Barbara Eden.

Reps. Green, Wyatt Charge Waste In Tongue Point Center Conversion

BY YVONNE FRANKLIN

... that Office of Economic Opportunity officials were trying to soften her criticism of Job ... their decision to convert the Tongue Point camp for boys into a training center for girls ... but it won't work.

She said in an interview ... decision was made, and that ... girls into Portland and Seattle for recreation. She also questioned the expense of changing boys in automotive and appliance repair and ... (OEO) officials said the ...

Objection Voiced

Mrs. Green has been critical of the costs of operating the Job Corps urban centers and also has protested the fact that more girls were not being ... member of her staff returned by plane from Portland ... week along with 30 boys ... flown to a center in Kentucky. She has criticized the practice ... said the law was changed ...

Why, then, she asked was it necessary to choose a camp ... with a capacity for 1,200 ... said the center will ... 45,000 girls ... said ...

... cism of the waste in the program, and yet they take one of the most costly sites in the county with a capacity of 1,200 with the intention of using it for 600 girls . . .

"If the intention is to keep me from criticizing, I would have to say this is why I am asking for the study to find out if it is a good site. And if ...

Last Of Tongue Point Trainees Graduating

ASTORIA (UPI)—The last 20 trainees at the Tongue Point men's Job Corp center were to graduate today.

The center is to be converted to a women's training facility.

Some Stay, Others Leave In Conversion At Tongue Point Job Corps Center

... opened a bottle of wine I'm going to do. I'd like to ... all of these kids, yet we ... the ... school ... wish I started them good ... go back into public ... are spending a lot of money here ... Portland ... Mrs. Burton I. (Betty) ... Corps center in Oregon or Wash. ... to see that ... counselor at the ... to ... of pulling ... region. But it's a sad time of ... local school districts will learn ... others, ... perplexed ... one year to find a job from these programs and on her ... attention to ... assume ... they might say ... after job ... would have "backlash" ... have to be temporary until ... cuss ...

There were the attitudes ... could get me established ... found when random ... made by The Oregonian to ... again. I suppose I'll have to ... staff members at the Tongue ... make a couple of changes ... Point Job Corps Center ... before I get settled again," ... said ...

Saturday was the day when ... said he learned of the ... many of the staff members ... conversion from his ... received letters ... them ... about five days before ... that (1) were fired, (2) ... Job Corps officials announced ... You're rehired ... the proposed transition Jan. ...

It was part of what staff ... Disappointment Seen ... to refer ... as "the ... disappointment ... "I'm a little disappointed ... the conversion of the ... from what was ... the Point facility from ... was intended. I think ... the ... to a women's training ... I felt put in better ... center.

Day Brightened

It was a bright day in the ... when Mrs. Burton ... board of directors ... and ... Mrs. ... for seven months. ... years before ... the Job Corps ...

Best news of the ... Dave Callahan, 23, who was ... to stay on for the ... with ... program ... Callahan ... at first for the ... Many ... they were plan ... said the situation ... reversed into a blessing ... Callahan ... another tongue ... with some friends and ... taking new ... Rich ... who has been working ... a counselor ... will ... as a counselor ... taught math at the center.

The news, he said, "relieved a ... of pressure."

"We've all been quite anxious ... lots about the ... not knowing ... what it was going to be," Mike ... said.

"We can go ahead and pay ... our bills now," he added, jokingly.

It was a different story in the home of David Rich, 30, father of three youngsters ranging in ages from 5 to 9.

Some Not Hired

Rich, a physical education ... instructor and coach at the ... center, was not rehired. Today ... said: "To my knowledge ... three staff members of the ... academic staff received ... notice ... releases.

He was concerned about ... future.

"Teaching is in the ... now. I don't know ...

Superintendents Hit

In leaving, Callahan left a parting shot aimed at Oregon school superintendents.

"To my knowledge ... not one school superintendent ... in Oregon or any boards of education have come to visit Tongue Point to ... themselves with what we have ... about the high school drop-out. The Job Corps is funded for a maximum of 45,000 young men and women. ... in June ... 30,000 dropouts ... e nation. Quite obviously ... Job Corps cannot begin to ...

Culinary gets contract at Tongue Point

ASTORIA—When the Tongue Point Job Corps center ... operation ... reported Wednesday ... by the Culinary Alliance.

Before the ... down ... a Local ... ing ... all ... nary Alliance 11 signed a contract with the employing agency, the University of Oregon, which operates the center. Signing for the alliance were Mrs. Frances Hoare, ... secretary, and Walter ... international ... organizer for the Hotel ... of Portland. ... Burtenshaw, ... for ... agreement was the university president, Dr. Arthur Flemming.

Mrs. Hoare and Lofgren conducted the organizing campaign and the negotiations, which began after the alliance won two elections. One in which the employees selected their bargaining agency and a second under the new state law covering civil service em...

53 Fired, 77 Rehired In Tongue Point Shift

ASTORIA ... Fifty-three members of the ... academic staff at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center here ... notified Friday they ... have been fired, and ... even sent letters that they have been rehired.

The action was part of the conversion of the center from a men's to a women's training site.

... staff members ... said.

Eleven notices went out giving personnel indications that they could be rehired under a new contract being negotiated by the University of Oregon and the Office of Economic Opportunity for operation of ...

... pay during the transition period, officials said. Those not rehired also received 90 days' notice and ... help ... assistance in securing new jobs through the U of O Placement Bureau.

There are 141 academic staff members on the center's roster. Employes also include 222 civil service workers and 53 with Philco-Ford Corporation, which has the sub-contract for the center's operation.

Center spokesmen said that 91 civil service employes have been notified that they will be laid off. The remainder will be phased out according to the ...

... employes will be let go, the remainder retained until further notice. Only the Philco-Ford employees will receive severance pay.

Center spokesmen said that some rehiring will be done within coming weeks, as further details of the women's program are worked out. Much of the new hirings will be between the ages of 16 and 21 — are expected to begin arriving at the center by mid-March or, possibly, later that month. About 650 young women will be accommodated at the center when the new operation is in full swing.

Job Corps Training Plan Set

ASTORIA ... courses for the women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point have been outlined by a ... view committee after session ... this week.

Courses proposed by Philco Ford Corp., subcontractor for vocational training, ... include business - clerical ... service occupations, including ... cial service; ... a ... work ... of Oregon ... courses in ... pations and commercial art.

A tentative plan will be submitted to Office of Economic Opportunity by Feb. 1. Philco Ford and UO will submit the entire contract proposal for operation of the center by Feb. 10. Negotiations on cost ... details begin in March.

College Teams Have Games On the Road

Since the ... Point athletic ... program has ... losing ... from ... of ... meet that ... Tongue ... college ... junior ... basketball ... have ... waged ... tests on their ... and ... school ... Mr. ... fine ... last ... sup ... juniors ... went to ... Longview ... a Saturday ... game ... Coach ... said ... the ... Longview ... game ... quint ... played ... January ... Remaining ... to ... date ... are ... Tongue ... February ... and ... March ... games ... with ... Mount ... Hood ... Community ... College ... of ... Portland ... on ... the ... road ... Friday, ... the ... George ... Fox ... players ... on ... the ... latter's ... court. ... There ... is ... no ... Saturday ... game ... on ... tap.

Job Corpsmen Build Many Fishing Trails

Salmon ... steelhead ... fishermen ... will ... that ... Tillamook ... Job ... Corps ... crews ... and ... Forest ... crews ... have ... 20 ... miles ... of ... trails ... at ... the ... Nestucca ... River ... just ... below ... Spruce ... Run ... Park ... downstream ... to ... the ... Meyer ... bridge.

... and ... crew ... members ... recently ... completed ... trails ... that ... have ... worked ... through ... trees, ... over ... rocks ... and ... fallen ... timber ... to ... the ... river. ... Where ... necessary, ... brush ... was ... also ... cleared ... for ... considerable ... distances ... to ... provide ... adequate ... room ... for ... casting. ... Where ... the ... trail ... nears ... the ... river, ... platforms ... are ... built ... that ... fishermen ... may ... stand ... for ... greater ... distances ... and ... more ... easily ... as ... possible. ... Tillamook ... signs ... have ... been ... posted ... at ... intervals ... along ... the ... trails ... to ... mark ... the ... "take-off" ... points ... of ... these ... trails.

The trail-building ... a co-operative effort ... the Game Commission, ... Bureau ... of ... Land Management, ... State ... Board ... of ... Forestry ... and ... Tillamook ... County ... Boy ... Scout ... Council ... for ... the ... game ... commission ... was ... Bob ... Bennett, ... the ... BLM ... Tillamook ... area ... project ... Trail ... Coordinator, ... under ... the ... direction ... of ... Jim ... Wallace, ... of ... the ... Tillamook ... Job ... Corps ... center.

Last Graduates Leave Astoria

ASTORIA (AP) — The last 22 male graduates of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center left after a ceremony Friday.

The center will be closed until March, when training will begin for women.

More than 700 men were graduated in the center's two years. Those still in training were transferred earlier to other centers.

Last 'Grads' Leave

ASTORIA (AP) — The last male graduates of Tongue Point Job Corps Center left Friday and 53 members of the academic staff received notice they would not be retained. The center is being converted into one for women. Notices also were sent to 222 academic employes who will be retained in the new program. A few of the 222 civil service employes also were dismissed.

Tongue Point To Graduate Last Group Of 20 Job Corpsmen Before Women Take Over

... Tony have been "the best in my ... ASTORIA ... Job ... life."

Why?

"Because I learned many ... things and I got to meet many ... 20 in the last ... I've ... graduated ... last ... never ... coming ... now, ... ter with the first ... to ... the ... opened ... The ... two years he said, I ... Tony never did make it ... on office on the center's ... student body.

"But I volunteered for a lot ... projects," he said.

... farming volunteer duties ... he left," Tony said. He said he did maintenance ... work there — "washing windows, watering the lawn." Tony's brother, Steve, ... Steve didn't like the ... I don't know why.

... so ... Steve, Tony said, is now ... and does road ... work.

... Force," he said. ... Tony completed a general ... automotive course at the ... center. He wants to "go I'd change ... language, not only here at the ... center but in town. This shows ... he said Tony, a high school drop-out. "I hope it will."

... ers and supervis ... could would try to change,' said ... informal ceremonies.

... I receive their certificates in ... Then the corpsmen will be ... to ... be okay for me from now on," ... they have no respect for the present, when the "corpsmen" ...

Last 22 Tongue Point Graduates Get Certificates

The last 22 of more than 700 [illegible] at the Tongue Point Job Corps center received their certificates and a set of books at final graduation exercises in the center library Friday morning.

The [illegible] had remained to complete their training, after the rest of the 700 corpsmen had left the center following graduation of part of the Corps at Tongue Point [illegible] months ago.

Speakers at the ceremony, which was attended by [illegible] staff members and the last group of graduates, included Mayor Harry Steinbock of Astoria and Dr. Wendell Van Loan, center director, who presented the certificates and gifts of books.

It was the first graduation at Tongue Point to receive the [illegible] with all 30 Job Corps centers.

Visitors wished good luck to the graduates.

Among the graduating corpsmen was Ellis Banks who lives near Richmond, Va., and said he had found the training here valuable.

"It has been pretty nice here, once I got used to the rain," said Banks who spent 19 months studying engine repair work at Tongue Point.

Some of [illegible] small engines such as are used in lawn mowers and chain saws, if he can find a suitable job back home in Virginia.

"But I already have offers of [illegible] jobs as a motorcycle mechanic," he said.

Tony Pacheco, 19, who was among the first group of trainees to arrive at Tongue Point two years ago, was also in the last group of graduates.

Pacheco, who said he hates to leave because Tongue Point has been like home the past two years, plans to visit his former home in Walsenburg, Colo., where he has relatives, and then join the US Air Force. He hopes to become a diesel engine mechanic in the Air Force.

Tony Pacheco, who was one of the first Job Corpsmen to arrive at Tongue Point in February, 1965, receives his certificate and a set of books from Dr. Wendell Van Loan, Job Corps Center director, at final graduation exercises of the men's center Friday morning. At right is Ernest Lareau assistant director.

Observer
LaGrande, Oregon
Cir. D. 3,517)

JAN 1967

Allen's P C B Est 1888

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 6,960)

JAN 2 1967

Allen's P.C.B.

Daily Astorian

JAN 2 7 1967

Allen's P.C.B.

Job Corps Visit Due

ASTORIA (UPI) — [illegible] Beverly Washington, assistant director of the Job Corps, [illegible] will visit the Tongue Point Job Corps center today. [illegible] Job Corps chief by Tongue Point [illegible] center for young men to train for young women.

News digest

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

SPOKANE — Wreckage of an Air Force KC 135 jet tanker plane missing with nine men aboard was found today on a ridge three miles southeast of Mt. Spokane. There was no sign of survivors. Only one body was sighted.

BRISBANE, AUSTRALIA — A group of anti-war demonstrators broke through police barriers today and attempted to mob South Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky. The group shouted at and cursed the visiting official, but caused him no bodily harm.

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Dean Rusk, in a letter made public today, asked FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to stop opposing ratification of a Soviet-American consular treaty, stalled in the Senate. Hoover's testimony a year ago that the treaty would make FBI counter-espionage work more difficult is generally believed responsible for the Senate's failure to ratify the agreement.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Frank Sinatra has been subpoenaed to appear next week before a federal grand jury investigation of the alleged "skimming" of gambling profits in Nevada gambling casinos, it was learned today. In 1963 the singer lost his licenses for casinos at Lake Tahoe and Las Vegas for entertaining Chicago underworld figure Sam Giancana at the Lake Tahoe casino.

SALEM — A hearing scheduled in La Grande and Baker on a proposed new community college district Feb. 7 has been cancelled by the State Board of Education. A new hearing date and time will be set by the board at its meeting in Eugene next month, probably in April.

ASTORIA — The last 20 trainees at the Tongue Point men's Job Corps center were to graduate today. The center is to be converted to a women's training facility.

Staff Cut 97 At Tongue Point; More Will Go

Reduction of staff at Tongue Point Job Corps Center was in progress but not yet complete this week.

Of 141 academic staff members, employees of University of Oregon, 77 last weekend received notices they will be rehired, and 53 were released with 90 days notice. Eleven are still in doubt, with retiring dependent on what is final determination as to size of staff.

Of 420 civil service workers, 31 have been laid off with two weeks notice, most of them in special service and group life positions. More will be laid off as their services are no longer needed, but number is still undetermined.

Of 53 Philco-Ford company employees, most of them vocational instructors, 13 have been given two weeks notice and many of the others will be terminated as their work of wrapping up vocational phases of the men's Job Corps program ends. This makes a total 97 terminated out of total staff of 414.

It is expected that the staff at the women's center to be established in March will be around 260, with a possible maximum of 300. [illegible]17 still on the payroll, it is [illegible] there will be more layoffs.

Philco-Ford company is finding new positions either in other Philco plants or with other firms for most of its laid-off people. Many of the academic staff will find school jobs of go to other Job Corps centers. Recruiters from other centers were [illegible] applicants and some of them are expected to return this week for more interviews.

Women's Job Corps Director Expected Here

[illegible] of the women's division of the Job Corps, is expected [illegible] Tongue Point within the next few days, the Daily Astorian learned [illegible].

Job Corps officials declined to confirm the report and Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of Tongue Point Center was absent on a weekend visit to University of Oregon officials in Eugene.

The visit presumably is for inspection of the facilities prior to establishing a women's center there in March.

Accompanying Dr. Washington will be leaders of the Women in Community Service organization which does recruiting and screening of applicants for women's Job Corps Centers.

Dr. Salma Lippeatt, assistant to Dr. Washington, who visited Tongue Point at the time conversion to a women's center was announced also is expected to be in the party.

Dr. Ray Hawk of University of Oregon will also be here for consultations with Dr. Washington. After a day or so here, the party is expected to go to Eugene for consultations with University of Oregon officials regarding terms of a new contract for operation of the women's center.

Writer Backs Poverty Program

(Paul Weeks has just returned to the Los Angeles Times staff after a one-year leave of absence to serve with the Office of Economic Opportunity.)

By PAUL WEEKS
The Los Angeles Times

"The reports of my death," Mark Twain once wrote in an eye-twinkling cable to an [illegible] wire service, "are greatly exaggerated."

Neither have the [illegible] poverty given up the [illegible] There is a pallor in their [illegible] the legion of doomsayers are [illegible] long the bier awash in [illegible]

Congressional [illegible] and administrative flat, in reaction principally to the so-called backlash, may retard the antipoverty effort in the guise of "reform" and "readjustment."

Some charges undoubtedly are called for. No revolutionaries ever charted the perfect campaign, nor anything near it.

But can my political party long sustain advocacy of "just a little bit of surrender" in the War on Poverty?

Idea Strong

An idea — the participation of the low-income people in re-shaping their destiny — has caught fire across the land.

It still may not be readily visible from the affluent side of the tracks. But as a field representative of the Office of Economic Opportunity throughout 1966, I saw it blaze up in darkest West Oakland, on the barren stretches of the Navaja Indian reservation in Arizona, and among the rain-sodden shacks of Tacoma.

In 1965, the fire was chaotic and destructive on Watts' "Charcoal Alley." In 1966, it burned high in the pride of some erstwhile rioters transformed into the security patrol for the Watts festival parade and its grand marshal, Sargent Shriver, chief of the War on Poverty.

The fire is started. It can burn controlled — or run wild.

Shriver last summer put it this way:

Hope Needed

"When men lose hope of creating a future for themselves and for their families, they inevitably reach for weapons. When men are denied the tools and skills of human change, they are easily persuaded that the only way to change is through violence.

"Alternatives to violence are at hand. They consist of the tools of responsible change. Some of the tools—admittedly not yet in supply to meet the demand — are offered by the Office of Economic Opportunity."

That was last summer. The tools will be in even shorter supply next summer.

The transition of a neglected segment of society into full participation has not, and will not, be made without conflict any more than a human being can emerge from dependency and parental domination into self-confident and responsible adulthood without steering through the turbulence of rebellious self-assertion.

Today's "go slow" signs in the War on Poverty are interpreted widely as the politicians' response to the backlash.

Cynicism Comes

But around the antipoverty projects, especially among militant Negroes, new cynicism abounds. They had been suspicious when the program was launched, but ultimately they up-toed into it. Now they say:

"The Man' said we could trust him this time to mean what he said. But you see? We can't."

The burden of the immediate cost of the War on Poverty is not so threatening to the middle class as is the widespread fear of a ragatag new political constituency to be dealt with, which overshadows the long-range goals:

Breaking the cycle of generations on welfare rolls, reducing crime, disease, illiteracy and human degradation — goals which are in the self-interest of a nation, not just a segment of it.

From a year of criss-crossing "the tracks" every day, I am convinced that communication between individuals of our economic classes and our races is still very tenuous and lack of it perpetuates distrust and fear.

Gap Told

The middle class, socially-conscious man can keep abreast of the news, read all the learned journals, devour the latest textbooks — but until he has immersed himself in the surroundings of poverty and come to a mutual first name basis with some of its residents, he will lack the understanding that comes with emotional involvement.

There is a lack of communication in the other direction, too. It is illustrated by the experience of a white professional in the War on Poverty who felt he had established at least some rapport with poor Negro residents.

A Negro friend, intending his remark as a compliment but unconscious of the ingrained prejudice it belied, said to him:

"Man, you're just not a white man."

Too often, the middle class still tends to see the antipoverty effort through the eyes of the do-gooder, eager to bestow his values and (a little of) his affluence upon the poor, benighted poor.

Because his is a moral approach, he is dismayed when his offers to make over the poor in his own middle-class image are spurned.

And that leads to [illegible] kindled out of old prejudices: the poor are lazy; the Negro race is lazy; they are [illegible] able, criminal behavior is a racial trait rather than a product of environment.

Living briefly with Job Corpsmen at Tongue Point, Ore., with admittedly too small a sampling to draw broad conclusions, I found white youths more passive and dependent than the Negroes.

The whites were the individual misfits, the rejects, of a competitive culture. The Negroes were less prone to regard themselves as individual rejects than as a group to whom the doors of the larger society had been closed.

Nationally, self-assertion of the Negro began on a broad scale after thousands had emerged from Southern rural isolation into Northern war plants and into the GI barracks of World War II.

TV Important

And for almost 20 years the children of poverty have stared into a television screen which has drilled into them—whether in soap opera, newscast or commercial — what 'The Man' has that they have not had.

To the newly-aroused poor, the job-training and the compensatory education provided by the War on Poverty no more represent generosity on the part of the nation than does the Supreme Court school desegregation decision of 1954. Both are viewed as long-neglected entitlements belatedly recognized.

The do-gooder anticipating gratitude may not even know he still feels a need to be superior — and nobody is thanking him anymore.

So, it usually isn't the War on Poverty itself which draws fire nowadays, but the alleged excesses of it, the assertedly inefficient administration. The charge that it is not hitting the target is as frequently heard in the target areas as it is in suburbia.

The tub-thumpers in the Office of Economic Opportunity will enthusiastically cite a head count as to how many millions of persons the programs have "reached" with the limited investments we have made.

Who really will know how many have been "reached" until the years ahead have brought in the returns from the children in Head Start, the welfare recipients in "Work-Experience," the youth in Job Corps.

Conversely, the detractors say you can put a son through Yale at less expense than the government puts a youth through Job Corps training.

Cost High

But suppose the ivy were just sprouting around a new Yale arising overnight, suddenly commissioned to accept for enrollment what society previously had regarded as the most helpless dropouts and kickouts and told to make productive citizens of them?

What would the per capita cost be then?

More important, if no effort were made, what would society's costs be over these youths' lifetime in welfare payments, criminal correction, slum clearance and wasted lives? A 50 per cent success obviously would be an overwhelming victory.

The same detractors who accuse the new programs of playing fast and loose with taxpayers' money will, in the same breath, damn the OEO as a fat government bureaucracy, taking the money away from the poor.

If mismanagement and even corruption occasionally emerge, no one is more sensitive to the figures than the too-thinly-spread "bureaucrats," trying to cover too many bases.

Nowhere have I seen more dedication, over all, than in the ranks of the OEO's professionals. Lights burned into the night and weekdays blended into weekends — at least until the word "cutback" entered the jargon and morale sagged.

With a defensive public relations stance, OEO has on occasion been too reluctant to face up publicly to its mistakes, and suffered, consequently, when its eager critics exposed them and embroidered them as much as OEO would minimize them.

If the poverty warriors have "oversold" the programs and aroused expectations beyond fulfillment, it was with the anticipation that successes would lead to an increased national effort.

A country that has spent $35 billion to $40 billion annually in the old welfare cycle cannot be expected to break it overnight with an annual investment of less than $2 billion in Economic Opportunity Act funding.

Those who have been inside the War on Poverty are likely to find themselves in the position of a person who has thrilled to a stage performance — only to read the critic's review the next day, listing its technical imperfections.

Memories Seen

But in the long run, the critic's enumeration of the flaws diminish and one remembers:

The North Fontana Negro woman with several fatherless children, who told excitedly of spending some of her first antipoverty programs paycheck to buy rat poison and a fly-resistant screen door . . .

The 17-year-old Mexican-American in East Los Angeles, dazzled by the world opening up to him as he learns to read and write . . .

The hillbilly from Kentucky — a white lad in the Tongue Point Job Corps—playing a mountain tune for his roommates on a guitar he made with his own hands . . .

The aged, toothless Navajo, crawling out of her windowless, dirt-floor hogan, to show you the new one of stone masonry being erected for her by 10 erstwhile unemployed Navajo men, learning the building trade.

And the Head Start children everywhere.

These are the victories.

TONGUE POINT Job Corps center where the author of the accompanying article spent some time, has just been ordered changed from an all-boys program to an all-girls center. This 1963 photo shows a radio class. Students are George Walker, Michigan; George Hooper, Kentucky; Terry Greene, Chicago, and Minday Ray Johnson, Seattle. KJOB broadcast only for the Job Corps Center campus.

Tacoma, Wash.
News-Tribune
(Cir. D. 88,811 - S. 84,388)

JAN 2 1

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Last Male Grads Leave Tongue Point Center

ASTORIA (AP) — The last 22 male graduates of the Tongue [illegible] center left [illegible] Notices went out Friday to 77 members of the academic staff [illegible] had been rehired for [illegible] civil service employees were also [illegible] fired, but most were rehired. More than 700 men were graduated in the center's two years [illegible]

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 6,960)

JAN 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

FORMER JOB CORPSMAN LOCAL GIRL TO WED

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jonart announce the engagement of their daughter Carolyn Ray to William M. Fisher. Wheeling, W. Va. The wedding will be held at the home of the bride-elect's parents February 5. The groom-elect formerly at Tongue Point [illegible] stationed with the Job Corps [illegible]

Two Philco-Ford Employes Get New Assignments

Transfer of two Philco-Ford employes from Tongue Point Job Corps Center to other assignments with the company have been announced by Ernest W. Lareau, head of the firm's operation at the center.

Robert Franklin, an administrative assistant in the automotive repair instructional department, will go to Saigon, South Vietnam, as a senior employment specialist for Philco-Ford. Charles Hudson, instructor in appliance repair, will be sent [illegible]

LAST GRADUATES LEAVE

[illegible] Tongue Point Job Corps center [illegible] Friday and [illegible] Staff [illegible] being [illegible] women. Next [illegible] be those of the [illegible] A few [illegible] and [illegible] serve employees were [illegible]

60 Start Upward Bound Work at Mt. Angel

By TOM WRIGHT
Statesman Staff Writer

MOUNT ANGEL — A welfare "widow" with four young children, a migrant couple with a one-month old baby, and 57 other varieties, shapes and sizes of high school dropouts with a yen to get back in orbit launched Mount Angel's Upward Bound program Monday.

Classes don't actually begin here at Mount Angel College until Wednesday, but Monday was setting in day for most of the 60 who are undertaking the eight - month, federally sponsored program.

Five To Room

The 28 single girls were moving in, five to a room, in the ground-floor wing of Mount Angel Towers. The men were being housed, temporarily, four to a unit at Fairway Manor Motel at Woodburn until their dormitory facilities are available in about a month.

The group's only married members, Jesus and Jesusa Rodriquez, of Texas by way of Stayton, were located in a nearby apartment, and Mrs. Barbara Smith and her four youngsters at Salbimity were in a house in Gervais.

Orientation and testing is on the schedule for the new arrivals Tuesday. Last of the 60, including four girls from a Los Angeles Job Corps center, are due to arrive on campus Tuesday, also.

Staff of Nine

Program Director Gary Lansing and his staff of nine, including four fulltime teachers, were busy Monday handing registrations and meeting some minor unforseen problems.

One paradoxical "hang-up" in the girls housing was the shortage of clothes hangars.

The staff, with the help of 10 student aides who will live with the Upward Bound enrollees, hope to get the 60 back on the education track. First objective for many will be the equivalent of a high school education. Some will be headed for college studies here at Mount Angel College and elsewhere.

Announcement of the program several months ago, prompted some critical reaction from regular college students who feared an influx of dirty beards and switchblades. But to the outsider at least, it was impossible to tell the newcomers from the regularly enrolled students.

The 60, mostly from Oregon include 20 from the Youth Opportunity Center in Portland, 10 from Tongue Point Job Corps Center, seven from the Valley Migrant League at Woodburn, Timber Lake Job Corps Center at Estacada, MacLaren School for Boys, Hillcrest School for Girls, Dallas and Estacada

Harmonious Start (WOODBURN) This quartet of former Job Corps trainees settled down in harmony Monday in a hotel unit here. Arec Jones, Cleveland, Ohio, Jim Schoppert, Juneau, Alaska, Kevin Terhune, Lincoln, Neb., and Al Bryant, Smithers, W. Va., will be here until a new dormitory is provided at Mount Angel where they are enrolled in the Upward Bound program.

Parents to Study (MOUNT ANGEL) Youngest involved in the Mount Angel Upward Bound project here could care less. She's one-month-old Jesusa Linda Rodriquez, with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Rodriquez, Stayton. Baby care is being provided so her parents, 20 and 18, can both attend classes.

To Start Again (MOUNT ANGEL) Crowded, but content, Monday in Mount Angel Tower living units were five of 60 high school dropouts who are beginning eight months of school here. Seated (left to right) are Zola Vandolah, Dallas, and Janice Starnes, Portland. Standing are Joyce Starnes, Portland Kris Wilson, Pendleton, and Barbara Dumas, Portland. (Statesman Photos by Tom Wright.)

Still Makes No Sense

As the final Job Corpsmen leave Tongue Point, just a bare two years from the date of establishment of this institution, many people are still wondering why the Office of Economic Opportunity wiped it out.

Many people also continue to be appalled at this example of the casual attitude of a federal agency toward the taxpayers' money.

No logical reason has yet been presented, in the weeks following the cancellation, for the apparently whimsical and undoubtedly arbitrary action of the OEO.

The cancellation makes no sense. If the OEO was in a hurry to provide a higher ratio of women to men in the Job Corps, as they are required to do by federal law with June 30 as deadline, why couldn't they have started a new women's center somewhere else? Why wreck an institution like Tongue Point which, after two years of trial and error, seemed to be finding itself as a useful institution?

The only explanation of this action which makes any sense is still the one suggested when the closure was first announced so abruptly—it was a snide political blow at Rep. Edith Green, for demanding more women be trained.

If this explanation isn't true the OEO no doubt will have the opportunity to provide a better one when Mrs. Green launches the inquiry that she said she would demand.

The OEO officials who came out here to announce the conversion of Tongue Point to a woman's Job Corps center said the conversion would cost, all told, less than $100,000. This estimate seems ridiculously low the more one thinks about it. Possibly $100,000 would cover the freight charges of shipping some of the boats, automotive machinery and other equipment to other Job Corps Centers. But would it also cover the lost investment in preparing quarters, furniture, kitchen and other facilities for up to 1000 corpsmen, when only 650 women trainees are scheduled to come here?

Would it cover the money invested in the 100 or so Job Corpsmen who quit and went home when closure of Tongue Point was announced, giving this as their reason?

No, $100,000 doesn't seem to come close to covering all the costs involved in a move that, weeks after it was announced, still seems purely whimsical and unnecessary.

If this waste of public funds is characteristic of the War on Poverty generally, no wonder it is coming under increasing criticism.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,390)

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Judge Permits Youth to Enter Armed Services

A 19-year-old Tongue Point Job Corps graduate, Charles Otto Hall, discovered several friends when he appeared in Clatsop circuit court Monday to plead guilty to statutory rape.

The youth, represented by Larry Dean, court appointed attorney, heard his former cadre supervisor speak in his behalf and the district attorney state his assent to Dean's plea for the court to show leniency.

Product of a broken home and raised in a Chicago orphanage from age 5 to 17, the youth professed a desire to enter the army. Dean said Hall was 1-A in the draft and passed his army physical recently.

Richard Price, who supervised Hall's work at Tongue Point, told the court he would be personally responsible for getting the youth to the Portland army induction center.

Deputy John M. West of the sheriff's department also stated that Hall had been a cooperative jail resident and caused no trouble.

Hall is currently serving six months in county jail on conviction for larceny. He is also on three years probation.

Circuit Judge Pro Tem Harold Johnson, hearing no objections from District Attorney Frank Coumont, suspended imposition of prison sentence and continued Hall's probation until the youth enters the armed services.

Spokane, Wash.
Chronicle
(Cir. 71,085)

JAN 4 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women to Train

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria will train women instead of men. Negotiations are under way between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon, operator of the center, now housing 500 young men.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,390)

JAN 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Talk on Women's Job Corps Dated

Community relations council of Tongue Point Job Corps Center will meet tonight at 8 in Tongue Point administration building to hear discussion of the pending establishment of a woman's urban Job Corps center there.

Charles Vandergrift and Jesse McElroy of the community relations staff from Job Corps headquarters in Washington D. C., were in town Tuesday and will be on hand at the meeting to help explain the program, along with center director Dr. Wendell Van Loan.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,390)

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women to Come Tuesday For Look at Tongue Pt.

Dr. Bernice [illegible] director of women's Job Corps centers, will be at Tongue Point Tuesday with the head of the women's organizations concerned in recruiting and screening women for the Job Corps.

The party will include Mrs. Marcus Kilch, Youngstown, O., president of WICS (Women In Community Service), and executive president of the National Council of Catholic Women; Mrs. John D. Shields, Strong, Pa., president of Catholic Women; Mrs. Joseph Willen, New York, president of National Council of Jewish Women; Miss Dorothy I. Height, New York, president of National Council of Negro Women, and Mrs. Stuart E. Sinclair, president of Church Women United, a Protestant women's organization.

These agencies combine to form WISC, which screens job candidates for women's Job Corps centers.

Also with the party will be Ernest Gross, head of community relations work for Office of Economic Opportunity.

"These women, who have a strong and deep interest in Job Corps Centers, have seen many of our other facilities," Mrs. Washington said before leaving the national capital. "They want to get a first hand look at Tongue Point."

The party will fly from Washington to Portland Monday evening and will be met there by Dr. Wendell Van Loan, Tongue Point director, and Dr. Ray Hawk of University of Oregon. They will come to Tongue Point by car Tuesday morning.

Tuesday night the party will go on to Eugene and spend much of Wednesday there conferring with University of Oregon officials.

Monday Tongue Point had other visitors. Dr. Betty Soldwedel, head of the department of counseling and guidance at New York University, and Ben Sandled OEO project manager from Washington, D. C.

They scheduled a round of meetings with staff personnel to discuss plans for the women's Job Corps urban center to be established at Tongue Point in late March.

OREGON
Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTAND
Seattle
San Francisco Los Angeles
Canadian agents:
Portland, Oregon
JAN 20 1967

FIRST ARRIVALS at Mt. Angel college for "Upward Bound" program came to the campus early this week. Sixty students will take part in project.

Mt. Angel College Receives 'Upward Bound' Enrollees

MT ANGEL — Sixty high school dropouts from socially and economically deprived families arrived this week on the campus of Mt. Angel college.

They will spend the next eight weeks in Mt. Angel's Upward Bound program preparing to continue their education.

Most of the students are from Oregon and all but three will live in dormitories provided by the college. The three who won't are a 22-yearold woman, the mother of four children, whose husband deserted his family, and a young married couple with a baby. They are getting help for their children from the state welfare commission [illegible] will qualify for their high school diploma equivalencies in classes taught by four teachers attached to the Upward Bound staff. Part of the students' learning will be from numerous field trips to legislative sessions in Salem, to businesses and industries, to museums and art galleries.

LATER students will be enrolled in college preparatory courses taught in part by members of the college faculty. Those who complete the courses may take college-level work on the campus.

Those selected for the program underwent extensive screening to determine their capability for learn[illegible]

TWENTY of the students are from the Youth Opportunity Center in Portland; 10 from the Tongue [illegible] Astoria, to a Woman's Job Corps center; and seven from the Valley Migrant Center, Woodburn. Others come from the Los Angeles Women's Job Corps Center, [illegible] Lake Job Corps Center at Estacada, MacLaren School for Boys, Hillcrest School for Girls, Dallas school districts, Marion and Yamhill county welfare departments and the Clackamas and Polk county juvenile departments.

Sentinel
Cottage Grove, Oregon
Cir. W 3,810
JAN 26 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

The Big Switch

776

Tongue Point in Astoria, Oregon's largest Job Corps Training Center, is going to be taking on a new look as the result of some fast and tricky foot work back in Washington last week.

Started as a Job Corps center for young men only two short years ago, Tongue Point was dramatically switched to a center for women last week. The decision had all the ear marks of a big political move by the politicians in Washington.

We think we can safely say that the Tongue Point center, which has been operated by the University of Oregon, has not been 100 percent without its problems. However, now that some of the bugs had been worked out in the two years of operation, it would at least appear the chances for a successful program were becoming closer. Just when some success appears possible, the politicians did an about face and the change from men to women was announced.

Douglas Olds, who was the first director of the Tongue Point center, made some comments on the decision last week in Eugene and we believe he summed up the fallacy of the decision when he stated, "Politics literally and figuratively are going to ruin the poverty programs, especially that part of them we were working on."

Olds noted he couldn't understand the decision to switch Tongue Point from men to women adding "we had a program started and pretty well accepted by the community (Astoria) and then somebody got a hair-brained idea in Washington and we changed over."

We are inclined to agree with Mr. Olds that the decision to switch the program at Tongue Point can do little more than bring more problems for the Job Corps in Oregon. Programs of this magnitude are not started and stopped over night. They involve huge sums of money and huge amounts of work by all concerned. It would appear to us that for any program to be successful it would have to be given time. We do not look at two years as being much time.

Considering the huge costs the Job Corps and other poverty programs have been running into, we can work up even less enthusiasm for them when the politicians in Washington jump from one side to the other like a jack-in-the-box. It can only mean more and new problems for the "war on poverty."

Until the folks in Washington decide to kick politics out of this type of program and make it a program for the people it and others of its kind have little if any chance of success.

We have never been able to see where results from the war on poverty programs have justified their huge tax expenditures. It is decisions like the recent one at Tongue Point that have raised these doubts in our minds and wipe out any good they might be able to accomplish. – lrz

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 27 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
Cir. D 9,[illegible]
JAN 21 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

ASTORIA (AP) — The last male graduates of Tongue Point Job Corps Center left Friday and 53 members of the academic staff received notice they would not be retained. The center is being converted into one for women. Notices were also sent to 77 academic employes who will be retained in the new program. A few of the 222 civil service employes were also dismissed.

To Jail

776

Heffelfinger, released from the Virginia Cass Miller, 22, both of Torrington, Conn., were sentenced to 30 days in jail each on a morals charge in municipal court Friday. The two were arrested in a local hotel after the management had complained of their conduct, city police said. Heffelfinger, released from the Job Corps here some time ago, had gone home to Connecticut and returned with Miss Miller. They said they planned to marry and live here.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 31 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women Plan Center Visit

Officials Slated At Tongue Point

[illegible]

Average Woman Trainee Older, Better Educated, OEO Man Says

776

Women Job Corps trainees generally are a little older and have a higher education level than male trainees, Charles Vandergrift of Office of Economic Opportunity, Washington, D.C. told members of the community relations council at Tongue Point Job Corps Center Tuesday evening.

Vandergrift, representing the community relations office of OEO, appealed for the same understanding and cooperation [illegible] provided for the men's center that has now been enlarged.

OEO was under severe time pressure when it ordered the [illegible] at Tongue Point into operation, Vandergrift said. There was no time for advance warning to the community, or even to center authorities.

Legislation requiring that there be 23 per cent women in total Job Corps enrollment by next June 30 was enacted November 8, he said.

Conversion Necessary

To find an eligible contractor and set up a new center takes six months to a year, he said, so it was necessary to convert an existing center.

Tongue Point had a suitable operator in University of Oregon and seemed an excellent choice for conversion, Vandergrift said.

"OEO has long felt there should be a Job Corps urban center for women in the north[illegible]

"Centers Successful

In Poland Springs, Me., a rural community 30 miles from Portland, a women's center is also operating successfully, with 1D8 girls, and another is successful in Guthrie, Okla., where the city sold $750,000 in revenue bonds to provide dormitories.

Vandergrift said that social relationships are planned between girls of the Tongue Point center and boys of conservation [illegible] Burns and elsewhere in Oregon.

Majority of girls coming to Tongue Point will be from the Pacific Southwest and northern California, Vandergrift said.

Screening will be done by an organization called Women in Community Service, composed of National Councils of Negro Women, Catholic Women, Jewish Women and United Church Women.

Screening will probably be better than was done for men's Job Corps centers by state employment offices, Vandergrift said.

Dr. Van Loan told the council that once the 650 girls have moved in, he feels the ceiling will be raised, due to the economics of the situation.

More Enrollees Likely

Fixed costs of operating Tongue Point are such that it takes about 1,000 enrollees to keep the cost down around $7,500 per student per year, he said.

Currently a committee is preparing a [illegible] proposal providing for vocational courses [illegible] in business education, clerical work, [illegible] health services, [illegible] courses in social skills and general education.

"We are supposed to have a site use presentation ready by February 1," he said, "and the program proposal ready by February 15, with budget to be submitted by March 1."

Then negotiation over terms of the new contract for U. of Oregon to operate the center will begin, Dr. Van Loan said. He also reported that U of Oregon has every intention to continue to work with Philco-Ford corporation as sub-contractor.

The first 100 girls are due March 30, he reported.

In discussion that closed the meeting Tuesday night, Dr. Van Loan and Vandergrift reported that each girl will have a $75 clothing allowance, that there will be a curfew to get them off the streets at night and [illegible] on-center activity for [illegible]

Acceptance of not only corps members but staff also, by the [illegible] communities is a problem, Dr. Van Loan said.

Vandergrift said that he and Jesse McElroy, who accompanied him here from OEO headquarters, are to arrange for possible new quarters for the Job Corps Portland office, now located in the YMCA. This office handles recreational excursions of Job Corps trainees to [illegible] of the Portland area.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 27 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Wyatt Predicts Tongue Point To Remain as Job Center

776

[illegible] Tongue Point will be closed as a Job Corps Senter," U.S. Rep. Wendell Wyatt said here Thursday during a brief visit to his home town.

"As long as we have the basic Job Corps concept, I will battle to see that Tongue Point is maintained as an operating center," he added.

I think the Job Corps concept will survive, although future of the entire Office of Economic Opportunity is uncertain," he said. He predicted the Job Corps might be assigned to the Department of Labor and some other OEO programs, such as Head Start, might go to the [illegible] partment if OEO is broken up.

Critical of Conversion

Mrs. Edith Green's promised investigation of the conversion of the Tongue Point Center from a men's to a women's center has not yet occurred, Wyatt said. Committees of the new Congress are still being organized, he said.

Wyatt, like Mrs. Green, was highly critical of conversion of Tongue Point to a women's center.

"The men's center," he said, "was just getting tooled up to where it could start cutting materially the cost per student per year," he said.

"It was very unfortunate that they then abruptly decided to throw it out and change it completely to another type of center.

"I am extremely upset that the staff is being cut substantially [illegible] and many [illegible] to the point where [illegible] finance [illegible] and good [illegible] to the [illegible] center.

Fight To Keep Base

Wyatt said he was [illegible] with Sen. Wayne Morse and new Sen. Mark Hatfield to prevent phasing out the Maritime Ad[illegible]

"We are making a strong pitch to have it preserved for [illegible] war is over and ships start coming back into mothballs," he said. "We are pressing the advantage of fresh water moorage there."

Wyatt spoke scornfully of the Maritime Administration's argument that it would do the community a good turn to make the base available as an industrial site.

"We have other industrial sites we haven't filled up yet," he said. "When we have [illegible] do us favors like this, we don't need enemies."

Wyatt left Astoria [illegible] afternoon for Portland, to transact business before heading back to Washington, D. C.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 14[illegible])
JAN 28 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Hospital Auxiliary Gets New Officers

776

Mrs. Kenneth A. Turner will set for the new lounge for student nurses and paintings for every room in the nurses' dormitory.

Mrs. Gwen S Cowling was appointed by the hospital to fill the newly created position of auxiliary coordinator. For the past 18 months Mrs. Cowl[illegible] has been assistant and coordinator in the community relations office at the Job Corps Center in Astoria.

The Woman's Auxiliary will have an orientation class for new members at 9:30 a.m.

Other officers installed recently by Rev. Joyn W. Good [illegible] year, hospital chaplain, are Mrs. David B. Charlton, Mrs. Jack Ovenburg and Mrs. Rich[illegible] and Atiyeh, vice presidents, Miss Gordon Kerwin, treasurer, and Mrs. Samuel J. Zidell, secretary.

The auxiliary reported that [illegible] bought a stand-up walker to Mrs. Cowling. For further information call Mrs Cowling [illegible] therapy department, a stereo[illegible] or Mrs. Jack Ovenburg.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 26 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

At Washington's Mercy

776

Astoria has depended, to a greater degree than many communities, on federal governmental activity for its economic well-being.

We have learned, to our cost, how government can give and can also take away, frequently with little or no regard to the well-being of the community which lives in part off federal activity.

We experienced distress when the Navy wiped out Tongue Point naval station which contributed so much to our economic life. We are experiencing the gradual extinction of the US Maritime Administration base, which once provided a large payroll but has now dwindled to a small fraction of its former magnitude. And we have just had a frightening example of what arbitrary governmental edict can do to the [illegible] economy.

[illegible] Corps Center from a large and growing men's center to a substantially smaller women's center.

This sort of thing can injure all sorts of small [illegible] and institutions. Men's clothing stores, for instance, which have stocked goods suitable for Job Corpsmen, will have trouble disposing of these goods to Job Corpswomen. The city of Astoria, which enlarged its police force under impact of an influx of hundreds of young men, now must apparently add some policewomen to its staff. Astoria school district, which had budgeted for the current school year in expectation of having some 300 youngsters from Tongue Point staff families through the full year, now faces a decline in enrollment which can reduce its revenues materially. Tongue Point staff folk who had bought homes or otherwise put down roots in the community now find themselves torn loose to move to new jobs, or even to search for jobs to replace the one they have lost.

As government becomes bigger and more communities become more dependent on government payrolls, this sort of thing can happen more frequently [illegible] throughout the land. [illegible] installations at will, for reasons known only to Washington, D.C., and the affected communities have no recourse.

It is a bit appalling to consider how much we are at the mercy of executive decisions made in Washington, D.C., by agencies which are not much concerned by the effects of those decisions upon us, and how more and more power continues to be concentrated there.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JAN 26 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

2 Plead Guilty In Larceny Case

[illegible] Point [illegible] Monday [illegible] sentence [illegible] Heffelfinger [illegible] Miller [illegible] Heffelfinger [illegible] Miller [illegible] Heffelfinger [illegible] Miller

Job Corps Leaders Mend Fences on Oregon Trip

By DON BISHOFF
Of the Register-Guard

A pair of top Job Corps officials were in Eugene Wednesday to talk with University of Oregon staff members about conversion of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center—and to pour a little oil on troubled waters.

Bennetta Washington, national director of the Women's Job Corps program, and David Squire, deputy director of the overall Job Corps program, came to the university after visiting the U of O-operated center at Astoria. They came to talk about the changeover that next month will make the former men's center one for women.

The conversion has stirred some criticism, particularly from Oregon Democratic Representative Edith Green, who has called for a study of the center's suitability as a women's facility.

"We looked very carefully at all of our centers and felt it made sense to convert this one above all others to one for women," Squire said at a press conference. "There have been some statements about the cost to the taxpayer in converting the center . . . (But) economically, it makes sense."

The cost, he asserted, will be less than the alternative of converting another center or opening a new one. Job Corps officials have asserted that something had to be done because of a congressional requirement that more women be brought into the program.

"The actual physical rehabilitation will cost about $100,000," Squire said. This will be offset in part, he indicated, by savings in transportation costs (at least 50 per cent of the women enrollees will be from the Pacific Northwest), and the retention of some trained staff members from the men's center.

When the question of Mrs. Green's criticisms came up, there was a group turn-the-other-cheek effort on the part of Squire, Mrs. Washington and University President Arthur Flemming, who also attended the press conference.

"We of the Women's Job Corps feel that Mrs. Green has been one of our biggest supporters," said Mrs. Washington. "The concerns that Mrs. Green has expressed are our concerns—that is why we are here."

Squire echoed her statements, and Flemming said, "I think Mrs. Green has rendered the University of Oregon and OEO (Office of Economic Opportunity) a service in identifying the concerns that she has."

Squire said Tongue Point has advantages that other women's centers don't have—plenty of space and suitable dormitory facilities among them.

The three said the exact size of the contract between the university and the Job Corps has yet to be determined. Flemming added, "As we see it, we're going to end up with a contract in the same order of magnitude" as the last one for the boys center, which amounted to some $6.8 million for 12 months.

Some 650 girls are expected to be in the center by June, with the strong possibility that it ultimately will grow to an enrollment of 900 to 1,000, Flemming said.

MRS. WASHINGTON
Job Corps Director

DAVID SQUIRE
Deputy Director

Chief Of Job Corps Women's Centers Inspects Facilities At Tongue Point

More than 600 girls "16-21 years, not in school, unable to find employment, poor, alone in the world with no marketable skills" will take residence at the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center by the end of March, according to Dr. Bennetta Washington, director of the Job Corps women's centers.

Dr. Washington led a delegation of seven Washington D.C. officials and leaders of national women's organizations on a tour of the Tongue Point center Tuesday to inspect its facilities.

The Tongue Point facility, near Astoria previously was a Job Corps center for men. The last men's class graduated Jan. 20.

As a result of the change-over [illegible] million annual pa[illegible] Staff at the center will [illegible] from 425 to about 2[illegible] Washington said in [illegible] view in Portland [illegible] day.

Asto[illegible]

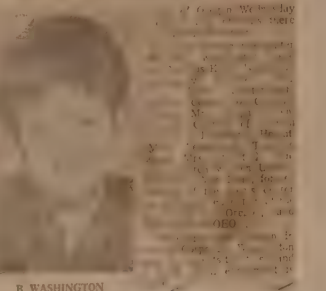
In addition, ab[illegible] sons now working at the center will be replaced with others "whose skills meet the needs of the center," according to Ernie Gross, public affairs director for the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO).

Decision Left To UO

"The Job Corps will not decide which instructors are to remain at the base. This is up to the contracting officer, the University of Oregon," Dr. Washington added.

Dr. Washington said women trainees will be recruited by Women In Community Service here. [illegible] group will go to the Uni-



B. WASHINGTON

(WICS). She said girls having a criminal background will not necessarily be barred from the program.

The change from a men's to a women's center was precipitated by a congressional order that the Job Corps ranks include a minimum of 23 per cent women, Dr. Washington said.

Dr. Washington said girls at the center will get job and home and family life training, plus medical and dental support.

She said girls will receive a $30-per-month allowance and will be granted [illegible] leaves from the base. She said in addition that base leave will be used as an incentive for progress.

Dr. Washington said she and trainees will be recruited by [illegible]

Luncheon Fetes Visitors to Tongue Point Center

Dr. Bennetta Washington head of Women's Job Corps work, visited Tongue Point Tuesday and was guest at a luncheon before inspecting the center. From left, Mayor Harry Steinbock; Mrs. Marcus Kitch Youngstown, O., director of Women in Community Service, recruiting agency for the Women's Job Corps; Tongue Point director Wendell Van Loon; Mrs. Washington; Dr. Ray Hawk, University of Oregon; Mrs. Steinbock.

Training Session Prepares Womens Job Corps Workers

Mrs. Aileen Christensen, Portland, project director for Women in Community Service, Inc., in Oregon, was in Lebanon Tuesday to present a training session for women who give their services at the screening center for the Women's Job Corps. New screening procedures highlighted the training session.

Mrs. Christensen has been with the project for more than two years and has served with the program since it was begun in Oregon. She recently returned from a similar training session in San Francisco at the western regional office. She also attended a WICS conference in Los Angeles and toured the Los Angeles Women's Job Corps Center there.

"Women in Volunteer Service is a volunteer organization whose function is to carry out effective service programs against poverty throughout the nation," Mrs. Christensen explained. "In this program, members of the National Council of Catholic Women, National Council of Negro Women, National Council of Jewish Women and members of the United Church Women are banded together to help the government recruit and screen applicants for the Women's Job Corps."

The Linn County screening office is located at 260 North Santiam Highway and serves Linn, Benton and Lincoln counties. The mailing address is P. O. Box 583, Lebanon. Interested young women may contact Mrs. Robert Wells or Mrs. Ernest Monders for further information. The office is open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Mondays at the present time. The phone number is 258-7977.

Enrollees from Oregon will be sent to a center located in the western region, according to Mrs. Monders, who said that the only one now available is in Los Angeles but the Astoria (Tongue Point) center for women is scheduled to open April 5.

Conversion Job Due Astoria Job Center

[illegible] Squire [illegible] conversion of the [illegible] Astoria center to accommodate [illegible] centers [illegible] said [illegible] have been to take on the job women's Job Corps [illegible] today, and cost of starting from scratch elsewhere.

Dr Bennetta B Washington made the statement at a news conference here with University of Oregon President Arthur M. Flemming and Deputy Job Corps Director David Squire.

[illegible] Tongue Point center [illegible] men after the initial buildup. Dr. Washington said plans call for about the same number of young women to be at the center by June 30.

Dr Washington said at least 50 per cent [illegible] enrollees will be [illegible] the Pacific Northwest.

Dr [illegible] said the economic [illegible] would be about the [illegible] The cost [illegible] the new center [illegible] been negotiated.

Curricula [illegible] basic education, specialized training in data processing, computer use, medical technology, food services and electronics assembly.

Women's Job Corps Chief Asks For Support for New Center

Dr. Bennetta Washington, [illegible] Mrs. Marcus Kitch Youngstown, O., director of the women's division of the Job Corps, and representatives of [illegible] Job Corps [illegible] and Mrs. Steinbock [illegible] public [illegible] Tongue Point [illegible] women, [illegible] Job Corps [illegible] Point [illegible] York, [illegible] New York [illegible] Dr. [illegible] by Jerome Wilson [illegible] numerous [illegible] cruits and [illegible] tion." [illegible] a quick tour [illegible] plans [illegible] centers [illegible] and [illegible] sence of [illegible] lay with [illegible] regard [illegible]

"We cannot make [illegible] either the [illegible] of [illegible] a [illegible] community," Dr. Washington said. One [illegible] thing with [illegible] continued [illegible] society. We hope [illegible] and [illegible] Astorians [illegible] and [illegible] will [illegible] accepted."

Says Large Centers Succeed

Dr. Washington said [illegible] recently [illegible] large centers [illegible] smaller [illegible] existing [illegible] Center in Curtis Creek [illegible] public [illegible] and [illegible] male [illegible]

Community [illegible] by Rep. Edith Green (Dem.-Ore.) [illegible] people [illegible] women's center. Dr. Washington [illegible] experience [illegible] centers [illegible] 1,000 [illegible] working.

[illegible] provide individualized attention, as in the smaller [illegible] with a sensitive [illegible] atmosphere between [illegible] center, we [illegible] said. "We have [illegible] evidence to justify moving toward larger programs."

Dr. Washington [illegible] said [illegible] Tongue Point [illegible] enlarged because [illegible] complement of [illegible] 1968, she said, will depend on various factors, such as [illegible] of Congress.

"We [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] people [illegible] have more appeal to the [illegible] Women [illegible] and [illegible] Dr. Washington.

With Dr. Washington were [illegible] and Dr. Ray Hawk of U. of Oregon were among other Tongue Point visitors Tuesday.

Dr. Betty Soldwedel, a consultant from New York university on counselling and guidance; Ben Sandler, OEO project manager for this area; Ernest Gross, OEO public relations man from Washington, [illegible] at U. of Oregon in what we can learn from this program and feed back into our own schools," he said.

Dr. Hawk said the university people are also pleased to be able to "go hand in hand" with industry as represented by Philco-Ford corporation in the Job Corps training experiment.

EUGENE (UPI)—It will cost $100,000 to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps center at Astoria from a men's to a women's facility, the director of the women's Job Corps said today.

Dr. Bennetta B. Washington made the statement at a news conference here with University of Oregon President Arthur M. Flemming and Deputy Job Corps Director David Squire.

Squire said conversion of the Astoria center to accommodate young women "made sense." He said the alternative would have been to take on the job and cost of starting from scratch elsewhere.

There is only one other women's job corps center on the West Coast, at Los Angeles, he said. It has a capacity of 350 girls.

The Tongue Point center enrolled about 650 young men after the initial buildup, Dr. Washington said plans call for about the same number of young women to be at the center by June 30.

Dr. Washington said at least 50 per cent of the enrollees will be from the Pacific Northwest.

Dr. [illegible] economic [illegible] would be about the [illegible] cost [illegible] having a [illegible] center. He [illegible] for the [illegible] center [illegible] negotiated.

Curricula [illegible] to include basic education, specialized training in data processing, computer use, medical technology, food services and electronics assembly.

Ben Sandler, [illegible] for women's Job Corps centers, said the tentative [illegible] for input of women trainees includes 50 on March 1, 100 on March 31, and 100 more each two weeks until June 30, when 850 are expected to be on hand.

Job Center Staff To be Reduced

PORTLAND (AP) — Dr. Bennetta Washington, national director of the women's Job Corps, said today the staff at the Tongue Point center will be reduced from 425 to about 250 [illegible] will be a women's center.

Dr. Washington toured the center Tuesday. An assistant said about 87 persons now working there also will be replaced, with others "whose skills meet the needs of the [illegible]

Dr. Washington [illegible] will be [illegible] Oregon [illegible] at the center, which used to [illegible]

She said her group will visit the [illegible] of Oregon today.

Job Center Plans Told

ASTORIA (UPI)— The director of Jobs Corps women's centers said Tuesday the Tongue Point facility would house up to 600 girls aged 16 to 21 by the end of March.

Dr Bennetta Washington toured the facility with other officials and women's organization leaders.

Tongue Point graduated its last male Job Corps class Jan. 2.

Dr. Washington indicated the staff at Tongue Point would be reduced from [illegible] to about 250.

She said it would be up to the University of Oregon, which operates the center, to determine which instructors were to remain.

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Eugene, Oregon
Univ. of Ore. Emerald

Job Corps Center Heads Meet With Dr. Flemming

EUGENE (Special)— Job Community Services, the na- Corps representatives met in tional women's organization Eugene Wednesday with which recruits women for the Area Director, president Job Corps of the University of Oregon. President Flemming said fur- ther planning and might raise enroll- ment at the center, initially planned by very happy deputy direc- leadership t

Men's Job Corps Official of OEO At Tongue Point

Point Conversion Said 'Expedient'

Job Center Cost Tallied

The Oregonian
Portland
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 384,694)

ASTORIA (AP) — The Office of Economic Opportunity spent $7,409.52 in training each corpsman at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center last year.

Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan, director of the center, said Saturday the average stay of enrollees was nine months, and that the average cost for that period was $5,600.

The maximum expenditure allowed by Congress is $7,500 per year on each trainee.

Since February, 1965, when the center opened, 2,370 trainees were enrolled. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their studies, then went into the Armed Forces, found a job, or returned to school.

Enrollment Hit 87

The OEO said that all assignments to Job Corps centers with dependents were stopped March 1, 1966. Allotments through December, 1966.

Tongue Point is being converted to a center for women. The OEO expects to have 650 women at the center by June.

Tongue Point Training Cost Figure Given

ASTORIA (AP)—The Office of Economic Opportunity spent $7,409.52 in training each corpsman at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center last year.

Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan, director of the center, said Saturday the average stay of enrollees was nine months, and that the average cost for that period was $5,600.

The maximum expenditure allowed by Congress is $7,500 per year on each trainee.

Since February, 1965, when the center opened, 2,370 trainees were enrolled. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their studies, then went into the Armed Forces, found a job or returned to school.

The largest number of corpsmen at the center was 887 in June. The smallest number was 476 in January.

The OEO said that assignments to Job Corps centers with dependents stopped March 1, 1966. Allotments through December, 1966.

Tongue Point is being converted to a center for women. The OEO expects to have 650 women at the center by June.

Tongue Point Controversy

Astoria Calm Over Change

EDITOR'S NOTE: Just a month ago, the Office of Economic Opportunity, the federal anti-poverty agency, suddenly announced that it was converting the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria from a men's facility to one for women. This two-part series examines the change and its effects. Today's story details the reaction of Astoria residents. Monday's article will explore the political controversy over the change and the proposed program for the women's center.

By DON BISHOFF
Of the Register-Guard

ASTORIA—This Columbia River community, which is or has been a fishing town, a Navy town, a port town, and on occasion almost a ghost town, is about to become a girl's town.

But the good citizens of Astoria aren't wildly demonstrating in the streets either in favor of or against the federal government decision that will bring some 650 underprivileged girls to the community by June. The girls will be enrolled in the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, a converted naval base at the eastern edge of town, that until last month was a boys' Job Corps Center.

The sudden decision to change over the center has created considerable stir from Washington, D.C., to the campus of the University of Oregon, which has the government contract to run the place.

But ask an Astorian on the street what he thinks of it all, and chances are you'll get a half shrug of the shoulders accompanied by a slightly bemused grin and a comment about the unfathomability of government action.

Take Ward Quarrels, a retired resident.

"Oh, I don't know—I don't think it'll make much difference," he said. "I think the merchants have benefited from it (the men's center), but I don't think the taxpayers are getting their money's worth because the government is spending a pile of money on it."

Many residents questioned the cost of the conversion, estimated by Job Corps officials at $100,000, as "a needless waste of money," said Lyle Ordway, [illegible] commissioner.

Perhaps the strongest expressions of opinion have come from the Daily Astorian, which editorially has blasted the changeover.

"We think it's stupid—we can see no logical reason for it," declared Fred Andrus, the balding, cigar chewing editor. "The men's Job Corps center was getting down to what seemed to be a reasonable basis, then all of a sudden, bang, it was wiped out."

Andrus was also critical of the fact that community leaders had only one day's notice of the change.

"When the first one (the men's center) was put in here two years ago, there was a lot of consultation and preparation. This time they apparently didn't give a damn what the town thought—it was a matter of taking it and liking it."

Similar criticism came from Mayor Harry Steinbock, who operates a drug store in town. "I think as a community, we should be informed of these things," he said.

Deskin Berges, the Astoria manager of Pacific Power & Light Co., is chairman of the Community Relations Council which has functioned as a liaison between the town and the center for the past two years. Speaking of the changeover, he said:

"There has been a broad spirit of cooperation in Astoria. I think generally the community is going to cooperate with the girls' center as they did with the boys."

No one questions that location of the center at Tongue Point has brought economic benefits to Astoria. "You throw 400 pretty well paid people (the center's staff) into a town of this size and it makes a difference," said one resident.

Except for the fact that the women's center staff is expected to be somewhat smaller, most businessmen who talked with a reporter recently foresaw no great change in the center's economic impact because of the changeover.

"It will help the ladies' shops and take some business away from the men's stores," said Steinbock. (Trainees receive a clothing allotment and are allowed to buy their own clothes in town).

You can get a wide-ranging variety of opinion on just how good relations were between trainees at the men's center and Astoria residents. No one disputes that there was an upturn in the town's crime rate—chiefly in such categories as auto theft.

Police Chief Paul Bettoli said that in the first year the center was in operation, arrests for disorderly conduct, liquor violations and assaults more than doubled. Bettoli was generally noncommittal about possible effects of the changeover, although he acknowledged that it will probably require the addition of police matrons to his staff.

While some residents complain about the increase in crime the center has brought, others will tell you that Astorians in general were somewhat less than hospitable to the trainees when they came to town. But there seemed to be general agreement that relations had improved and were continuing to improve when the changeover was announced.

Some think there will be fewer problems with the girls.

"We may have some more shoplifting . . . but I don't think we'll have fights, and we're not going to have the girls standing around on street corners," said Mayor Steinbock.

Steinbock and Community Relations Council Chairman Burgey said Job Corps officials have told them that the girls at the center will be generally of a "higher caliber" than the boys because of better screening procedures and generally higher educational levels than the boys had.

Editor Andrus took a slightly different view: "A different set of parents can start worrying now. Before, it was the parents of the girls in town; now it'll be the parents of the boys."

Some expressed concern that the girls' facility will attract crowds of young men to Astoria. "Everybody's expecting all the boys from hundreds of miles around to come in with all these girls walking around," said Andrus.

Job Corps, University Exchange Planned

The Op-Cit committee (Operation Citizenship) an ASUO Agency, has a new program that it hopes to get under way — the Tongue Point - University Exchange.

The exchange is conceived as a means of establishing a working relationship between the students of the University and the students of Tongue Point.

Specifically, the program will give the University student a way to get acquainted with the Corps girl, learn how the center is run and under what kind of conditions the girls live.

The Corps girl will be able to get an introduction to the University and a chance to extend her background in numerous cultural areas and it would provide her some way of getting off of the Tongue Point base with some assurance of supervision and a planned program for her participation.

Two vacation colleges are planned for the exchange, one to take place for three days during Thanksgiving vacation and the other during the first four days of spring vacation.

The Corps girls [illegible] on weekends with such activities as basketball games or big name entertainment are available.

The Op-Cit committee would provide housing, perhaps dates or post-function activities. The University people would also visit the Tongue Point Center for a weekend to review the program carried on and to get to know the girls.

Sara says that [illegible] so far has received a response from the Tongue Point administration about the proposal, but [illegible] Op-Cit committee [illegible] to arrive [illegible] pro[illegible] contact the Op-Cit [illegible] on the third floor of [illegible]

Tongue Point Training Costs Told By Job Corps

The cost of training Corpsmen at Tongue Point during 1966 for a year was $7,409.52, according to figures released by Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan, director of the Center.

Operating costs (excluding initial outlay for equipment) for the first six months of the year averaged $919.55 per month for each trainee. The last six months of 1966 cost $617.46 per month per Corpsman.

He also pointed out that the average length of stay at Tongue Point was 9 months, which would bring the training cost down to around $5600 per trainee.

The largest number of Corpsmen at Tongue Point at any one time during 1966 was 867 in June, and the smallest was 475 in January. All told, 2,370 youths were admitted since its beginning in February, 1965. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their course of study, went into the armed forces, located a job, or returned to school.

Kiwanis Club Honors Scouts

Job Corps Costs Kept to Minimum

ASTORIA (AP)—The cost of training each youth at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center during 1966 was $7,409.52, says the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The maximum expenditure allowed by Congress is $7,500 per year on each trainee.

Since February, 1965, when the center opened, 2,370 trainees were enrolled. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their studies, then went into the Armed Forces, found a job or returned to school.

Stay of enrollees was nine months, and that the cost for that period was $5,600 per trainee.

Allotments paid to dependents in the Job Corps totaled $92,740 from March, 1965, through December, 1966.

Van Loan has resigned as director of the center in the face of a changeover to a center for women.

Since February, 1965, when the center opened, 2,370 trainees were enrolled. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their studies, then went into the Armed Forces, found a job or returned to school.

War of Words Heats Up on Tongue Point Conversion

EDITOR'S NOTE: When it was announced last month that the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for girls, it Astoria was to be converted [illegible] of the move came from [illegible] Job Corps officials.

By DON BISHOFF
Of the Register-Guard

"They have given as the reason for the conversion the Congressional requirement that 23 per cent of the trainees be women. I completely reject this as purely phony."

The voice on the phone was that of Oregon Democratic Congresswoman Edith Green, the most outspoken critic of the conversion of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center from one for men to one for women.

Mrs. Green told the Register-Guard in the long-distance conversation that she wants an independent study of the conversion decision. She said she will ask for it as soon as the House Education and Labor Committee—of which she is a high-ranking member completes its organization, possibly this week.

She outlined the questions she has about the conversion decision.

"One is isolation. Two—they have had to transport the boys to Seattle and Portland for recreation. Are they going to have to do this with the girls, too?

"Three—what about job opportunities? Are there jobs in the area for girls to get into? Are they looking in the area where they learned how to do [illegible] Is Astoria the best kind of place for girls?

"And five—Tongue Point was made to accommodate 1,250 boys, and it's been announced they intend to have up to 750 girls. Is this size the best program of real help to the girls? The original task force (which recommended setting up the Job Corps) said none of the centers for women should be more than 350 or 400 trainees in size."

Job Corps officials have maintained that conversion of Tongue Point and opening of three new women's centers was necessary to meet a Congressional requirement that by June 30, 1967, at least 23 per cent of the trainees be girls. This requirement, they say, was inserted in the Job Corps appropriations bill last November.

To this, Mrs. Green responded:

"In the original statute (setting up the Job Corps almost three years ago) there was a gentlemen's agreement (between Congress and anti-poverty program officials) that not less than a third, and possibly half, of the trainees would be girls. But they (Job Corps officials) just didn't do anything about it."

Furthermore, Mrs. Green charged, the bill passed last November set the maximum enrollment of the Job Corps at 45,000—and the 23 per cent figure, she said, was to apply to this. In other words, more than 10,000 of the trainees were to be women.

At present, the Job Corps has about 29,000 trainees, some 5,000 of them women. "It's obvious that they have to get more boy recruits as well as girls," she said. "So why should they suddenly decide to convert Tongue Point?"

Mrs. Green has been quoted as saying she thought the conversion decision was an attempt to in some way politically embarrass her in her home state because of her criticisms of the Job Corps. Asked about this, she said, "It may be an attempt by two or three of the boys (officials) in the program. Offhand, it strikes me as too clever by half."

David Squire, the No. 2 man in the Job Corps hierarchy behind Sergeant Shriver, was in Eugene last week to talk with University of Oregon officials about the conversion. Of the political embarrassment charge, he said:

"It's absolutely untrue—and I know better than anybody else, because I was the primary person behind the decision. I couldn't care less about politics. I'm not a politician." (Squire is a former businessman who says he joined the Job Corps program because he wanted to get involved in government work.)

"The absolute reason for the decision was the 23 per cent requirement."

A Job Corps spokesman in Washington said the organization interprets the law to mean 23 per cent of the trainees actually enrolled and receiving training. Existing men's centers are being expanded to increase male enrollments also, the spokesman said, but the Job Corps doesn't expect to reach the 45,000 total enrollment figure because of money shortage.

Squire acknowledged that the men's center at Tongue Point had its problems during its two-year lifetime. But he flatly denied that any dissatisfaction with the men's center operation was behind the conversion decision.

In terms of suitability, cost, and all other factors, Tongue Point—second smallest of the men's centers—was simply the most logical choice, he said.

As for criticisms from some Astoria community leaders that they weren't consulted on the decision or informed of it sooner. Squire said:

"We thought about this, but if the staff or the boys knew about this before we announced it, you really could have had physical trouble—an outburst. . . . Disgruntled staff people could have filled the kids with ideas and there could have been a total blowup. And that would have been the end of Tongue Point. . . . We just couldn't risk a leak."

Criticism of the conversion attempt also had come from Douglas Olds, who had been center director until being transferred to the University of Oregon campus last September. In a speech before a Eugene service club in January, Olds blasted the conversion as "a hare-brained idea," saying the boys' program was really just getting started and being accepted by the Astoria community.

In a conversation in his U of O office last week, Olds said he still feels the Tongue Point center is better suited for a men's facility, but he also said he doesn't intend to carry his opposition any further.

"Now that the decision has been made, I want everybody to have a chance to make it a success," he said. "I certainly hope it works out—and that they don't push them too fast."

Up at the center itself, the interim director, Wendell I. Van Loan, and the educational staff still on hand are scurrying to try to have a program ready for the first girls—due to arrive the last of March.

An estimated $242,000 worth of vocational training equipment used in the men's program has been inventoried and will be shipped to other men's Job Corps centers or be placed on a surplus list for possible use by other governmental agencies, he said.

Work is also starting on necessary physical changes in the center to accommodate the women and their training program. Job Corps officials have estimated the cost of this at $100,000.

The girls' program will include training in basic education—reading, writing and arithmetic, in "marketable skills", and in family living. Bennetta Washington, women's Job Corps director, said in Eugene last week.

Among the "marketable skills" in which courses will be offered, she said, are business and clerical trades, library aide, counselor aide, teacher aide, nurses aide, food services and electronics assembly.

Van Loan thinks recreation for the girls will actually be less of a problem than for the boys.

"When we had a dance for the men here, it was hard as heck to get women down here," he said, adding that he foresees no such problem in attracting young males to the center for such recreational activities.

In addition, Job Corps officials say male trainees from Corps conservation camps in Oregon will be brought to the center for co-educational recreation programs.

At least 50 per cent of the 650 girls initially at the center will be from the Pacific Northwest, according to Job Corps officials.

$7409 Expended For Each Trainee

[illegible] The cost of training each [illegible] at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center during 1966 was $7,409.52, says the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The maximum expenditure allowed by Congress is $7,500 per [illegible] in training.

However, Dr. Wendell I. Van Loan, center director, [illegible] the figure was [illegible] months, and that the cost for [illegible] per cent was $ 600 per [illegible]

Van Loan has resigned as director of the center to be the [illegible] assistant director to a center for women.

Since February, 1965 when [illegible] center opened, 3,370 trainees were enrolled. Of those who started [illegible] training, [illegible] have graduated and left the Job Corps [illegible] Of those who left [illegible] Armed Forces, [illegible] found a job or returned to school.

The [illegible] apartments [illegible] Corps trainees with dependents in the Job Corps [illegible] from May 1, 1965 through [illegible], 1966.

Out the other

By DON BISHOFF

Following is a letter from a former Eugene City Hall pigeon, to his cousin, a Florence seagull:

DEAR ORV

How are you, ole buddy? I'm sure the wind and rain down there haven't been too much for you and that you're still living high.

It's been kind of rough around here lately. The past couple of weeks and seals are forbidden to fly downtown from the EWEB building next to the Ferry Street Overpass (that's where the wife and I are living now) the other day, but the wind was blowing so hard against me that I ended up in Springfield.

Actually it turned out to be a fortunate mishap because some of the boys who hang out in the eaves at Springfield City Hall invited me to listen in on the most flabbergasting chats.

Seems the city manager, Frank Smiley, decided to suppress the [illegible] Bill Trout because some of the chief's boys carried the thievery [illegible] pursuit a little too far—about 50 miles to far, to be exact.

It wasn't that the chief himself did anything wrong, exactly. He was home in bed like any good law-abiding citizen when it all happened. So was Mr. Smiley.

But when Mr. Smiley woke up, he said he had a policy against such pursuits. Mr. Smiley formulated the policy after the chase was over.

Anyhow, the city council [illegible] over it for some time and then [illegible] the chief shouldn't be suspended. Mr. Smiley said that was OK with him, and he didn't really see why he suspended Mr. Trout anyhow. He just thought out loud about it.

One of the fringe problems was that Mr. Smiley is only going to be city manager for another couple of weeks, while the chief presumably will be around awhile longer. When a government man is a short-timer like that, they call him a "lame duck."

I don't like to use the term, though because it upsets Uncle Louie—he's a mallard who was wounded during the last hunting season.

Incidentally, the birds at the Springfield City Hall tell me that the city officials are just half way through a public relations course they're all required to take. The betting is that Mr. Smiley will flunk his mid-terms.

There's also been a lot of excitement up at Astoria. The bureaucrats back in Washington decided that Tongue Point was such a great site for a men's Job Corps Center that they'd make a women's center out of it.

The logic of that may escape you at first, but I'm told that for anyone who has spent [illegible] in Washington, [illegible] quite common.

Representative Green, who's been trying to get more women into the Job Corps, is [illegible] converting Tongue Point to a women's center. For an explanation of this logic, see the preceding paragraph.

I want to fly up to Salem one of these days to catch some sessions of the Legislature. I understand they're a [illegible]

All the legislators are talking about reducing taxes. To do this, they're going to pass some new taxes, and then reduce the old ones. Apparently a good many of the legislators have spent six months or more in Washington.

George Lincoln Rockwell, this country's Nazi-in-residence, spoke on the University of Oregon campus the other night and out drew the Oregon basketball team. Naturally, this disturbed some of the legislators, not to mention Steve Belko.

The Oregon Daily Emerald student newspaper promptly told the Legislature that it was none of the Legislature's business who spoke on campus, a move which will obviously make the Legislature decide that it is its business. The Emerald's action is known as thumbing your nose to spite your face.

Things finally seem to have settled down a bit after the Skinner Butte Brow decision. The latest proposal is to hire the Goodyear blimp to fly it over the city every Christmas and Easter. The only question is whether the blimp would be allowed to land at Mahlon Sweet Airport—which is city-owned property.

Well, I've got to quit this rambling and get busy—it's almost dinner time. The wind will be in from the Brand X Mill across the river pretty soon and the flies will be dropping like people.

Regards to the gang
at Seal Rock, IRVING

OREGON DAILY EMERALD

Tongue Point Expenditures Below Congressional Maximum

The cost of training Corpsmen at Tongue Point Job Corps Center in 1966 was well below the maximum figure established by Congress, according to figures released this week by Wendell I. Van Loan, director of the Astoria facility.

Cost of a year's training for a corpsman at the center was $7,409.52, slightly below the maximum $7,500 permitted by the congress. Even the $7,409.52 figure does not accurately represent the cost of training each youth, however, since it was pointed out that the average length of stay was only nine months, bringing the training cost down to something around $5,600.

Operating cost (excluding initial outlay for equipment) for the first six months of the year averaged $719.55 per month for each trainee. The cost per month per corpsman for the last six months of 1966 was $817.46.

The corpsman-costs for the latter half of the year increased considerably because there were more corpsmen undergoing training during this period.

Van Loan pointed out that the $7,409 figure would have been much less if the total number of corpsmen had risen to 950 as provided by the University's contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The largest number of Corps men at the Center at any one time during 1966 was 867 in January.

All told, 2,370 youths were admitted to the Tongue Point Center since its inception in February, 1965. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their course of study, went into the armed forces, located a job, or returned to school.

In addition to providing funds for training young men and women, the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 provides that needy dependents of Job Corpsmen and women receive monthly allotments.

Allotments paid from March, 1965 through December 1966 to families in Oregon was $92,740. Job Corpsmen and women may send home a maximum of $25 a month, with Job Corps matching the amount of the allotment. The share of the allotment by the Corpsman or woman is taken from the $50 a month readjustment allowance, which is paid the youth on leaving the program.

Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 9,500)
FEB 3 - 1967
Allen's P.O.A. Est. 1888

Van Loan Goes To Texas for Job Corps Talk

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has gone to Austin, Tex., for a conference of the major American industrial firms, universities and other agencies which have contracts to operate 26 urban Job Corps Centers.

Dean Paul Jacobson of U. of Oregon, contractor for the Tongue Point Center, also was attending the conference, which has co-hosts Gov. John Connally of Texas and Sargent Shriver, director of Office of Economic Opportunity.

Representing Blaw-Knox company, sub-contractor for Tongue Point Center, will be Morgan L. Long, vice president of Blaw-Knox's Stech Rep division, Philadelphia.

The conference will be held next Monday and Tuesday.

Vancouver, Wash.
Daily Chronicle
(Circ. D. 10,515)
FEB. 3 - 1966
Allen's P.O.A. Est. 1888

Job Corps Camp Results Told

ASTORIA (UPI) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center near here has graduated 162 young men since it opened a year ago—but 534 have quit or have been asked to leave.

This was the crux of a report prepared by Douglas Olds, director of the center, at the request of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, head of the House Committee on Education and Labor.

Olds pointed out however, that the dropout rate is lessening. New policies, he said, have recently been put into effect and as a result, only 83 dropped out in second six months of the school's operation.

The drop-out total the first six months was 451.

Clatsop UGN Picks O'Bryant President; Contributions in '66 Total $58,150

The Clatsop County United Good Neighbors campaign brought in $58,150.34 in 1966, the largest amount ever contributed, it was announced at the annual meeting of UGN Wednesday night. This figure exceeded 1965 contributions by $1,300 but fell short of the goal of $61,250.

H. A. (Obie) O'Bryant was elected president for the coming year. He has served as a director and was Astoria drive chairman last year. Other officers elected were Mrs. Harrison Greenough, first vice-president; Arnold Swanson, second vice-president; Mrs. Edgar Quinn, secretary, George Alstadt, treasurer; Erling Orwick, assistant treasurer.

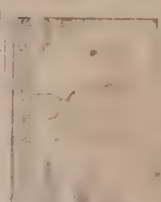
Directors elected included Mrs. Graham Barbey, William Driggs, Arthur Dempsey, Mrs. Joseph Dyer, Don Edy, Mrs. Richard Gates, Richard Jensen, Patrick Lavis, Reis L. Leming, Robert Lovell, Richard Nelson, Don Riswick, Mrs. Frank E. Ross, Kirk Tibbetts, Mrs. Charles Wood.

Elmer Blomquist, 1966 president, will serve as a director and policy committee chairman for the coming year.

Roy Burnett, Salem, representing Oregon United Appeal, said the Clatsop county UGN is the largest fund-raising group in the state without paid professional help.

"Your group is the most dedicated, unselfish and enthusiastic group in the state. That is the reason you can raise more than $58,000 without professional help," Burnett said.

A resolution thanking Elks and YMCA for donating office and campaign space and the



H. A. O'BRYANT

Rotary Anns for their work in the office was adopted.

Edy, 1966 drive chairman, introduced his workers and recommended a shorter campaign so the workers would not have to spend so much time away from their jobs.

Richard Nelson, chapter plan chairman, introduced his executives who collected pledges for more than $26,000. He presented plaques to 22 business firms in the county whose employees donated 100 per cent for the second consecutive year. They included Abrahamsen company, Astoria Clinic, Astoria Marine Construction, Public Market in both Astoria and Seaside, Barbey Packing company, Bumble Bee Seafoods, Columbia hospital, Fiesta club, First National bank, Astoria and Seaside; Fisher Brothers, Johnson Logging, Knappton Towboat, Northwest Natural Gas, Owl Drug, Pacific Power and Light, J.C. Penney, Standard Oil, U.S. National bank, Astoria and Seaside, Yergen and Meyer.

Three businesses were awarded plaques for the 1966 campaign. They were Lektro Inc., Sunset Crushed Rock, US National bank, Warrenton.

Arnold Swanson, budget chairman, pointed out the pledge loss might be greater than usual this year because of the transfer of many people from the Job Corps center. He said $2500 had been budgeted for pledge losses this year and the same amount for administrative expenses.

Swanson served as master of ceremonies for the meeting.

'The Job Corps Had a Little Lamb'

[illegible] office at the Tongue Point Job Corps [illegible] day-old lamb. Mrs. Robert Clement, clerk in the personnel department, holds the lamb, born [illegible] at A. Peace farm near Knappa. The [illegible] was abandoned by her mother [illegible] so Price, communications officer [illegible] lamb to work, knowing he would have plenty of volunteer help in bottle-feeding it that first day.

Tongue Point Shift 'Gonna be Fine'

By CELIA CURRIN
Emerald Staff Writer

It's going to be according to top officials connected with the shift in the Tongue Point Job Corps women's center.

Assurances voiced by Oregon Representative Edith Green about the Job Corps program were disclosed to Mrs. Washington by Director Sargent Shriver, Wednesday.

This is going to be a very meaningful involvement with the University, as I know that it will result in many contributions to the educational programs at the center," said Fleming. It [illegible] a session starting in June 71 Although ultimate [illegible] although Fleming [illegible] moving too quickly in too many [illegible]

Actual physical rehabilitation [illegible] the center was located by 850 women in the center by [illegible] of 800 to 1000 women were [illegible] although size to the pre [illegible] contract [illegible]

It is hoped that there will be [illegible] women to the center by [illegible] mentioned. Squire said the corps [illegible] repeat its mistakes of [illegible]

Mrs. Washington accompanied by representatives of Women Community Services WICS) a recruit and screen the girl toured Tongue Point Tuesday at appeared enthusiastic about the new ch nge

Women at the center will be trained in marketable vocational skills and home-making and Mrs. Washington stressed the need for a buss recreational program be cause of the "isolation of the center." The isolation had been one of the concerns of Mrs Green

Spokane, Wash.
Chronicle
(Circ. 71,055)
FEB 6 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Job Corps Cost Reported

ASTORIA (AP)—The cost of training each youth at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center during 1966 was $7,409.52, says the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The maximum expenditure allowed by Congress is $7,500 per year on each trainee.

However, Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan said, the average stay of enrollees was nine months, and that the cost for that period was $5,940 per trainee.

Van Loan has resigned as director of the center in the face of a changeover to a center for women.

Since February, 1965, when the center opened, 2,370 trainees were enrolled. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their studies, then went into the armed forces, found a job or returned to school.

The OEO said that allotments paid to Oregon families with dependents in the Job Corps totaled $92,741 from March, 1965, through December, 1966.

Warrenton Resident Hired to Operate Port Boat Basins

The Port of Astoria Tuesday night approved hiring of Lee Straus of Warrenton to operate the port's two Astoria mooring basins. He was one of many applicants for the $600 a month job and according to port commissioners, was highly recommended.

Straus, born and reared here, is now an instructor at Tongue Point, and will be available for the basin job in March.

In addition to the basic salary, Straus will share profit equally with the port.

Halley Johnson, present manager of the west end basin will remain with the port, manager E. E. Hodges said. Johnson will work with Straus until the new [illegible]am is well under way and then will move to his former position with the port's maintenance division.

The port is still attempting to establish a marine service station at the west end mooring basin. All oil distributors here have expressed interest in the project.

A warehouse adjacent to the Sea Fare restaurant will be moved several yards toward the river to create more parking and working space at the mooring basin. Contracting company LeBeck and Sons were retained at the Tuesday night port commission meeting to move the building for a fee of not more than $8,250. The port will provide three men to assist. Hoffman Construction company had bid $10,740.

Hodges reported improvement work on the west side of Pier 2 should be complete in about two weeks. A new face is being [illegible]ed. Purchase order for [illegible]al to repair a portion of [illegible]e being prepared. The [illegible]der for that project will [illegible] to about $45,000, Hodges

Port Angeles, Wash.
News
(Cir. D. 7,280)
FEB 6 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps cost $7409 per enrollee

ASTORIA (AP)—The cost of training each youth at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center during 1966 was $7,409.52, says the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The maximum expenditure allowed by Congress is $7,500 per year on each trainee.

However, Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan said Saturday, the average stay of enrollees was nine months, and that the cost for that period was $5,600 per trainee.

Van Loan has resigned as director of the center in the face of a changeover to a center for women.

Since February, 1965, when the center opened, 2,370 trainees were enrolled. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their studies, then went into the Armed Forces, found a job or returned to school.

Miss Billie Shannon

Miss Billie Shannon, daughter of Mrs. Willis Hampton, 2011 S. Santiam Hwy., left Tuesday by plane for Los Angeles where she will become a trainee at the Women's Job Corps Center.

Miss Shannon was screened through the local Job Corps office according to Mrs. Ernest Monders who is acting director of the office.

Announcement has been made that the Tongue Point Center for Women will be in operation in April and that women from this area will be assigned to the local training center.

Signal
Seaside, Oregon
(Cir. W. 2,360)
FEB [illegible] 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Ways of working for community told at church

What church members can do to help in the community was the subject of four talks at the Seaside Community Methodist Church Sunday night. The program was the third in a series of four on the mission of a church to its community, the Rev. Charles McCarthy said.

Things people can do to assist at Seaside hospital were described by Bruce Maltman, chairman of the hospital board of directors. He stated that medicare has increased the number of persons at the hospital, and that since October the hospital has been running at 90 to 92 per cent of capacity, while in the same period of last year it was at 60 to 65 per cent of capacity. Several times it has been necessary to put beds in the hall, he added.

William St Stacy, child development specialist with the Seaside schools, described the program for helping children with reading difficulties and what some of the troubles are.

Mrs. Elmer G. Porter told of the need for someone to help older people living in small houses in virtual isolation. Wayne Brown described the "big brother" program to assist boys in homes in which there is not a father.

The first program was a film on unrest in a community. For the second program, Fran Goodrich of the Tongue Point Job Corps center talked about the anti-poverty program. The program for February 9 will be a film on the problems that can develop when a church tries to take a more active part in community affairs.

Daily Journal of Commerce
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D. 4,084)
FEB 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Jobs Scheduled At Tongue Point

[illegible] Board of Higher Education has issued two bid calls for improvements to the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in preparation for conversion of the facility from a men's center to a women's center.

One contract will involve mechanical work the other electrical work. Bids will be received at the Administration Building at Tongue Point, Astoria, until 2 p.m. Feb. 21.

The mechanical contract will involve furnishing and installing bath tubs along with necessary plumbing, removal and capping of plumbing fixtures, installation of fans and ducts, and other general work.

The electrical contract will consist of making alterations, some new electrical work, and modification of the Gamewell fire alarm system in Buildings 3, "G" and "H".

Plans and specifications are on file at the office of the Tongue Point plant superintendent. Prequalification is required.

The advertisement for bids was contained in Saturday's Daily Journal of Commerce.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
FEB 9 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Pt. Training Cost Below $7500 Maximum

[illegible] as provided by the Univer[illegible] of Oregon's contract with [illegible] Office of Economic Opportunity.

[illegible] maximum allowed to the Tongue Point Center permitted by congress was $7,500. Even the $7,400 figure [illegible] since its inception in February, 1965. Of those who [illegible]

[illegible] Youths Receive Jail Sentences For Car Prowl

Two Tongue Point Job Corpsmen, both termed exemplary workers and students at the center by officials, received Clatsop county jail sentences on their guilty pleas to car prowling when they appeared Monday morning in circuit court.

Judge Thomas E. Edison, giving Raymond Green, 21, and Raymond Simon, stern lectures, suspended terms of one year for Green and six months for Simon to 30 days for each, or until they make restitution for goods and money stolen.

The pair previously entered guilty pleas to the charge but spent time in county jail awaiting pre-sentencing investigation. Frank J. Coumont, district attorney, said Green had served a previous jail sentence at Salinas, Calif., on a minor charge and was on probation from Monterey county authority in California on another charge.

Coumont said Simon, a native Louisiana, had no prior record in Oregon but he had been unable to complete investigation from Louisiana concerning the youth.

Tongue Point supervisors present to speak in defense of the pair were Emanuel Lolito and Vince Hayes. Both said the youths held responsible duties at the base and were depended on to a large extent by their superiors and respected by corpsmen. Simon graduated recently from the Job Corps and Green was near graduation.

Information filed by the district attorney charged the two boys with prow[illegible]

Observer
LaGrande, Oregon
[illegible]
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Conversion will cost $100,000

EUGENE (UPI)—It will cost $100,000 to convert the Tongue Point Job Corps center at Astoria from a men's to a women's facility, the director of the women's Job Corps said today.

Dr. Bennetta B. Washington made the statement at a news conference here with University of Oregon President Arthur M. Flemming and Deputy Job Corps Director David Squire.

Squire said conversion of the Astoria center to accommodate young women "made sense." He said the alternative would have been to take on the job and cost of starting from scratch elsewhere.

There is only one other women's job corps center on the West Coast, at Los Angeles, he said. It has a capacity of 350 girls.

The Tongue Point center enrolled about 650 young men after the initial buildup. Dr. Washington said plans call for about the same number of young women to be at the center by June 30.

Dr. Washington said at least 50 per cent of the enrollees will be from the Pacific Northwest.

Dr. Flemming said the economic impact on Astoria would be about the same as that caused by having a men's center. He also said the contract for the university to operate the new center has not yet been negotiated.

Curricula is to include basic education, specialized training in data processing, computer use, medical technology, food services and electronic assembly.

Observer
LaGrande, Ore
(Cir. D. 3,860)
FEB 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Costs a bit high

Attendance at the most expensive colleges, with the highest paid professors, costs upwards of $3,500 a year. But at the Astoria Tongue Point Job Corps Center in 1966 the cost per boy was $7,409. When explanations of the high costs are made they don't deny this the costs are astronomical. They merely seek to justify them by saying that it is cheaper to pay so much to train young men than to have them turned loose as inept misfits who may turn to crime and be a burden to taxpayers the rest of their lives in prison.

But, whether due to high cost or other factors, the Astoria center is being changed to one that will train girls. Another Job Corps center near Neah Bay, in the far northwest corner of Washington, is being closed outright. One reason is that the Indians, on whose reservation the center is located, couldn't get along with half the trainees who were Negroes. It would appear that racial discrimination is not confined to whites.

The Job Corps has a highly desirable goal. If it is not working, as it does not seem to be, the failure is a tragic one.

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oregon
Allen's P.C.B.

It Costs $7,400 To Train Job Corpsman

[illegible] cost to train a Job Corps [illegible] at Tongue Point [illegible] $7,400 [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Oregon
Univ. of Ore. Emerald
FEB 14 1957

Controversial and Otherwise

UO Furnishes List Of Invited Speakers

University of Oregon President Arlie Mennin[illegible] releases a list of more than 80 speakers [illegible] during this school year on the University of Oregon campus.

The list [illegible] Social Science Institute, Oregon [illegible] Lecture Series, RMWA [illegible] It includes names [illegible] have created controversial issues related to [illegible] and some tentatively scheduled to appear.

Following each speaker's name and identification is the name of the campus organization sponsoring his appearance.

The list:

Sept. 27—Tom McCall and Robert Straub, gubernatorial candidates, sponsored by Oregon Student Legislative Association.

Sept. 28—Homer H. Hamblen, vice president of the United States Pipestone Pipeline Co. and the Associated Students of the University of Oregon.

Oct. 1—Shoji Sadao, Japanese violin instructor and lecturer, School of Music.

Oct. 1—John Crowe Ransom, American poet and literary critic; English department.

Oct. 3—Hilliard Wood, former director of the Oregon Tuition Point Job Corps Center, University Library Browsing Room Lecture Series.

Oct. 5—Charlotte M. Hubbard, nurse who has served recently for [illegible] with the U.S. Department of State; Campus Day [illegible] Women.

Oct. 10—Max Huss Halle, professor of Graduate [illegible] International Studies, Geneva, Switzerland; University Assembly Committee.

Oct. 11—R. S. Krishnan, professor of physics, Indian Institute [illegible] Science, Bangalore, India; chemistry and physics departments.

Oct. 17—Shalev Ginosar, dean of law, Hebrew University in Jerusalem; University Assembly Committee.

Oct. 17-18—Andrew C. Ritchie, director of the Yale University Art Gallery; department of architecture and allied arts.

Oct. 19-20 — Richard Blum, social psychologist, Stanford University; Student Union Forum on Drugs.

Oct. 20—Robert Hoff, American poet; English department.

Oct. 21—Robert Weiss, visiting associate professor of psychology; psychology department.

Oct. 21—John Ingraham, professor of biology, University of California; biology department.

Oct. 26—Juscelino Kubitscheck, ex-president of Brazil; Failing Lecture.

Oct. 26—Roy Lieualllen, chancellor of the Oregon State System of Higher Education; New Faculty Seminar.

Oct. 26—Roland Bartel, professor of English, University of Oregon; Browsing Room Lecture.

Oct. 27—John P. Craven, chief scientist for the U.S. Navy's Polaris Missile Program; Navy Day Lecture.

Oct. 27—John Donat, British architect; division of continuing education and School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

Oct. 28—Charles P. Taft, former mayor of Cincinnati, and son of President William H. Taft; continuing education and School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

Nov. 2—Ernest G. Moll, poet and professor emeritus of English; Honors College.

Nov. 2—Galen Rarick, associate professor of journalism; Browsing Room Lecture.

Nov. 7—J. A. C. Grant, former Vietnam adviser, University Assembly Committee.

Nov. 9—Roy J. Sampson, professor of transportation; Browsing Room Lecture Series.

Nov. 9—University of Oregon Medical School staff, panel discussion on drugs and alcohol; Student Union Forum Committee.

Nov. 9—Mark Schorer, literary critic; English department.

Nov. 9—David H. Andrews, vice president and head of West Coast Research Department of Walston and Co., of Portland; School of Business Administration.

Nov. 16—Robert W. Smith, professor of history, University of Oregon; Browsing Room Lecture.

Nov. 18—Frank Zeidler—municipal consultant on employe relations and former mayor of Milwaukee, Wis.; Institute of Industrial and Labor Relations and the division of continuing education.

Nov. 21—George Starbuck, poet; English Department.

Nov. 28—Gertrude Behanna, lecturer on alcoholism; division of continuing education.

Nov. 29—Charles Moore, chairman of the Architecture department at Yale University; School of Architecture and Allied Arts

Nov. 29—Jack Currey, photographer and lecturer; film lecture committee.

Dec. 8—Anthony Kenny, Oxford philosopher; philosophy department.

Jan. 9—Rabbi Louis Neimand, Temple Beth Israel in Eugene; Music School.

Jan. 9—Hartmut Schulze-Boysen, German counselor for political affairs; World Affairs Briefing Center.

Jan. 16-17—Alan Rasil, director of the Seismographic Station at the University of Nevada Reno geology department.

Jan. 18—William Arrowsmith, professor of classics at the University of Texas; English department and Graduate School.

Jan. 18—Hugh Hardy, leading designer of theater architecture; School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

Jan. 23—Dr. J. E. Spradlin, associate director of the Bureau of Child Research at the University of Kansas and coordinator of research at Parsons State Hospital and Training Center, Parsons, Kansas; psychology department.

Jan. 24—Dr. R. L. Schiefelbusch, director of the Bureau of Child Research at the University of Kansas; Speech and Hearing Clinic and special education department.

Jan. 24—John C. Bennett, president of Union Theological Seminary, New York City; Browsing Room Lecture.

Jan. 25—Dr. John C. Bennett, theologian; religion department.

Jan. 26—Dr. John C. Bennett, theologian; religion department.

Jan. 28—George Lincoln Rockwell, leader of the American Nazi party; Associated Students of University of Oregon (ASUO).

Jan. 30—James C. Stovall—professor of geology at the University of Oregon; geology department and division of continuing education.

Jan. 30—Lawrence Thomas, professor of education, Stanford University; University Assembly Committee.

Feb. 1—Bayard H. McConnaughey, associate professor of biology; Browsing Room Lecture.

Feb. 2—Paul Robertus, California attorney in marijuana case; ASUO.

at Harvard and Dr. Sidney Cohen, psychiatrist, debate; ASUO.

Feb. 2—Dr. Timothy Leary, former professor of psychology

Feb. 3—David N. Rinehart, assistant professor of architecture and allied arts; School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

Feb. 6—Pierre Vialla, French actor; Romance language department.

Feb. 7—Dr. Mary Calerone, executive director of the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States; Oregon Nurses Association and the University of Oregon health education department.

Feb. 8—Carlisle Moore, professor of English, University of Oregon; Browsing Room Lecture.

Feb. 10—Dr. Alexandria Adler, New York psychiatrist; counseling psychology department.

Feb. 10—University of Washington Medical School staff, panel discussion on drugs and alcohol; Student Union Forum Committee.

Feb. 10—A. Dean McKenzie, professor of art history, University of Oregon; School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

Feb. 11—Ronald Reagan, Governor of California; ASUO (Tentative).

Feb. 13—Kasper Locher, professor of German and humanities, Reed College; Festival of Arts.

Feb. 14—John Sherwood, professor of English, University of Oregon; Honors College.

Feb. 15—Francis E. Dart, professor of general science, University of Oregon; Browsing Room Lecture.

Feb. 16—Stokeley Carmichael, head of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee; ASUO.

Feb. 17—Robert Tatarian, president of United Press International; Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association and School of Journalism.

Feb. 17—Marian C. Donnelly, visiting assistant professor of art history, University of Oregon; School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

Feb. 20—Werner Phillipp, head, Indiana University history department; Honors College.

Feb. 20-21—Jocob Bronowski, senior fellow with the Salk Institute for Biological Studies, San Diego, Calif.; Condon Lecture.

Feb. 21—W. H. Auden, poet; Failing Lecture, University Assembly and English department.

Feb. 22—Marion Rosa, professor of art history; University of Oregon; Browsing Room Lecture.

Feb. 23—David Brower, executive director of the Sierra Club, San Francisco, Calif.; Sierra Club and Student Union [illegible]

Feb. 24—Edward Bostetter, professor of English, University of Oregon; English department.

Feb. 27—David Harris, student body president at Stanford University; Inter-Fraternity Council.

March 3—Dick Gregory, civil rights worker and comedian; Inter Fraternity Council and ASUO.

March 3—Vazenesenski, Russian poet; University Assembly Committee.

March 27—James Farmer, former secretary of CORE; division of continuing education.

April 3—Dr. Cushman Haagensen, cancer specialist from Columbia University; departments of health, physical education, and recreation

April 5—Max Perutz, Nobel Laureate, University of Cambridge, England; Failing Lecture.

April 7—Robert Duncan, former congressman; political science department.

April 11—Dr. Dale Cameron, director, St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington, D.C.; Student Union Drug Forum.

April 11—John Harris, curator of Royal Institute of British Architects, London; School of Architecture and Allied Arts.

April 14—Senator Robert Kennedy; University of Oregon Foreign Students, (International Festival) (Tentative).

May 16—A. Sindesmith, professor of sociology, University of Indiana; Student Union Drug Forum.

May 16—Dean Brooks, superintendent of Oregon State Hospital at Salem, and Dr. Hollister, chief, division of alcoholism, California State Department of Health, and Douglas May, administrator Douglas County Welfare Department; Student Union Drug Forum.

TONGUE POINT UNIVERSITY Exchange [illegible] and OPCIT coordinates exchanges with Tongue Point students.

What Is OP.CIT.? How Do You Join?

By SALLY SHARRARD
Emerald Staff Writer

What service groups are available on campus?

How can students join?

What kind of projects do they sponsor?

What kind of community services are needed?

OP.CIT. attempts to answer these questions by offering contacts to all volunteer programs and by keeping a file of community volunteer needs as well as a student interest file.

There are currently seven organizations associated with OP.CIT.

The OP.CIT. Community Volunteer Program works closely with the Eugene Community Volunteer Office (CVO).

CVO is a referral agency which keeps tabs on where volunteers are needed and those willing to do volunteer work.

They refer volunteers to community agencies and organizations CVO will serve as a direct link with the community and help find positions for interested students.

Also working with OP.CIT. in this field will be Lane Human Resources, Inc. This center places OP.CIT in contact with the Lane County Youth Project and all office of Economic Opportunity programs in the area.

TUTORIAL PROJECT

The OP.CIT Tutorial Project cooperates with the Employment Training Center's tutorial project. Currently over 60 tutors who are high school dropouts are working for their General Education Diploma. Tutors will help in the fields of English, history, and mathematics.

Additional liberal arts and fine arts classes will be established as teachers and pupils request them. It is hoped that the project can be developed into "cultural" exchanges between pupils, tutors, and the University community.

The Los Amigos project consists of students who live and work as groups in Mexico during the summer. Their basic objectives are to become friends with the people and to develop basic community organization in their areas. Los Amigos is a national project and is separate from the Mexican government.

It provides an excellent chance for students to learn and live in another culture and at the same time they offer their services to their friends.

The University Migrant Labor Project places students in the field during the summer months to work with migrants. The work is basically community organizing, but it is made more complex due to the shifting quality of the migrant population.

PROBLEM SOLVING

The project provides an educational experience through the actual problem solving demands of the work. It is sponsored by the ASUO and the new School of Community Service and Public Affairs.

A recently-established organization is the Tongue Point University Exchange. The purpose of this program is to establish a relationship between students of the University and at Tongue Point.

The actual program consists of visits by the University students to the Point and by the Corp women to the University.

In addition to the Exchange Program two vacation colleges are planned. Students from both campuses will spend three and four days together learning, talking, and exchanging attitudes and ideas around fine arts topics.

A summer Tongue Point project is being planned in conjunction with the Office of Economic Opportunity. Twenty-five students will work as aides and assistants during the summer.

Student Movement Beyond Protest is closely related with OP.CIT. The program is being set up by two returned VISTA volunteers and will be funded by VISTA, Washington.

SMBP will be doing grass roots community organizing in the Lane County area with a prime objective of involving students within the neighborhoods.

To find out more about these services contact the OP.CIT. office—305 SU.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
Allen's P.C.B.

2 Instructors Going To Asia

[illegible] supervisor in the Saigon area [illegible] and William Lauer will be [illegible] training supervisor for 300 [illegible] Philco-Ford Koreans and 300 South [illegible] South Vietnam. Vietnamese at Saigon in a [illegible] series will be an au[illegible] Philco automotive maintenance and truck parts service project.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
FEB 2 1957
Allen's P.C.B.

Course Plans Outlined For Women's Job Corps

ASTORIA — A curriculum [illegible] assemblers, inspectors and [illegible] Women's Job Corps [illegible] Center to begin in March at [illegible] drafting and food services, Tongue Point, has been [illegible] according to [illegible] Oregon Kings of drafting work and as [illegible] Assistance.

The [illegible] and will be taken to Washington, D.C., [illegible] for [illegible] contract negotiations.

PHILCO-FORD will teach most of these subjects as technical and vocational classes. Teaching and library aide courses would be taught by University of Oregon under the academic program. General education subjects would be under university instruction.

AMONG planned courses [illegible] and [illegible] service training as [illegible] would care [illegible] and as [illegible] and [illegible] Other women trainees are expected early in March.

[illegible] and [illegible] training in [illegible] ping, short [illegible] has [illegible]

Eligibility [illegible] and testing, including training as

Expect 600 Girls At Tongue Point

ASTORIA — The [illegible] of Job [illegible] center [illegible] site [illegible] accommodate [illegible] by the end of [illegible]

Register-Guard
Eugene, Ore.
(Cir. D 48,512 -
FEB 20 1957
Allen's P.C.B.

UO-Job Corps Project

776 Tongue Point Pact Near

Final negotiations will be conducted in Washington, D.C., next week on a contract between the University of Oregon and the federal government for trainees, who are expected to operation of a women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point, near Astoria.

Ray Hawk, assistant to U of O President Arthur Flemming for federal anti-poverty projects, said Monday that he will go to Washington for the negotiations. The university and Philco-Ford Corp. have agreed upon a tentative curriculum for the center, he said.

Under the agreement, the university will provide courses in general education and training for library and teacher aides. Philco-Ford will provide courses in business and clerical services such as secretarial skills, in electronics assembly and testing, in drafting, food services, and in nurse's aide training, Hawk said.

Philco-Ford also was the training sub-contractor for the university during the two years in which Tongue Point was operated as a men's Job Corps center.

Hawk said about 80 volunteer women's trainees from other centers will probably arrive at Tongue Point early in March. They will serve as an "advance cadre" to help prepare the center for the first new trainees, who are expected to begin arriving the latter part of March, he said.

The exact dollar amount of the contract between the university and the federal Office of Economic Opportunity will be determined in next week's negotiations, Hawk said.

Daily Journal of Commerce
Portland, Oregon
[illegible] D 4,4[illegible]
1957

Two Jobs Bid 776 At Tongue Point

Astoria — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center opened bids Tuesday for modernizing and electrical improvements at the center.

Apparent low bidder on mechanical work was Abrahamsen Co., 1062 Marine Drive, Astoria, at $12,130 [illegible] Fuller's Plumbing & Heating Co., Forest Grove, $14,262, and McCoy Plumbing Co., Portland, $21,500.

Mallory Electric Co., 1271 Columbia Blvd., St. Helens, submitted [illegible] apparent low bid of $4850 for electrical work. Other bidders were Grond Electric Co., Portland, $5937, and L. W. Himbree Co., Portland $11,063.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
Cir. D 146,403
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Coos Firm Scraps Ship At Astoria

ASTORIA — A Coos Bay firm has launched a ship scrapping operation at Tongue Point.

R.L. Matthews Construction Co. has acquired a Liberty ship, the Margaret Fulton, from Astoria reserve fleet.

Pier 3 and adjacent shoreage at Tongue Point was leased from General Services administration with approval of University of [illegible] Port Jon

R.L. Matthews, head of the firm, estimates it will take four months to scrap the vessel.

He said some scrap will be shipped by rail and some plate will be used to construct a barge on shore near the foot of the pier.

Center to Have Women's Kadet CAP Program

Tongue Point Expenditures Below Congressional Maximum

The cost of training Corpsmen at Tongue Point Job Corps Center in 1966 was well below the maximum figure established by Congress, according to figures released this week by Wendell L. Van Loan, director of the Astoria facility.

Cost of a year's training for a corpsman at the center was $7,409.52, slightly below the maximum $7,500 permitted by the congress. Even the $7,409.52 figure does not accurately represent the cost of training each youth, however, since it was pointed out that the average length of stay was only nine months, bringing the training cost down to something around $5,600.

Operating cost (excluding initial [illegible] equipment) for the [illegible] months of the year averaged $[illegible] per month for each trainee. The cost per month per corpsman for the last six months of 1966 was $617.46.

The corpsman costs for the latter half of the year decreased considerably because there were more corpsmen undergoing training during this period.

Van Loan pointed out that the $7,409 figure would have been much less if the total number of corpsmen had risen to 950 as provided by the University's contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The largest number of Corpsmen at the Center at any one time during 1966 was 387 in June. The smallest number was 476 in January.

All told, 2,370 youths were admitted to the Tongue Point Center since its inception in February, 1965. Of those who stayed, 793 completed their course of study, went into the armed forces, located a job, or returned to school.

In addition to providing funds for training young men and women, the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 provides that needy dependents of Job Corpsmen and women receive monthly allotments.

Allotments paid from March, 1965 through December 1966 to families in Oregon was $92,740. Job Corpsmen and women may send home a maximum of $25 a month, with Job Corps matching the amount of the allotment. The share of the allotment by the Corpsman or woman is taken from the $80 a month readjustment allowance, which is paid the youth on leaving the program.

Watch Your Language

Some people sure take liberties with the mother tongue.

We received a story from United Press International recently stating that the expense per trainee at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center pushed right up to the maximum allowed.

Spokesmen for the center, however, put it a little differently.

They said, in a release, that the cost of training was "well below the maximum figure established by Congress."

The maximum set by Congress is $7,500. It cost $7,409.52 per trainee last year at the center.

Leading us to believe that the journalistic integrity of the Office of Economic Opportunity is "well below" the maximum.

Figures also showed that only one of three actually completed their course of study at the institution.

This means that for each "graduate" of the Job Corps Center, taxpayers shelled out more than $22,000.

For that amount of money, from 20 to 25 students could be granted a complete scholarship to Southern Oregon College for a year.

Four Get City Jobs

Appointment of John L. Bird, as parking meter repairman in the public works department [illegible] Thursday at city

Bird, a veteran of 10 [illegible] service in the department, promoted from a [illegible] struction and main[illegible]. He lives at Rt. 1, Box 51, [illegible]

Mrs. Sean Sandstrom of West Scranton has been appointed secretary to the city department of [illegible] Astoria graduate of Astoria High School and has been a secretarial clerk at Tongue Point Job Corps Center the past two years.

Appointment of Carmen C. Hagman, 390 West Marine, and William E. Simmons, 6 Blue Ridge Drive, as [illegible] and maintenance men also was announced Tuesday.

Hagman moves to Fresno, Calif., attended high school there. He is married and has two children.

Simmons born in Salem, attended high school in San Fernando, Calif. He is married and has four children.

Women Due Soon

ASTORIA (AP) — The first 50 women assigned to the Tongue Point Job Corps Center are expected to arrive March 15.

A Job Corps publication said the women will come from other centers where they will have spent less than 60 days. Officials expect the total of 650 women will be at Tongue Point by end of June.

ASTORIA (AP) — A tentative curriculum for a women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point will be submitted this week to the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Data Processing Office to Aid Job Corps Staff

Tongue Point Job Corps staff members who wish to learn specific information about Job Corpswomen enrolled in the forthcoming program will be able to make use of the center's data processing department.

The department, established about midway in the men's training program, contains two keypunch machines, a sorter, optical mark scan reader and other equipment. Computers are available for use at the University of Oregon.

It is anticipated that various research programs, questionnaires and tests for Job Corps women will be handled by the data processing department, according to David McCollum, statistics coordinator at the center.

Job Corps artists

Why one might ask should a Job Corps trainee be given instruction in art if he is striving to become a mechanic or a plumber?

The answer appears in an exhibition of 86 paintings, collages, and pieces of sculpture by Job Corps students being exhibited by the Office of Economic Opportunity at Boston's Whitney Museum. The collection, drawn from Job Corps centers in 27 states reveals a surprising amount of talent on the part of these young people from poverty areas. But the purpose of this particular elective course in the Job Corps is not to train for an art career. To quote the OEO: "The art program has helped develop bright new confidence in thousands of so-called 'failures.'" (Most of the teen-age artists are high school dropouts.)

It is significant that the young people themselves recognize this. Notes posted beside the paintings and other works indicate that almost every Job Corpsman exhibiting expects to earn his living in some trade, continuing his art as a leisure-time activity. That it will be a rewarding activity.

The importance of art in the antipoverty program has not yet been sufficiently recognized. But as long ago as the 1890's, when the settlement house movement got under way as a kind of private anti-poverty effort, its leaders saw as a prime need of the poor the opportunity to enjoy music, drama, and painting. The art activities of Hull House in a deprived Chicago neighborhood became a pattern for many communities.

More than ever today such programs are needed. Unfilled leisure as well as unemployment breeds social problems. But for many people, art activities can fill leisure.

Ways, Means Committee Slates Two-Day Visit

Members of the legislature's Ways and Means committee, wives and staff members numbering about 30 will visit the Astoria area Friday and Saturday.

Co-chairmen of this important legislative committee are Sen. Dan Thil, Astoria Democrat, and Rep. Stafford Hansell, Hermiston Republican.

The party is due to arrive about 3:30 p.m. Friday by automobile via Highway 30 after a short stop to look at the new Crown-Zellerbach Wauna plant.

The committee will devote the Friday portion of its visit to a trip through Clatsop Community college and conference with college officials.

Friday evening the chamber of commerce will be a host at a dinner for the committee members and local civic officials. It will not be a public affair.

Saturday the committee will visit the present Oregon Seafoods laboratory and its new site, the new Astoria library to which the state has contributed funds, Tongue Point Job Corps Center and Camp Rilea. From there the committee will go on to Tillamook to spend Saturday night.

Joint Ways, Means Committee Slates Clatsop County Visit

Members of the joint ways and means committee of the Oregon legislature will visit Clatsop county February 24, state Sen. Dan Thiel reported on a visit home last weekend. Thiel is chairman of the Senate component of the joint House-Senate committee.

Thiel told local chamber of commerce officials there will be about 25 people in the party. He asked the C. of C. to help plan entertainment for the committee.

The committee will visit Clatsop Community college; the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, a branch of University of Oregon, and Camp Rilea.

Thiel reported that it is still too soon to predict what sort of tax program will come out of the current legislative session.

The Ways and Means committee has not yet received from Gov. Tom McCall the higher education segment of the proposed state budget for the next biennium, Thiel reported.

Plans Land Board Curb

Rep. William Holmstrom, also home for the weekend, reported he intends Monday to introduce a bill to restrict the State Land Board's claims of ownership of all submerged and inter-tidal lands.

"I have to get some sort of bill in Monday," he said, "as it is the last day for introduction of bills. We can remodel the bill once it is introduced."

Holmstrom asked chamber of commerce and city officials here to work out terms of a satisfactory bill that would establish valid title to filled land that includes about half downtown Astoria, to which the State Land Board could claim title under its interpretation of present law.

There is also question about title to some county-owned lands claimed by the Land Board Holmstrom said.

Holmstrom said there will be a public hearing Thursday at 3 p.m. on the bill introduced by Rep. R. F. Elder, Eugene, to make steelhead a game fish.

This bill would also legalize use of traps and seines for commercial fishing.

Holmstrom said he has not yet seen the text of a bill reported introduced late last week to merge the Oregon game and fish commissions. He said he understood it would be virtually the same as a bill introduced at the 1965 session and amended but never adopted.

Clatsop Solons Here to Confer On Land Board

State Sen. Dan Thiel and Rep. William Holmstrom both came home over the past weekend for a conference with members of the county inter-governmental subcommittee that is studying the problem of curbing the State Land Board.

The committee, headed by County Commissioner Verne Stratton, met with the two Clatsop legislators to discuss strategy and coordination of effort with various other state groups also working on the problem.

The problem involves the Land Board's claim to ownership of submerged and submergable lands, of which there are many in Clatsop county.

Thiel also was laying plans for next weekend's visit of the legislative Joint Ways and Means committee to this area.

The party will come here Friday afternoon and will inspect Clatsop college, Tongue Point Job Corps Center, Camp Rilea, the Oregon Seafood Laboratory and the new location for the [illegible] building. From here the party will go on to Tillamook.

Thiel, who is Senate ways and means chairman, said the committee has to get around and see all the [illegible] before this session, he said committee's college financing plans [illegible] the legislature's toughest problems this year and the committee therefore is scrutinizing all [illegible] carefully.

Holmstrom [illegible] hearing on Rep. Edward [illegible] bill to make steelhead a game fish will be resumed Thursday at 3 p.m. before a House subcommittee. First session of the hearing was held last Thursday.

Tentative Pla[illegible] Of Women's Jo[illegible] Curriculum Set

University of Oregon and Philco Corporation have worked out a tentative curriculum for a women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point. It is now being put into final form of a proposed contract and will be taken to Washington D.C., in about one week for start of contract negotiations.

The proposal includes:

Health and social service studies, including training as nurse's aides, for child care work, and as teachers' and librarians aides.

Business and clerical services including training in office practices, typing, shorthand and secretarial work.

Electronics assembly and testing, including training as [illegible] inspectors and production testers.

Drafting and food services, including training in various kinds of drafting work and as waitresses.

Many of these subjects would be taught by Philco-Ford as technical and vocational subjects except for training as teachers and library aides, which would be considered academic and under the University of Oregon.

There would also be general educational subjects, under university contractor included in the curriculum.

Field trips are expected at the women's center in early March.

TLCW Long Will Be Remembered By 'Adopted' Job Corps Cadre

One of the most active of the newly-formed church groups is that of the women members of Trinity Lutheran church. Although TLCW (Trinity Lutheran Church Women), was formed as a single unit March 28, 1963, its fore-runner was Women of Trinity. Since its re-organization, embracing all women of the church, it has enjoyed a healthy and enthusiastic growth.

Meeting the first Tuesday of the month, the women alternate with afternoon and evening meetings. Mrs. William Neimi is president; Mrs. Fred Jauert, vice-president; Mrs. Richard Nelson, secretary, and Mrs. Vernon Leach, treasurer. Because of the large membership and good turn-outs, they gather in the cheery annex of the church, and on special occasions, folding forth in the church social room downstairs.

The project which won (and deserved) more goodwill this past year, especially from those benefitting, was their adoption of the Job Corp's cadre 7 at Tongue Point. There, in the large reception room topside of the cadre building, a group of TLCW members meet every month to sew and mend clothing of the corpsmen. At first, the corpsmen were a bit shy about bringing their worn garments to be patched, mended or have buttons replaced. But each month the line of boys grew longer, the sewing machines whirred faster and the fingers of the women were kept busy repairing the clothing.

And, while the menders were at work, another group of TLCW members were just as busy setting up a prettily decorated table for the monthly birthday party for all the boys whose birth dates fell in that month, with platters of home-made goodies of all kinds, colorful salad molds and other desserts and of course, a big birthday cake ablaze with candles, which were vigorously blown out by the guests of honor. It was a homey, happy atmosphere, this monthly visit, and, in many cases, the only such consideration some of the lonely boys had ever been shown. Although this wasn't published, and therefore received little recognition community wise, the women were the "talk of the center," and cadre 7 was the envy of all the others.

However, in their community and national program, Trinity Lutheran Church Women are known well for their philanthropic work. They contribute food generously for the Christmas baskets for the needy each year, sew for the patients at Columbia hospital nursing home and visit the elderly residents there, as well as shut-ins at home. They collect nylons for rug-making and send them to the Lutheran home in Colton, Ore.; collect good used clothing (in top repair, you may besure) for Lutheran World Relief clothing drives; send articles to Bethpage mission, Axtell, Neb., as well as articles and money to the Rocky Boy mission at Box Elder, Mont., and still find time to sew articles for the men in Vietnam.

All this is inspired by their creed; to try to be an instrument of Christian mission in their congregation, community, their country and throughout the world; to combine in fellowship and study and to grow in faith; and to share in the world-wide work of the total church program, not by just prayer alone, but by a service of love

A small portion of the long line waiting to have clothes mended when the Job Corps center was in full force at Tongue Point is shown in the recreation room of Cadre 7. Only three of the members of Trinity Lutheran Church Women, Miss Eleanor Iverson, with back to camera, Mrs. Bruce Pond, and Mrs. William Seberg, far left, are in the picture but many others were hard at work, too. Meanwhile in another corner of the big hall other TLCW members were setting up a birthday party table for the men in the cadre, which the church women "adopted" as a community project.

Workshop Held For Personnel Of Job Corps

Dr. Nathan Gross, assistant professor of education at the University of Washington, and his wife Dr. Helen Gross, head of the psychology department, Rainier school, Buckley, Wash., are conducting a two-day workshop for all personnel at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Sessions held Thursday and Friday deal with such topics as techniques for teaching basic skills to disadvantaged youth, dynamics of female minority group adolescents, curriculum construction for deprived youth, and anticipated hopes, wishes and aspirations of adolescent girls.

On March 2-3 Dean Elias, director, Western Training Team (for Job Corps) and George Scotian, project director, University of California, will bring with them five consultants and 10 Job Corpswomen from the Los Angeles Job Corps Center.

Small groups [illegible] ned for staff [illegible] ter life, basic education, communicatio[illegible] skills, vocational education and security and spec[illegible]

Coos Bay Firm Starts Tongue Pt. Ship Scrapping

H. L. Matthews Construction company, Coos Bay, has begun a ship scrapping operation at Tongue Point.

The company has acquired a Liberty ship, the Margaret Fuller, from the Astoria reserve fleet of the US Maritime Administration.

The company has also leased Pier 2 and adjacent shore space at Tongue Point from the General Services Administration with concurrence of the University of Oregon, operator of Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The ship was towed to the Tongue Point pier Thursday and the purchaser began preparations to start scrapping operations. One crane was on hand and another was to be brought in, according to R. L. Matthews, head of the firm.

Matthews estimated it will take four months to scrap the Margaret Fuller.

"We will ship some of the scrap by rail and will use some of the plate to construct a barge, on shore near the foot of the pier," Matthews said.

He estimated the company would have eight men working, until time to start building the barge when more will be added.

The company selected Tongue Point as the scrapping operation site because it was handy, Matthews added.

If the firm can bid in more ships for scrapping and if conditions seem satisfactory here, more ships may be scrapped at the Tongue Point site, he said.

Workmen of H. L. Matthews Construction company, Coos Bay, were preparing to start work Thursday on scrapping the Liberty ship Margaret Fuller, shown tied up alongside Pier 2 at the former Tongue Point naval station. Work will take about four months.

FEB 2 8 196

Migrant League Waste Revealed

First of a Series

By MARGE DAVENPORT and JAMES LONG
Journal Staff Writers

Pleading "lack of funds," the Valley Migrant League says it will cut back on programs for migrants in Oregon's Willamette Valley this year. Yet a Journal investigation shows that VML povertycrats overspent by $54,000 to lease a fleet of luxury cars in 1966. These and dozens of other abuses are documented in this series of reports.

The Valley Migrant League — a $2 million arm of the War on Poverty — has squandered tens of thousands of taxpayer dollars during the past 18 months on everything from automobiles to toilet paper.

This is the finding of a team of Journal reporters who spent a month digging through VML records and interviewing persons in and around the league office.

Most of the waste, investigators found, stemmed from the purchase or lease of thousands of supply items through ordinary retail channels instead of through the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA) or the federal supply service.

IN ONE murky transaction, VML povertycrats blew more than $54,000 by leasing a fleet of automobiles which were available at a substantially lower price through GSA.

But even more tax dollars were wasted — and are still being wasted — through the casual purchase of supplies at prices up to 15 times greater than those available through regular government channels.

In some cases, inaccurate financial records made it difficult for reporters to tell exactly how much money was being spent on what, or why.

When VML officials were asked why a monthly financial statement showed $533 more being spent on office rentals than the total amount shown in the leases, they explained that some of the money should have been charged to "administrative travel" and "supplies."

IN ANOTHER instance, reporters ran across an invoice which indicated that the VML had paid $180 for 10 photographs at $1.80 each. It could not be learned whether the apparent $102 overpayment had been caught and adjusted, or whether the money represented a windfall for the lucky supplier.

"There may be a few loose ends here and there, but I think we run a pretty tight ship," said Will P. Pape, a former YMCA secretary who is the league's $15,000-a-year director.

One of the "loose ends" about which VML officials are particularly sensitive is a 1966 arrangement in which 49 luxury automobiles were leased for poverty fighters at $215 monthly per unit.

The man who persuaded the VML to enter the lease, James H. Price, now of Seattle, found the deal so attractive that he left his employer and formed his own "company" to handle it.

MEANTIME, to grease the good will of VML officials, he entertained Pape with a party and bought airline tickets for Hawaii holiday for himself and Gary Lansing the league's then-assistant director, and their wives. (Both men declared later that Lansing reimbursed Price for the tickets.)

However, a few weeks after the VML paid $8,600 as the first monthly installment on 40 Ford Galaxie 500s, Pape learned that Price did not own the cars.

Marv Tonkin, who did own them, politely asked for his money.

It turned out that Price, an employe of the lease division at Marv Tonkin Ford, obtained his boss' signature on an agreement to lease 40 or more Galaxies at $115 a month.

Price then formed his own company — "Fleet Management Systems" — and signed an identical deal with VML, along with an additional contract providing gas, oil and maintenance for $100 a month per unit.

USING the original document signed by his boss, Price ordered the cars through Marv Tonkin Ford and put the "maintenance" agreement in his pocket.

The deal collapsed when Tonkin found out about the arrangement.

Tonkin settled for a continuation of the "maintenance" lease for a minimum of six months, and agreed in turn to absorb the $8,600 loss minus $1,300 refunded to the VML by Price. As for Price, VML Board Chairman Rev. Kent Lawrence explained in a letter to Washington: "I have no information as to what he did with our checks, but presumably he cashed them and spent the money."

Not counting $300 in attorneys' fees (paid to the law firm of VML board member [illegible]

[illegible] figure represents the difference between the cost of the Galaxies for a year — $108,090 — and the cost of a similar arrangement, involving less luxurious cars, through the GSA.

HERE IS how the loss was calculated:

The first six months of the car lease required monthly payment of $115 for rental and insurance, and another $100 for maintenance, gas and oil for each of 40 to 49 Ford Galaxie 500s. This came to a total of $68,155. (The VML did not receive all 49 cars the first month, which accounts for the slightly smaller figure than would be obtained by multiplying 49 by 6 by $215.)

The maintenance portion of the lease was canceled for the last six months of 1966, leaving VML with $115 monthly rental payments on each unit, plus actual operating expenses of about $40 monthly per unit as indi-

[illegible] maintenance for the last six months [illegible] $4,140

[illegible] $3,450

HOWEVER [illegible] Plymouth sedans are [illegible] leased through GSA for 6 cents per mile for the first 1,000 miles, 3.6 cents a mile for the next 250 miles, and 3 cents per mile thereafter.

If the VML had obtained a similar GSA arrangement, the cost would have been $93.50 per unit per month, based on average fleet mileage of 500 [illegible] per month, including gas, oil, maintenance and insurance.

On a car-for-car basis, then, the VML would have spent $53,388 instead of $68,000.

However, the fleet of Galaxies wasn't the only money waster in VML's 1966 repertoire.

THE GALAXIES, reportedly used for a variety of essential poverty work in areas without [illegible] were supplemented by a number of [illegible] by 32 [illegible] vendors. (The number varied a little from month to month.)

Eight Volkswagen sedans were [illegible] on an 18-month lease at a total monthly cost of $96 per unit. [illegible] 24 Volkswagen Microbuses, [illegible] transportation, were leased for June, July and August at a monthly cost of $221 per unit.

Neither figure includes the

NOT MENTIONED are [illegible] Litton [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

To Cost $5.7 Million

Tongue Point Pact Ready

By CHARLES BEGGS
For the Register-Guard

WASHINGTON—Final negotiations on a $5.7 million contract between the University of Oregon and the federal government to operate a women's job corps center at Tongue Point have completed [illegible]

The announcement [illegible] Job Corps Director Jerome [illegible] visit the states of Washington and Oregon [illegible] opportunities in connection with [illegible] or rating the center [illegible]

June 30, 1968. The contract [illegible] which still must be signed by [illegible] U.S. President Arthur Goldberg [illegible] ning and cleaning are will be retroactive to March 1.

Benjamin Sandler, OEO project director for Tongue Point, said plans call for an enrollment of 650 women at the center by June 30 this year. The first trainees are due to arrive the week of March 13.

The university and the government operated a men's job corps center at Tongue Point from January, 1964 until early this year, when the OEO announced a switch from men to women.

The contract, for $5,782,165 outlines courses to be offered in five specialized areas of education to general education courses. Photographic [illegible] office training in food service health [illegible] industrial arts [illegible] and cleaning skills, motor [illegible] and electronics assembly [illegible] test.

The total number of employees at the center Sandler said will be between 250 and 300 compared with about 350 at the beginning of the year.

This reflects a continued paring of forces in the job corps staffing. A year ago Tongue Point employed more than 400 persons when Flemming ordered a cut to 350.

There is only one other women's center on the West Coast for 300 women in Los Angeles.

Sandler said OEO is trying to comply with the request of Congress to assign half the job corps trainees to centers [illegible] in the areas where they live. He said he anticipates that many women at Tongue Point will come from the northwest.

Congressional critics have claimed that flying trainees across the country to centers was a waste of money.

Maintenance Continued

The first of 650 trainees are due at Tongue Point the week of March 13.

The operations contract between the University of Oregon and Philco-Ford and OEO will be retroactive to March 1.

Financing and operating the center through June 30, 1968, will cost $5.7 million.

The university and the government operated a men's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point from January 1964 until early this year when OEO announced a switch to women trainees.

The cost of changing Tongue Point was another thorn in the side of some congressmen. Sandler said that classroom modifications and plumbing and other mechanical changes will cost not more than $30,000. In addition, there will be the problem of acquiring new vocational equipment, and transferring the old equipment to other centers or putting it in government surplus stockpiles.

The project director claimed that the total cost of change-over is difficult to pinpoint.

"Much of what we are doing in the course of this, such as painting and remodeling with maintenance, we would have done anyway," he said. "How much of it is directly caused by the changing to a women's center is hard to say, but it's not too large."

Sandler said the women will be given an orientation session of 10-14 days when they arrive. During this time they will get thorough medical and dental checkups and orientation.

He said he hopes to have a group of five girls and a resident adviser come to Tongue Point from another center to begin a "big-sister" program used at other centers.

Trainees are assigned to girls seasoned in the corps whom they associate with for counseling and introduction to the program.

Complaint Heard

The poverty officials also are moving toward answering a complaint that was frequent among trainees at the start of the job corps — not enough to do.

"We insist upon appropriate recreational programs, consistent with prudent expenditures," Sandler said. He said gymnasium facilities are being worked over at Tongue Point to provide areas for sports and other activities.

Wendell Van Loan will remain center director "for the time being," Sandler said, but a search is under way for a new director. Van Loan previously said he wanted to return to the university.

Representing the university here during the two days of meetings were Van Loan and Ray Hawk, U of O president Arthur Flemming's assistant for anti-poverty programs.

Astoria Praised

Sandler said he is confident of "a good chance of success with the people of Astoria" in receiving the job corps center. He and Benetta Washington, an OEO associate director in charge of women's centers, visited Tongue Point and Astoria last month and were "very pleased" according to Sandler.

He said he hopes to have the contract formalities completed within two weeks. Hiring and other work already has begun at Tongue Point in anticipation of the contract, he said.

He admits that Congress could change the picture of Tongue Point if the requested [illegible]

Northwest Women Due At Tongue Point Job Center

By CHARLES BEGGS
Washington Bureau of The Oregonian

WASHINGTON (Special) — Many women to be trained at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will come from the Northwest, a federal official said Saturday.

"The Office of Economic Opportunity (federal anti-poverty agency in charge) is trying to comply with Congress' request to assign half the job trainees to centers in areas where they live," said Benjamin Sandler, Tongue Point OEO project director.

"However, Congress was vague as to what an area is."

Congressional critics have claimed that flying trainees across the country to centers was a waste of money.

Maintenance Continued

The first of 650 trainees are due at Tongue Point the week of March 13.

The operations contract between the University of Oregon and Philco-Ford and OEO will be retroactive to March 1. Financing and operating the center through June 30, 1968, will cost $5.7 million.

The university and the government operated a men's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point from January 1964 until early this year when OEO announced a switch to women trainees.

The cost of changing Tongue Point was another thorn in the side of some congressmen. Sandler said that classroom modifications and plumbing and other mechanical changes will cost not more than $40,000. In addition, there will be the problem of acquiring new vocational equipment, and transferring the old equipment to other centers or putting it in government surplus stockpiles.

The project director claimed that the total cost of change-over is difficult to pinpoint.

"Much of what we are doing in the course of this, such as painting and remodeling with maintenance, we would have done anyway," he said. "How much of it is directly caused by the changing to a women's center is hard to say, but it's not too large."

Sandler said the women will be given an orientation session of 10-14 days when they arrive. During this time they will get thorough medical and dental checkups and orientation.

He said he hopes to have a group of five girls and a resident adviser come to Tongue Point from another center to begin a "big-sister" program used at other centers.

Trainees are assigned to girls seasoned in the corps whom they associate with for counseling and introduction to the program.

Complaint Heard

The poverty officials also are moving toward answering a complaint that was frequent among trainees at the start of the job corps — not enough to do.

"We insist upon appropriate recreational programs, consistent with prudent expenditures," Sandler said. He said gymnasium facilities are being worked over at Tongue Point to provide areas for sports and other activities.

Wendell Van Loan will remain center director "for the time being," Sandler said, but a search is under way for a new director. Van Loan previously said he wanted to return to the university.

Representing the university here during the two days of meetings were Van Loan and Ray Hawk, U of O president Arthur Flemming's assistant for anti-poverty programs.

Astoria Praised

Sandler said he is confident of "a good chance of success with the people of Astoria" in receiving the job corps center. He and Benetta Washington, an OEO associate director in charge of women's centers, visited Tongue Point and Astoria last month and were "very pleased" according to Sandler.

He said he hopes to have the contract formalities completed within two weeks. Hiring and other work already has begun at Tongue Point in anticipation of the contract, he said.

He admits that Congress could change the picture of Tongue Point if the requested [illegible]

Women's Job Corps Has Openings at Tongue Point

Mid-Willamette Valley girls who want to join the Women's Job Corps "never had a better chance than now" because of the opening in mid-March of a women's center at Tongue Point.

"This is a tremendous opportunity," said Mrs. William Bernert, project director of Women in Community Service (WICS), which recruits for the Women's Job Corps.

The waiting period for applicants will be only three weeks, compared with two to three months up to now, she said Tuesday.

The WICS office is at 247 Commercial St. NE, and is open 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. weekdays and also has an answering service to take messages at other hours.

The women's Job Corps is open to girls 16 to 21 from low income families who need additional education, vocational training and other help. The centers provide training in vocations, such as clerical work and nursing fields, and helps young women prepare to be good housewives and mothers.

Men Transferred

Tongue Point, the Astoria center which recently was transformed from use by men to women, will open about March 15 with 50 girls, and by June 30 will have its full quota of 650, Mrs. Bernert said. Three other Women's Job Corps Centers are opening soon to comply with new federal requirements that 23 per cent of the Job Corps trainees in the country be women.

Most of the mid-Valley girls are expected to be sent to Tongue Point or Los Angeles. The average stay is about nine months to a year.

The WICS office has sent in every pending Job Corps application and has no backlog. Eight girls are currently awaiting assignment.

Because the expanded quota is an opportunity that shouldn't be overlooked," Mrs. Bernert said, WICS volunteers are distributing pamphlets in communities throughout Marion and Polk counties.

Applicants Are Referred

Many of applicants are referred from the State Employment Office and other agencies.

WICS is a volunteer organization of Marion-Polk women who have donated a total of 8,736 hours of time to Job Corps work since it was set up in May, 196[illegible]

OREGON DAILY
3/7/67

Contract Signed For Tongue Point

[illegible] Opportunity has reached agreement on a 16-month contract under which the University will operate a women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point.

Wendell Van Loan, center director, said Friday that the contract is not to exceed $5.8 million and is for operating a center with 650 women and a staff of 277. The University had proposed a staff of 297.

The first women are expected to arrive in mid-March.

Tongue Point was a men's Job Corps Center until January when it was shut down after two years of operation.

Caravan Planned To Meet First Corpswomen

A caravan of 25 local cars will go to Portland March 15 carrying 25 local couples to meet the first 50 Job Corps-women assigned to Tongue Point, and bring them to the Job Corps Center there, if plans approved by Tongue Point community relations council Tuesday night materialize.

Adelaine Sather, acting chairman at the meeting Tuesday night, named a committee to arrange plans for the caravan. She also appealed for volunteers, who are asked to notify any committee members or call the community relations office at Tongue Point.

The committee includes J. S. Elsbree, Howard B. Johnson, Mrs. Paul Baldwin and Mrs. Robert Neikes.

The council also heard Mrs. Alleen Christensen of the Portland office of Women in Community Service describe the thorough screening procedure she said is given women applicants for the Job Corps.

Each girl is interviewed for at least an hour and a half, her record is checked, and a visit is made to her home. Mrs. Christensen reported.

Girls will be accepted even if they have records of minor offenses, but not if they have been convicted of anything serious, she said.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,580)
MAR 2 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Lareau Takes Home Office Job At Philco-Ford

ERNEST LAREAU

Ernest W. Lareau, head of the Portland board vocational education [illegible] Job Corps Center, has accepted a new position with Philco-Ford's north office in Ft Washington, Pa.

He will direct [illegible] Philco-Ford's [illegible] Corps [illegible] Tongue Point [illegible] Reserve Youth Center [illegible] Corps Center [illegible] and vocational education [illegible] Youth, N.J.

Prior to assuming responsibilities as associate director in charge of vocational education at Tongue Point, Lareau served as director of the Portland Technical Institute in Philadelphia.

He has held teaching and managerial positions for Drexel Technical Institute, U.S. Navy Corps, University, Westinghouse, RCA and Philco - Ford.

He holds degrees from U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N.Y.; Duke University, and Fitchburg State Teachers College, Mass.

He also did postgraduate work at Cornell university.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 384,694)
MAR 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

OEO Gives Approval To Tongue Point Pact

ASTORIA (Special) — The [illegible] Office of Economic Opportunity [illegible] has approved a 16-month [illegible] with [illegible] to operate a women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, center director, said Friday.

Dr. Van Loan and other Tongue Point and University of Oregon officials returned Friday after spending most of the week in Washington, D.C., negotiating the contract.

The contract, effective March 1, 1967, will continue to July 1, 1968, Dr. Van Loan said. It is for operating a center with 650 women and provides for a staff of 277 persons.

Amount Itemized

Dr. Van Loan itemized the contract amount as follows: salaries and wages $2,524,000; [illegible] supplies and services; [illegible] d training of staff $100,000; University of Oregon overhead $301,527; capital improvements $750,000; rehabilitation of plant $125,000; operation and maintenance $100,000.

Dr. Ray Hawk of the university headed the delegation that conducted the negotiations, Dr. Van Loan said. Talks with OEO officials began Tuesday morning and wound up Thursday afternoon.

"We didn't get all we asked for, but have no cause for complaint," Dr. Van Loan said. The university had proposed a staff of 297, but OEO officials cut it by 20.

First 50 to 75 women for the new center are expected to arrive March 15. A former men's Job Corps center at Tongue Point was shut down at end of January after operating two years.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

First Women Due March 15 At Tongue Point

First Job Corpswomen assigned to Tongue Point Center will arrive Wednesday, March 15, according to latest word received by center officials from Job Corps authorities. Previously the first women had been expected the first week in March.

The first group will include 50 women, all of them from other centers where they will have spent less than 60 days.

Groups of 100 will arrive each two weeks after March 15 until there is a total 650 by the end of June.

Meanwhile top officials of Tongue Point and University of Oregon left Monday for Washington, D.C., for final negotiations with Office of Economic Opportunity on terms of the university's contract to operate the center. Negotiations are expected to end by Thursday and if successful, will result in signing of a contract before the local group returns.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director; Dr. Harold McAbee, assistant director, and David Jordan business manager, were the Tongue Pointers making the trip. Dr. Ray Hawk headed the University of Oregon group.

Tuesday night Mrs. Alleen Christensen, project manager at Portland for Women In Community Service, will meet with the Community Relations Council of Tongue Point Center and staff members to discuss recruiting procedures.

WICS handles recruiting work for the women's Job Corps centers.

The meeting will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the Tongue Point library. Mrs. Helene Kennedy, Job Corps coordinator in Portland, will accompany Mrs. Christensen.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,580)
MAR 1 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

2 New School Buses Arrive

Two of three new school buses for Astoria school district arrived Monday from Lima, Ohio piloted by school district employees. The third, driven by Ron Trenholm, district clerk, is due Thursday. Trenholm did some teacher recruitment work on the way west.

Two of the buses have already gone into service.

School Superintendent Roy Seeborg said that Tongue Point Job Corps Center and Warrenton district helped out in the emergency by loaning a bus each, while Carl Beckman, Seaside school bus contractor, also made one available. Seeborg expressed gratitude for these services.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
MAR 6 - 1967

Job Site Aide 'Going Home'

ASTORIA — The [illegible] of the Philco-Ford [illegible] educational [illegible] Corps [illegible] Point [illegible] moved [illegible] of [illegible] Philadelphia [illegible] Ernest W. Lareau [illegible] program director for [illegible] Philco-Ford [illegible] with the Job Corps, in addition to other contracts.

Before coming to Tongue Point, Lareau was director of the Job Technical Institute in Philadelphia.

Longview, Wash.
News
(Cir. D. 19,983)
FEB 2 6 1967

'Miracle' Joins Monticello Staff

A [illegible] has come to Monticello Junior High School!

He's Terrence Miracle — the new seventh grade teacher who recently was adviser to the student government at the Tongue Point Job Corps.

During an international [illegible] summer, Miracle met [illegible] Shriver, director of the [illegible] of Economic Opportunity.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon

Job Corps Speaker Due

[illegible]

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,348)
MAR 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

Contract on Job Corps Is Reached

ASTORIA (AP)—The University of Oregon and the Office of Economic Opportunity have reached agreement on a 16-month contract under which the university will operate a women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, center director, said Friday that the contract is not to exceed $5.8 million and is for operating a center with 650 women with a staff of 297. The university had proposed a staff of 297.

The first women are expected to arrive in mid-March.

Tongue Point was a men's Job Corps Center until January when it was shut down after two years of operation.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon

50 Women Due At Job Center

ASTORIA — First women [illegible] assigned to Tongue Point Job Corps Center are due March [illegible] in [illegible] Center [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Bugas to Receive Torch Award at BPW Banquet

Ted Bugas, director of public relations, Bumble Bee Seafoods, has been selected as one of eight recipients of the Golden Torch awards to be presented by the Oregon Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

Bugas, nominated by the Astoria club, will receive the award at the third annual Golden Torch awards banquet March 11 7 p.m. at the Eugene hotel. Recipients were selected on significant contributions toward advancing the status and betterment of better opportunities for business and professional women."

TED BUGAS

Bugas has served as treasurer for Salmon for All Inc. for three years, a group whose efforts defeating the outlawing of commercial fishing thereby protecting the jobs of thousands of workers in canneries and offices of fish companies as well as other industries. Bumble Bee Seafoods employs more women than any corporation of business in Clatsop county.

In 1966 Bugas was president of the Astoria chamber of commerce. He has been a member of Tongue Point Job Corps community relations council, has served as March of Dimes chairman, Fort Clatsop district Boy Scout chairman, United Good Neighbors local executive, director of associated Oregon Industries, treasurer of Salmon for All, USO executive board. He has made countless speeches on importance of education for both men and women.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
MAR 3 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Mt. Angel Grads In 'Outstanding Young Men' Book

MOUNT ANGEL—Four Mount Angel College graduates have been selected for inclusion in the 1967 edition of Outstanding Young Men of America.

They are Terry T. Grant, Ray Pirkl and Pat Travis, all class of 1964, and Doug Thivaite.

Grant currently is serving as an administrative official for CARE in Turkey. Pirkl, a Woodburn resident and former Mount Angel Junior High School instructor, is attending Oregon College of Education.

Travis is employed by the California Bureau of Social ... Santa Rosa Calif., and Thwaite is a counselor at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Daily Journal of Commerce
MAR 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Funds Approved For Job Center

Eugene — The University of Oregon has been awarded a 16-month, $5,782,165 contract by the office of economic opportunity to operate the new women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point Naval Station near Astoria.

Plans call for the center to be opened in mid-April. It will accommodate a total of 680 girls and will offer basic education, work training and health education to girls aged 16 to 21 who are jobless and out of school.

The women's center is the first in the Pacific Northwest and is one of 16 in the country. Formerly, the Astoria facility was a Job Corps Center for men.

Columbia Press
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. W. 3,000)
MAR 2 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Ladies Will Be Late

Women Job Corps enrollees are now expected to arrive at Tongue Point about March 15 instead of this week as earlier predicted. A total of 650 are expected by the end of June with groups of 100 to arrive each two weeks.

Tongue Point officials and local Community Relations committee members have met to discuss arrangements

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,133)
MAR 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

ASTORIA (AP) — A 16-month contract to run a women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point has been awarded the University of Oregon by the Office of Economic Opportunity. The contract is not to exceed $5 million.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the center, said negotiations were completed this week on the contract for operating the center for women with 277 staff members. The first women are expected in mid-March.

The center was for men until it was closed in January after two years.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
MAR 7 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Band Concert Patrons Named

Six Tongue Point Job Corps Center administrators and their wives will be patrons and patronesses for Astoria high school's band concert featuring nationally-known trumpet artist Raphael Mendez Tuesday.

They are Dr. and Mrs. Wendell Van Loan, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. ... Mr. and Mrs. James ...

Staff wives who will pour at a reception following the concert are the Mesdames J. Lynn ... Wykoff, Paul Reymann, Mc...

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
MAR 7 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Center Ready For Women

By STEPHEN GREEN
Journal Staff Correspondent

ASTORIA — Within the next few days young women from throughout the United States will begin arriving at the ... Point Job Corps Center. By June 30, 600 will be enrolled.

Final negotiations on a $5.7 million contract were completed late last week between the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and the University of Oregon for operation of the center. Fruco Ford Corp. is the primary sub-contractor.

UNIVERSITY ... former naval base from January 1964 until early this year, when the OEO announced the switch from men to women. ... expansion is expected to ... to $40,000.

... only other women's center on the West Coast is at Los Angeles, with a capacity of 300 enrollees. The first arrivals at Tongue Point will be transfers from one of the 12 women's centers across the country.

Ranging in age from 16 to ... the girls will be living in ... dormitories. ... rooms ...

"Textbook learning" will be de-emphasized. Each class period will be divided into a variety of ... and ... to ... the ... experiences in listening, speaking, reading, and writing, regardless of the subject.

Informality and student involvement are to be stressed. Team teaching, problem solving discussions and class ... are some of the basic ...

Each girl will plan her own educational program with the aid of a counselor.

A basic education program ... required to develop the girl's knowledge of language arts, social studies, functional science, mathematics, health and physical education and family living. Differences in achievement levels will require ... of the entire curriculum.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
MAR 7 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

AWARDED ... Army Secretary ... as Division Engineer, North Pacific Division, headquartered in Portland was Brig. Gen. Peter C. Hyzer, top left, who retired in February. Ceremonies took place in Washington, D.C. Other newsmakers are, from left in top row, Kit-Bredree Hawkins and James E. Griffin, and bottom row ...

Newsmakers: Leader Named For Crusade

Named division chairmen for the 1967 Crusade Against Cancer at Multnomah County ... are life insurance executive Bruce E. Hosford, chairman for ... business ... Eugene banker Kittredge Hawkins and James E. Griffin, Portland lawyer, cochairmen of the trades and industry division; and Robert O. Bassell, Oregon Medical Association officer, chairman of the professional division. Appointments were announced by the general chairman of the Multnomah County unit of the American Cancer Society, Ward V. Cook.

Honored as International Drycleaner of the Year 1967 at Portland drycleaner Jack Stacey, who is past president of the International Drycleaners' Congress.

Deanie Elliott, an eighth grader at Cathedral School and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Elliott, 203 SW Kingston Ave., has won first prize of $30 for her essay in a contest sponsored by the publication Catholic Miss.

New officers of the Japan Society of Oregon are Edmund G. Ellis, president; Claude Wilhelm Dr., vice president; Dr. Kei Koyama, vice ...; J.W. Speer Jr., secretary, and George I. Azumano, treasurer. Elected to the board of directors were Marvin R. Bolstad, Robert L. Cormack, David C. Duncan, Walter Fuchigami, Kyohei Kimura, Murray Lessing, ... Matsumoto and W. ... H. Schlauch.

Newly elected president of the Greater Portland Young Democrats is Ann Fowler. Other new officers are Bill Snouffer, vice president; Dianne Glasshrenner secretary, and Gretchen Keller, treasurer.

Allan L. Crisler, manager of the trade and commerce department of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, has been selected for listing in the 1967 edition of Outstanding Young Men of America.

Ernest W. Lareau, head of Philco-Ford vocational education program at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has been promoted to project director of all of Philco-Ford's subcontracts with the Job Corps.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
MAR 3 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Retired Drama Teacher to Give Reading Here

MRS. JEAN POULL

Mrs. Jean Poull, retired drama teacher and past president of the Very Little Theatre in Eugene, will present a dramatic reading of "Lord Pengo" Thursday at the Community hall in Navy Heights.

Her talk will be the third in a series of five arranged by the Women's Activities committee of Tongue Point Job Corps center in conjunction with the Division of Continuing Education of the Oregon State system of Higher Education.

Presentation of the S. N. Behrman play will take place at 7:30 p.m. Admission will be by season coupon or single admission ticket which may be purchased at the door.

Mrs. Poull is a graduate of the Columbia Conservatory of Aurora Ill. She has directed her own drama studio in Muncie, Ind. and in Eugene. Now retired as a drama teacher she is an active member of Eugene's Very Little Theatre.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 384,694)
MAR 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Awaits Girls

ASTORIA (Special) — First ... for the new Tongue ... Job Corps Center for ...

... 55 are expected Tuesday, officials said. They will arrive from all parts of the Pacific Coast states by bus and train ...

... night, arriving at Tongue Point about 9:30.

First two weeks will be de... remodeled and decorated to accommodate the enrollswomen. Preparation of classrooms was still in progress, particularly ... vocational courses.

... the staff of 415 for the former men's Job Corps Center has been shaken down to this ... for the ... new assignments and some ... is still being done ...

Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 46,512 - S 48,290)
MAR 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

First Group Wednesday

Tongue Point Enrollees Due

The first group of young women are scheduled to arrive Wednesday at the newly converted Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria.

There will be about 50 girls in the first group—some of them transferees from other centers and some new enrollees, according to Ray Hawk, University of Oregon coordinator of anti-poverty programs. The center is operated by the university under contract with the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

That contract still hasn't been signed, Hawk said Monday, but he added that only details remain to be worked out. The university and OEO have agreed on a $5.5 million contract to operate the center from March 1 of this year through June 30 of 1968.

Another 100 girls are scheduled to arrive at the center in about two weeks, and about 100 will be arriving every two weeks after that, Hawk said. The center is scheduled to reach a maximum enrollment of 650 by June 30.

Formal dedication ceremonies have been scheduled for April 12, with some OEO officials from Washington planning to attend, Hawk said.

Tongue Point was operated as a men's Job Corps center for two years by the university with Philco-Ford Corp. serving as training subcontractor. Then in January, OEO abruptly announced that the center would be converted to one for women as part of OEO attempts to comply with a congressional directive to get more women into the Job Corps program.

Representative Edith Green, D-Oregon, attacked the change over and called for an investigation. A General Accounting Office probe is now under way and a report is expected soon, a spokesman for Mrs. Green told the Register-Guard Monday.

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Eugene, Oregon
Univ. of Ore. Emerald
MAR 7 - 1967

Contract Signed For Tongue Point

ASTORIA (AP) — The University and the Office of Economic Opportunity have reached agreement on a 16-month contract under which the University will operate a women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point.

... Van Loan, center director, said Friday that the contract is not to exceed $5.8 million and is for operating a center with 650 women and a staff of ... 277.

... are expected ... mid-March ... Point was a men's Job ... ter until January when ... after two years ... operation.

Sherwood, Oregon
(Cir. W. 1,678)
MAR 2 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Topic For Luncheon

Virgil Savage, who is with public relations at the Job Corps center at Astoria, will be the speaker at the noon luncheon of the West Hills Christian Woman's club March 9 at the Eagles Lodge, 4333 SW 30th.

The special feature artist, Anna ... Donner, will give instructions in ... to paint an art piece. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. James Hutchison.

Nursery care will be provided free of charge at the West Hills Christian Church. ... 24 ... ren with mothers serving as ... luncheon for their children. ... is an inter-faith organization with a ... center-stage greeting ... a month. ... invitation is extended to all women to attend.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
MAR 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Grant To Help Young Women

The U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity ... has provided a grant of $5,782,165 for operation of the new Job Corps Center for women at Tongue Point near Astoria.

The grant, effective March 1, provides funds for use of the former Tongue Point Naval Station as a training center for 680 out-of-school, out-of-work young women. Until this year, the site was in use as a Job Corps center for young men

650-800 Students Expected

... Economic Opportunity has approved a 16-month contract with University of Oregon to operate a women's Job Corps Center for 650 to 800 students at a tentative cost of $5,782,165, director Dr. Wendell Van Loan announced Friday.

Dr. Van Loan and other Tongue Point officials were back Friday after spending most of the week in Washington D.C. negotiating the final contract.

The contract covers the period March 1, 1967 to July 1, 1968.

The contract call for a staff of 277 people, exclusive of a few self-funding posts such as beauty parlor operators.

Salaries $1.5 Million

Dr. Van Loan gave the following itemized list of cost factors:

Salaries and wages $1,594,000; sub-contract for vocational training by Philco-Ford Corporation $597,000; materials ... and services, $1,784,638; travel, relocation and training of staff $100,000; University of Oregon overhead $301,527; capital equipment $250,000; rehabilitation of ... $[illegible]; ... and ... $[illegible]; ... $[illegible]; ... $[illegible];

Welcome Lines Up For Job Corps Girls

Even government red tape has been cleared to make the most of the arrival on about March 15 or from 50 to 75 Job Corps girls to the Tongue Point Center.

The word from Washington, D.C., is that the Tongue Point Job Corps center has been definitely classified as a permanent establishment for training of young women enrollees. This means that the center will not close and that it will not return to the instruction of young men.

The first girls are expected to be from the Northwest who have volunteered at other job corps centers to come here and get the local program off to a good start. They are to be Big Sisters welcoming the rest of the 650 enrollees to be assigned here.

As soon as definite information is received on the arrival by phone in Portland of the first girls, further details for their reception will be worked out. If any number of them arrive about the same time, a local caravan is to meet them at Portland international airport.

This reception was proposed at a meeting of the Community Relations committe, a local civic group which has representatives from the Job Corps staff and the community. Final details on this plan to greet the girls and let them feel they are welcomed here will be announced when information is obtained on the time they come to Portland.

Dr. Wendell Van Loan takes the Oregon State Ways and Means Committee on a tour of the Tongue Point facilities which will soon house the girl Job Corps

Herald & News
Klamath Falls, Oregon
(Cir. D 14,570 - S 14,286)
MAR 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Recruit

Judy Hawkin was sworn into the Job Corps this morning by Donald Niven, an employe of Wineme National Forest. She took the oath at 8 a.m. in the Klamath Falls Employment Office and left at 9:55 a.m. for the Tongue Point Job Corps Center which has recently been converted for women. Miss Hawkin, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Hawkin, 1332 Riverside, will be in the first class using the Astoria facility. Her brother graduated from Job Corps about a month ago and has joined the Marine Corps.

Herald & News
(Cir. D 14,570 - S 14,286)

Tongue Point Training Cost $7,500

ASTORIA (UPI) — [illegible] agreed to provide a [illegible] man at the Tongue Point center next [illegible] cost [illegible] $7,500, the Office of Economic Opportunity announced today.

The [illegible] funds below the [illegible] would be for a year's [illegible]

The [illegible] that some $92,541 was paid to dependents of Job Corps enrollees in [illegible] 1965 to December [illegible]

Some [illegible] now in the Job Corps were admitted. But only 5% completed their course of study.

Columbia Press
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. W 2,157)
MAR 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

WOMEN ARRIVE AT T. POINT CENTER

Tuesday was arrival day for women at the Tongue Point Job Corps center. The first group of 72 arrived by bus as the initial group in the new program here. Informal welcoming was held Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. in the theater building. Formal opening of the Womens' Center will be April 12.

Following the first group will begroups of about 100 every two weeks until the 650 quota is reached before July 1.

Staff at the T.P. Center is now 270.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
MAR 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

1st Women Due Tuesday At Center

The Job Corps [illegible] at Tongue Point [illegible] to receive its first women trainees Tuesday evening, according to present plans.

Credentials [illegible] receive [illegible] candidates [illegible] application [illegible] before [illegible] Portland [illegible] Corps [illegible] with [illegible] by the Corps [illegible] representatives of Women [illegible] Community Service [illegible] and the [illegible]

The women will be [illegible] at the Portland YWCA where the Job Corps [illegible] headquarters, and will [illegible] to Astoria by bus [illegible] morning.

Weather [illegible] there will be [illegible] 20 [illegible] Tongue Point [illegible] community officials at a gathering [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible]

Dormitories Ready

Tongue Point [illegible] said [illegible] the [illegible] have [illegible] and preparation of [illegible] rooms is [illegible]

Skidmore of the [illegible] from the [illegible] former [illegible] area is the [illegible] author [illegible] for the women [illegible] some [illegible] Mayor [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible]

Woman Director Named

Another [illegible] director [illegible] to [illegible] Van [illegible] Women [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

59 Girls Begin Stay at Job Center

Trainees Represent 7 States

Fifty-nine girls, aged 16 to 21, all from western states, were getting acquainted with things at Tongue Point Job Corps Center Wednesday.

Most of them arrived by bus Tuesday evening, the rest came in by later bus Wednesday morning.

"We had to make three transfers on the way here from Arizona and didn't get in until this morning," said 20-year-old Clemencia (Baby) Pacheco, from Glendale, Ariz.

Despite weariness and a hard rain, she and the other girls seemed enthusiastic and determined to succeed.

There were 17 girls in the contingent from Arizona.

"We've all made up our minds that all 17 of us will see it through here," said Miss Pacheco as her companions nodded agreement.

Greeted at Assembly

Following a late breakfast in the Tongue Point cafeteria that ended a long night's rest for the tired arrivals, there was an assembly in the Tongue Point theater at which formal greetings were given.

Ben Sadler, project director for this area for Office of Economic Opportunity, told the girls that "I think you have made a wise choice" to enter the Job Corps and find a new way of life.

"You are the first at this new women's center, you will set the tone," he said. "If you succeed, this will be a successful center."

Similar comments were given by Capt. Ray Cunningham of the Astoria police and Sister Francetta Barberis, retired college president and special consultant from Washington, D.C.

Astorians Speak

Other speakers included Mayor Harry Steinbock, Chairman Deskin Bergey and Adelaine Sather of the Community Relations Council of Tongue Point, Len Coward of University of Oregon, and Howard Gentry of Philco-Ford corporation.

The girls are from Oregon, Washington, California, Arizona New Mexico, Hawaii and Alaska.

They will spend the next two weeks in orientation and counseling to select courses of training.

Another 100 girls are expected in two weeks.

Preparation of quarters and classrooms was still in progress, but is expected to be finished when orientation period closes.

Dana Lodge, 18, of Phoenix, Ariz., dropped out of high school in her sophomore year, she said.

"But I decided that to get ahead in this world you have to have training," she said. "Getting a job is hard when you have gone

17 Children in Family

She said she had heard much good about the Job Corps and decided to try it.

We are all happy to be here, she said.

Clemencia Pacheco, second oldest in a family of 17 children, said she dropped out of school in the mid-semester of her senior year when a younger sister died. Miss Pacheco wants to learn to be a beautician or a nurse's aide, and may investigate the electronic training that also is available, she said.

Geraldine Martin, 16, from Coolidge, Ariz., is one of the youngest of the new corpswomen.

Friends told me what a great opportunity the Job Corps provides," she said. "I want to study something along the medical line here."

Miss Martin said that the downpour of rain doesn't discourage her expectations.

"We've all decided we are going to love it here," she said.

Of the 72 girls for whom credentials have been received at Tongue Point, 42 are Caucasian, 12 Negro, 1 Asiatic and 14 are mixed racially. Tongue Point

Tongue Point officials said they were surprised and pleased at the attitudes of the incoming girls. Screening has been done carefully by Women in Community Service and the results are noticeable, Dr. Wendell Van Loan, center director, com-

Top picture shows some of the 59 new Job Corps trainees at Tongue Point, left, getting greetings at the theater there Wednesday morning. Below, Corpswomen Clemencia Pacheco, Geraldine Martin and Dana Lodge tell impressions to a reporter.

Omaha Corpswomen to Assist New Trainees

Resting in one of the dormitory rooms of the new women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point are these five corpswomen who came here from Omaha to spend a week helping incoming trainees get acquainted. From left, Carolyn Lofton, Beverley White, Adela Virgil, Valura Monroe, Paula Garcia.

Herald & News
Klamath Falls, Oregon
(Cir. D 14,170 - S 14,266)
MAR 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

Tongue Point Women Arrive

ASTORIA (UPI) — The first women trainees are due this evening at the Tongue Point Jobs Corps center.

Tongue Point officials said they had received credentials for 72 newly-recruited young women but that 50 to 55 were expected in the first group.

The trainees were to arrive in Portland by bus or plane from various areas of the Pacific Coast states and be met by representatives of Women in Community Service, screening groups for women's centers and the Job Corps.

OEO Official to Help Greet 1st Corpswomen

Ben Sandler, Office of Economic Opportunity project manager for the west coast, will be on hand to help greet the first 50 or more Job Corpswomen to arrive tonight at the center today.

Also on hand will be Sister Francetta Barberis, special consultant to Dr. Bennetta Washington, women's Job Corps national director.

Arriving Monday to help orient the incoming corpswomen and make them feel at home were five corpswomen from the 600-woman Job Corps Center in Omaha, Neb.

They are Paula Garcia, Brawley, Calif.; Valura Monroe, Manor, Tex.; Adela Virgil, Antonita, Calif.; Beverley White, San Antonio, Tex., and Carolyn Lofton, Houston, Tex.

These five women will remain a week. They told the Daily Astorian Tuesday they were enthusiastic about the Job Corps and believed Tongue Point would provide a good center for the women trainees scheduled to arrive this spring.

All the first group of girls arriving tonight will live in the main dormitory building, four to a room. Furnishing and equipping the rooms has been completed.

The cafeteria in the main dormitory will go into operation today, Job Corps officials said.

All major rehabilitation work on the building has been completed.

The second group of 100 new corpswomen is due to arrive in two weeks.

An assembly for welcoming the new arrivals is scheduled Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. in the Tongue Point theater. Tongue Point and Astoria officials will give formal greetings.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Clr. D 6,560)
MAR 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Orientation Of Trainees Under Way

Job Corps women at Tongue Point began two weeks of orientation and counselling Wednesday, prior to start of first training classes March 27.

Wednesday's schedule called for dental examinations, issuance of clothing for campus wear and for physical education, group discussions and a meeting with security officials regarding regulations governing [illegible] to get around the [illegible]

[illegible] women's military organization.

Everything the corpswomen will experience in the coming [illegible] of training, it will be a [illegible] before they graduate.

Sadler cautioned on the first group of Tongue Point Corpswomen indicates approximately 60 per cent Caucasian, 17 per cent Negro and 21 per cent mixed racial status. The ratio of Caucasians is higher than is normal and is probably due to the fact that most of the newcomers are from Pacific coast [illegible]

[illegible] population is comparatively lower than in the rest of the nation, Job Corps officials said.

About 10 per cent of the corps women are mothers, the corps [illegible]

Reading tests indicated reading [illegible] grade level. Fifteen per cent left school before end of the 8th grade, 21 per cent before sophomore year and 29 per cent before junior year in high school. Fifteen per cent made it into the senior year in high school. Median age [illegible] years, 19 per cent age 16 and 28 per cent age 17.

Greatest percentage of the girls is from California, or around 43 per cent. Twenty-five per cent are from Arizona 15 per cent from Washington and smaller percentages from the other western states.

There will be a dance March 25, first social activity for the

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps, VML Get Rep. Green Criticism

Journal National News Service [illegible] — Rep. [illegible] with a high cost, wasted Edith Green, D-Ore., an [illegible] to prepare gets to about [illegible] living.

The [illegible] tells that Mrs. Green said she discussed [illegible] with Antipoverty Director Sargent Shriver Saturday, at Shriver's request.

AT THAT TIME she also told Shriver of her concern about charges of excessive spending by the Valley Migrant League, as reported in the Job Corps, especially in a Journal series. She and [illegible] urban centers such as Tonopah [illegible]

SHE SAID a preliminary report from a General Accounting Office examination [illegible] the cases and data were [illegible] than I [illegible] and seemed to [illegible] [illegible] The [illegible] in 1965, [illegible] was $12,000 each, and may have been higher last year, she said.

A Job Corps center for girls at Albuquerque, which Mrs. Green also asked to be investigated because of reported "moon."

[illegible] will be retained, and ought to be expanded," she said. "Of those that are not working well, it's a question of whether or not we can make modification by the Valley [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FIRST TWO TRAINEES to arrive in Portland Tuesday enroute to Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center are Mary Chamberlain (left) and Patti Johnson. Both are from California. They studied Tongue Point folder as they lunched at Downtown YMCA after arriving in Portland by plane. Mary hopes for career as telephone operator, Patti wants to be beautician.

First Of 650 Women Trainees Arrive For Job Corps Orientation

[illegible] first two trainees [illegible] for the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center [illegible] Portland Airport [illegible] Mary Chamberlain, 18, Oceanside, Calif., and Patricia Johnson, 18, Redlands, Calif., were greeted by Job Corps officials. The two [illegible] off the [illegible] Pacific Airlines flight from Los Angeles.

The young women from Northern California were among a group of [illegible] from seven western states scheduled to arrive later Tuesday by bus and plane.

Most of the [illegible] were expected to be assigned to the Tongue Point center [illegible] Women [illegible] Director [illegible] Dowell [illegible] having for the corps' center [illegible]

A squad [illegible] from the Timberlake Job Corps Center [illegible] Forest Grove [illegible] to be at the airport Tuesday afternoon to help the girls transfer luggage from airliners to waiting buses. Miss Hessie Kennedy, [illegible] Two Oaks [illegible] the Downtown YMCA, said every [illegible] arrived to help with luggage.

No serious breakdown by state of the first group arriving at Tongue Point was [illegible] but [illegible] two [illegible] (California, 31; Arizona, 18; Washington, 11; Hawaii, 6; Oregon, 3, and Alaska, 2.

Most of the girls are between 18 to 21 years of age.

Equipment Coming

Following the 14-day orientation process, Large Point's first training group will move into [illegible] courses in health services, business and clerical subjects, and into vocational training.

Vocational courses will include [illegible] commercial art and [illegible] business and [illegible] secretarial courses [illegible]

Officials said that not all training equipment had arrived, but that it was scheduled to arrive by the time the girls had completed [illegible] and Typewriters, [illegible] most of the equipment [illegible] already [illegible]

Officials expect [illegible] the young women will arrive with considerable luggage. "Girls like to hang onto things," one man [illegible] boys can [illegible] on a hardly more than a shaving kit," one official [illegible]

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,603)
MAR 27 1967

Womens Job Corps Contract Given UO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The University of Oregon has been awarded a $5.7 million contract to operate the [illegible] Women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point.

The center will offer basic education, work training and health education to girls aged 16 to 21 who are jobless and out of school.

More than 600 girls are expected in April.

The university, which operated the center with the Philco-Ford Corp. when men were trained there, signed the contract for a 16-month period.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,603)
MAR 27 1967

Job Corps Group Due

ASTORIA — Second group of girls to enroll at Tongue Point Job Corps Center is due Tuesday, according to center officials.

It is not yet known how many will be in the group, but original plans called for arrival of about 100 every two weeks.

The official opening ceremony planned for April 12 has been canceled by Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, University of Oregon president.

An open house will be held in August, instead, after the full complement of 650 corpswomen has arrived, Dr. Bernetta Washington, head of the Women's Job Corps, is expected here from Washington, D.C., about that time.

Second Trainee Group to Arrive Here Tuesday

The second group of girls to arrive at Tongue Point Job Corps Center for women is due next Tuesday, center officials said Thursday. No credentials have arrived yet, so it is not known just how many will come. Original plans called for arrival of about 100 every two weeks through June.

An official opening ceremony tentatively planned for Wednesday, April 12, has been cancelled by Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, University of Oregon president, it was also announced Thursday. This was confirmed by Dr. Ray Hawk of the university, who was a Tongue point visitor Thursday.

Instead, an open house some time in August, after the full complement of 650 corpswomen have arrived, is tentatively planned. Dr. Bennetta Washington, head of the Women's Job Corps, may be here from Washington, D. C., for a visit about that time.

Meanwhile the first 59 girls who arrived last week were still going through orientation. Only one has asked to go home, center officials said, because she wants to study cosmetology and it is not on the curriculum here.

Job Corps Trainee Ready

BAGS PACKED and [illegible] life as Job Corps trainee at Tongue Point Job Corps Center [illegible] old Nancy Pray, [illegible] of Mr. William Pray of 2309 E. 27th St., Vancouver, Wash. Nancy was among 72 girls who left Portland Tuesday night for center which has been converted from men's to women's training center. Helene Kennedy, state coordinator for Job Corps, said 100 girls will arrive every two weeks until total reaches 650 girls. Turn to Page 3.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,348)
MAR 27 1967

Sen. Hatfield Backs Tongue Point Shift

By CHARLES E. BEGGS
Statesman Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON (Special) — Sen. Mark Hatfield says he "has no qualms" about supporting the recent conversion of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center from training men to women.

My information was that Tongue Point was best suited for the change, and I think it was an excellent idea," Oregon's junior Senator said in an interview.

Sen. Wayne Morse also supports the change and last week praised the University of Oregon's operation of the Tongue Point center.

But Rep. Edith Green has been highly critical of the Tongue Point changeover. She said it appeared a waste of money and has requested a government audit of spending practices at the center.

Hatfield says he has discussed the change with poverty war officials and residents of Astoria. Most Astorians he talked to "generally supported the change," he said.

The University of Oregon, which operated a men's Job Corps camp at Tongue Point for two years, recently agreed on a 16-month contract to run the women's facility.

Hatfield said the Job Corps is "one of the toughest programs" in the whole poverty war in which to see fast results. He said many programs, such as Operation Headstart, deal with poor persons in their own environments, while the Job Corps does not.

"This fact," he said, "is bound to make it more costly." He accused some critics of the poverty war of "throwing out the baby with the bath water," instead of looking at the whole problem.

Some persons, he said, are expecting miracles to be "wrought overnight." Hatfield feels that the country has not been involved in the poverty war long enough to allow persons to be "accurately critical."

He also thinks the "idea of letting them (trainees) pick up and go home any time they want to is unsound." He favors a more strict code of regulations, such as that used in the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) camps of the 1930s.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
MAR 27 1967

Tongue Point Best Center For Change, Morse Claims

By CHARLES E. BEGGS
Washington Bureau, The Oregonian

WASHINGTON (Special) — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center was the most suitable center in the nation for changing from a men's to a women's program, according to Sen. Wayne Morse.

"There wasn't anything else the OEO (Office of Economic Opportunity) could do," the senator said in an interview. He said a new center couldn't be constructed because last year's Congress slashed $1.7 million from the poverty budget.

Congress, at the insistence of Rep. Edith Green and others, tacked a provision onto last year's poverty bill that required that at least 23 per cent of Job Corps trainees be women. Morse said budget limitations forced the poverty officials to look for an existing center to convert from men to women, and Tongue Point seemed the best possible.

The senior senator was instrumental in getting the country's first Job Corps center located at Tongue Point, the former naval station declared surplus property in 1962. The University of Oregon and [illegible] OEO recently agreed on a $5.7 million contract to operate the women's facility through the next fiscal year.

Morse said the entire Oregon congressional delegation was briefed on the Tongue Point change before it was announced here in early January. He said poverty officials demonstrated that the change-over would cost "only a fraction of building a new center."

The senator had some sharp words for critics who say the poverty program is costing too much and isn't working fast enough.

"I [illegible] we would stop being overweighters," he said. "This program is just starting and there will be problems and it will cost a lot of money. But I'm not a cost man, I'm a human values man."

Morse said it should come as no surprise that the Job Corps costs are high because the corps isn't dealing with "ordinary people."

"These kids have problems and it takes a lot of money and work to solve them," he said. "It's easy for people to create false analogies," he said, such as comparing the Job Corps to a high school or vocational school program.

The senator said that the long-run cost to society will be much lower as the result of the Job Corps because of the [illegible]

Morse said he will urge Congress to give the poverty program [illegible] this year, and more. But he sounded a bit pessimistic and the Vietnam war crept into the discussion.

He said he can't justify poverty program complaints when people are "voting billions of dollars to kill American boys in Vietnam, and think it's all right, and then object to the small poverty war costs."

Morse said the Johnson administration "talks a good game of guns and butter, but the butter is melting away."

Capital Journal
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 24,210)
MAR 23 1967

Girls Join Job Corps

The recent opening of the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center has attracted the attention of young women in the mid-Willamette Valley.

A total of five Salem area women have signed up within the past two weeks for training at the center. Most recently accepted were Mary Alice Mata, 21, 2381 State St., Salem, Francisca Gonzales, 20, Woodburn, Sharon Brown, whose home is in Eugene, but who has lived in Salem and Angela Penn, Independence. They will leave for the center on Tuesday.

Until recently the Tongue Point facility was a Men's Job Corps Center. It was opened to women, exclusively, earlier this month. The center offers vocational training in health services, business and clerical subjects, electronics and testing, drafting, culinary and food handling, as well as education courses, home and family living, physical education, health, music and art.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon

Trainees Arrive At Tongue Point

PORTLAND [illegible] first trainees for the Tongue Point [illegible] Center arrived [illegible] Monday [illegible] 17, Oakland, Calif., and Patti Johnson, 18, Redlands, Calif.

The first group of about 75 girls [illegible] next week [illegible] orientation at the Astoria center. Thursday [illegible] 650 girls will be trained there.

The center was recently converted from a young men's facility.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,982 - S 354,694)
MAR 24 1967

Astoria To Add Police Matrons

ASTORIA (Special) — The City Council has approved a police department request for addition of two matrons to the department staff.

Chief Paul Bertrol said the move is preparatory to the arrival of 650 young women at Tongue Point Job Corps Center. The department, he said, [illegible] as policematron.

[illegible] be necessary to have a matron on duty 24 hours of the day. He said he would like to recruit and train the new matrons [illegible] reach 650.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,500)
MAR 20 1967

Council May Get Proposal to Hire Policewomen

A proposal from the police department for addition of one to two policewomen may be considered by the city council at [illegible] in the council room of city hall.

The department is concerned that women may be needed as the population of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center grows to 650 women trainees during the next three months.

The council will also consider [illegible] for bids for a summer program of street patching and paving, totaling in excess of $40,000.

There will be other business [illegible]

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
MAR 23 1967

To Leave

Lionel Reason, recreation in[illegible] at Tongue Point Job Corps Center and well-known musician will leave in early April to become associate pastor of Greater Harvest Baptist church in Tacoma. The Rev. Mr. Reason obtained his ministerial license by [illegible] Morningstar Baptist church in Portland. He is well-known in this area as an entertainer and musician.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D [illegible])
MAR 10 1967

Youth Admits Job Corps Fire

Michael Patrick Sheehy, [illegible] pleaded guilty Wednesday in U. S. District Court to setting fire to the library building of the Tongue Point Job Corps near Astoria.

Sheehy [illegible] Solomon that he burned the walls of the library rest room last Nov. 29 with a butane cigaret lighter.

Solomon sentenced the defendant under the Federal Youth Corrections Act. Maximum sentence for Sheehy under the act is 4 years in [illegible]

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
MAR 21 196[illegible]

Treasurer of Society

John Wyckoff son of Lynn Wyckoff, community relations director at Tongue Point Job Corps center has been elected treasurer of the Oregon State society of Washington, D.C. Wyckoff, formerly of Portland, is a member of Rep. Edith Green's staff.

Morse Defends Women Training At Tongue Point

EDITOR'S NOTE: [illegible] reporter of the [illegible] Washington [illegible] reports.

By CHARLES E. BEGGS
Washington Bureau, Register-Guard

WASHINGTON — [illegible] Tongue Point Job Corps Center was the most suitable center in the nation for changing from a men's to a women's program, according to Senator Wayne Morse.

Morse was explaining also the OEO (Office of Economic Opportunity) could do," the Senator said in an interview. He said a new center couldn't be constructed because last year's Congress slashed $17 million from the poverty budget.

Representative Edith Green [illegible] last year's poverty bill that required [illegible] Job Corps trainees be women. Morse said [illegible] ratio of females to males at existing [illegible] women, and Tongue Point seemed the best possibility.

The senior Senator was instrumental in getting the country's first Job Corps center [illegible] Naval [illegible] Oregon and the Democratic-controlled Congress acted to provide the women's facility through the next fiscal year.

Morse said the entire Oregon congressional delegation was behind [illegible] Tongue Point change before it was announced here in early January. He said poverty officials demonstrated that the change would cost "only a fraction of building a new center."

The Senator had some sharp words for critics who say the poverty program is costing too much and isn't working fast enough.

"I wish people would stop being overnighters," he said. "This program is just starting and there will be problems and it will cost a lot of money. But I'm not a cost man. I'm a human values man."

Morse said it should come as no surprise that the Job Corps centers are high because the corps isn't dealing with "ordinary people."

[illegible] problems and it takes a lot of money [illegible] solve them. He said it takes [illegible] people to create [illegible] endeavor. He also said [illegible] engaging the Job Corps [illegible] high school or vocational school program.

The Senator said that the [illegible] society will be much [illegible] as the result of the Job Corps because of the savings in [illegible] costs.

Morse said [illegible] Congress is [illegible] the poverty program [illegible] year and more [illegible] on defense but [illegible] Vietnam [illegible] crept into the [illegible] session.

He said he can't see [illegible] poverty program [illegible] when people are [illegible] billions of dollars to kill American boys in Vietnam. "It is a question of priorities," he said. "It is the same problem [illegible] administration has."

Morse said the Johnson administration "talks a good game of guns and butter, but the butter is melting away."

Senator Morse said he is pleased with the [illegible] results of the poverty war. He said the chief problem was being administration at the local level, of deciding if the poor are to have a voice on local groups. He [illegible] ahead!

He said that if people are stupid to defend [illegible] we have built [illegible] on.

Morse praised the University of Oregon's educational contribution to the poverty program.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)
MAR 21 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Addition of Two Police Matrons Gets Council OK

The [illegible] approved with evident reluctance a police department request for permission to hire and train two more police matrons. The department now has one secretary who doubles as matron when needed.

Police Chief Paul Bettiol said he hopes to have a matron on duty around the clock when the Tongue Point Job Corps population reaches 650 next July 1.

State law requires presence of a matron when female prisoners are interviewed or kept in jail Bettiol said.

Bettiol asked immediate permission to hire the extra matrons so they can be recruited and trained.

Council members suggested that perhaps one of the two clerk-typist in the police department could be transferred to a night shift, to eliminate need for one of the new matrons, but both had been employed just for daytime work, and were reluctant to change.

Councilman Arnold Swanson asked what plans the sheriff's department has for possible use of matrons and wondered if some cooperative plan could not be developed.

Bettiol said he had not discussed the matter with the sheriff.

In approving the request for matrons the council directed Bettiol [illegible] the sheriff as to possible cooperation.

The Clatsop sheriff's department will not hire a matron at present but will consider an all-night matron at the jail if number of women held in the jail increases enough to warrant, Sheriff Carl Bondietti said.

At present, sheriff's department secretary Helen Pogue serves as matron when necessary.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 340,562 - S 354,094)
MAR 5 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Center Awaits Second Trainee Group

ASTORIA (Special)— The have not been notified how second group of women trainees will come, but previous news is due to arrive Tuesday, plans called for arrival of 100 March 29, at Tongue Point every two weeks until 650 are Job Corps Center. enrolled.

Officials there said they Only one of the newcomers who arrived last week has asked to go home, officials said Thursday. This was because the cosmetology training she wants is not offered here.

The center has cancelled plans for a formal opening April 12 of the new women's [illegible] Dr. Arthur [illegible] president of University of Oregon which operates the center.

Instead, tentative plans are being considered for an open house next August, when all the 650 enrollees are on hand. Dr. Bennett, Washington, [illegible] Tongue Point about that time.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)
MAR 21 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Power Outage

Two [illegible] broke [illegible] power [illegible] between the Tongue Bay power plant and Tongue Point at 1:50 a.m. Tuesday, blacking out Tongue Point Job Corps Center and the Coast Guard depot. PP&L company workmen located the break and restored service by 5:39 a.m. The broken cross arms dropped the conductor wire to the ground, causing the outage.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
Allen's P.C.B.

Facts Offered On Job Corps

[illegible]

[illegible] Equivalency Diploma.

Spokane Weekly Chro
Spokane, Washington
MAR 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

Women's Job Center Opens

ASTORIA (AP) — More than 50 young women are expected to arrive tonight at the Tongue Point Job Corps center for women.

Center officials said they will be the first of some 600 girls expected by the middle of April.

They said a staff of nearly 400 at what used to be a men's center has been reduced to 250.

Tongue Point is one of 16 women's Job Corps centers in the United States and the first in the Northwest.

Aberdeen, Wash.
World
(Cir. D. 17,037)
MAR 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women Arriving At Tongue Point

ASTORIA (AP) — More than 50 young women are expected to arrive tonight at the Tongue Point Job Corps center for women.

Center officials said they will be [illegible] expected by the middle of April.

They said a staff of nearly 400 at what used to be a men's center has been reduced to 250.

Tongue Point is one of 16 women's Job Corps centers in the United States and the first in the Northwest.

Hidden Benefit

We have commented before on the Job Corps, and how it is an investment in the future of young people who, otherwise, would be lucky to have any future other than welfare doles or jail and prison records.

But there is an added benefit, one which we had not really considered before we had a conversation with President Arthur Flemming of the University of Oregon the other day. (The U of O operates the Job Corps Center at Tongue Point for the Office of Economic Opportunity.)

This hidden benefit lies in the experience and training of those counselors and instructors and teachers who are assigned to work with the young men (now women) who are getting a taste of education and training—often for the first time—at Tongue Point.

IF THE "war on poverty" is to be a success, it will take money, an [illegible] estimate in public funds to [illegible] these young people so they will become independent, productive members of society, rather than drains on society, and the perennial wards of welfare, police, the courts, jails and prisons.

More than this, it will take an experienced and knowledgeable corps of men and women who have learned to deal with these young people, many of whom are almost completely alienated from today's society.

A few years ago, this type of individual was virtually non-existent. There were a few case-workers, a few teachers, who had dedicated themselves to trying to reach through the "invisible walls" which have surrounded the poor. But they were few, and their lonely task was almost impossible of accomplishment.

TODAY there are considerable numbers of those who have gone through the often-traumatic, early days of the Job Corps, of Project Headstart, and of the other anti-poverty programs, particularly those dealing with young people.

They have learned new values, and how, with proper attention, these can be transmuted into values held in regard by the rest of today's society. They have—no small accomplishment—learned how to communicate with young people who have had little or no experience in communication at any level. They have learned how to instruct, to teach and to inspire.

This corps of teachers and instructors, those who learned the hard way and those who are coming after, constitute a major asset in a society which is, for the first time in history, really trying to eliminate poverty as a way of life. —E.A.

New Recruits Being sworn in by Marion County Circuit Judge Joseph B. Felton are four of the first Salem area girls to be sent to the new Women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point. Taking the oath Wednesday are (left to right) Francisca Gonzalez, Woodburn, Mary Alice Mata, Salem, Angela Pena, Independence, and Sharon Brown, Eugene. Opening of the Astoria center has increase interest in the Women's Job Corps and provided unlimited quotas. (Statesman Photo)

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)
MAR 21 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

College Courses In Education, Recreation Set

Three college courses—two in education and one in recreation and park management—have been scheduled as evening classes in Astoria this spring by the division of Continuing Education.

Courses titles, night on which each class will meet, and beginning dates of classes are as follows:

"Public and Professional Relations," Fridays and Saturdays for five alternate weekends, beginning March 31 and April 1; "Psychology of Reading Instruction," Wednesdays, beginning March 29; and "Workshop, Recreation for the Handicapped," Fridays, beginning March 30.

The class in "Public and Professional Relations" will meet Fridays from 7 - 10 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m. - 12 noon; the reading instruction class has been scheduled from 7 - 10 p.m. Both classes will meet at Clatsop college.

The recreation workshop will be held from 7 - 10 p.m. Fridays at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The three courses each carry three hours of college credit. The two education courses are accredited by Oregon College of Education, the recreation workshop by the University of Oregon.

Registration materials will be available at the first class meeting.

Further information may be obtained from Allen C. Anderson, head of the evening class program at Clatsop college.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,312 - S 48,290)
MAR 25 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Friendly Voice

The Job Corps Center at Tongue Point has had few friends in the street and resembles the Ford [illegible] something goes wrong, and that's often, people who ought to be its friends jump on it. Those occasional jumps blended into an Apache tribal rain dance early this year when the boys were shipped out and the girls were shipped in.

Comes now a friendly voice from Oregon's Senator Wayne Morse. Noting the need to create a new center for girls because of congressional directive that more girls be enrolled, he pointed out that conversion of Tongue Point was much cheaper than building a new center.

And he was impatient with those who complain about the per-student cost at such places. The ogrillees, he pointed out are "not ordinary people," but boys and girls with years of backed-up problems. Also, the original high cost is coming down as mistakes are made and corrected.

The Senator was critical of what he called "the overnighters." Presumably he meant those who think a brand-new program, without parallel in the history of the world can do everything right the first time. Mistakes must happen. That's how people learn.

There is room for criticism of the "do it yesterday" approach of many War on Poverty programs. Perhaps some have been built before they were planned. But if that is so the fault lies with Congress, which set the policy, not with the administrators who must carry it out. They are sailing in uncharted waters.

Spokane, Wash.
Daily Chronicle
(Circ. D. 70,515)
MAR 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women's Job Center Opens

ASTORIA (AP) — More than 50 young women are expected to arrive tonight at the Tongue Point Job Corps center for women.

Center officials said they will be the first of some 600 girls expected by the middle of April.

They said a staff of nearly 400 at what used to be a men's center has been reduced to 250.

Tongue Point is one of 16 women's Job Corps centers in the United States and the first in the Northwest.

Women's Job Corps Sign Young Women

The opening of Tongue Point [illegible] sworn in by Marion County Circuit Judge Joseph B. Felton [illegible] Mary Alice Mata, 21 of Astoria gained four mid Willamette Valley recruits Wednesday.

[illegible] 20 of Woodburn Sharon Brown, [illegible] Eugene and [illegible] Salem and Angela Pena, Independence. Their appointment was made Tuesday.

[illegible] to swell the number of Salem area young women who have signed up and been accepted in last two weeks for the new Job Corps Center.

Short Wait

The opening of the center earlier this month [illegible] unlimited [illegible] young girls to train [illegible] Women's Job Corps and [illegible] with a waiting period [illegible] more than four weeks, according to Mrs. William Bennett, project director of Women [illegible] Community Service (WICS), which recruits for the Women's Job Corps.

Tongue Point, which until recently was a Men's Job Corps center, [illegible] vocational training [illegible] courses, [illegible] subject [illegible] reading, [illegible] courses [illegible] and [illegible] reading [illegible] education courses [illegible] personal [illegible] health, [illegible]

Referred by Counselors

Interviews for Women's Job Corps [illegible] conducted here under the [illegible] at the [illegible] center. Mrs. Bennett said. Many of the girls are referred by school counselors or other agencies that work with [illegible] problems. Those who [illegible] results were referred by the Valley Migrant League.

The [illegible] open to women [illegible] 16 to 21 from [illegible] families who need [illegible] education and vocational training.

The WICS [illegible] at 247 [illegible] Commercial St. NE, Salem, is open 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. each weekday. It is staffed by women volunteers.

The [illegible] Point Center opened March 15 and will have a [illegible] capacity. Until it [illegible] is [illegible] the end of [illegible]

Tongue Point—a Place to Learn Something

By SHEILAH TOOMEY
Associated Press Writer

[illegible] arrived at Tongue Point in mid-[illegible] were in Oregon's Navajo [illegible] Washington. The center was opened [illegible] Jan. 25 and [illegible] Her 2 February in 1966 for men [illegible] Point workers and mem- [illegible] bers of their families. [illegible] It's set Jan 25 when it was a [illegible] naval base. [illegible] Bakersfield, Calif. [illegible] director said it would be converted [illegible] to a training site for women [illegible] now with friends in Bakersfield. [illegible] 12 women had been assigned to [illegible] their [illegible] A number of corpswomen have children. Some have husbands, some don't.

Pearl talks of designing clothes, but she also speaks of [illegible] working in a clothes factory. To [illegible] her daughter she says: [illegible] "I just know you're not going to learn [illegible] and [illegible] from me. Some of my friends expect me to [illegible] my own [illegible] daughter to be the same [illegible] I'm not. [illegible] I'm going to [illegible] the next. That's me. [illegible] Pearl Somers, 36 recruit who [illegible] from Washington and [illegible] a hand in the air [illegible] at [illegible] home.

"Three bedrooms. The girls on one side, the boys on the other.

"My father — my stepfather — supports the whole family. He loves about a block away. The kids — they drive him crazy." She doesn't want a large family like her mother, but on the other hand, Pearl is pleasantly [illegible].

During orientation, Pearl will get a corpswomen's handbook. It says:

"These pages contain suggestions, information, and guidelines for group living."

There is little doubt Pearl already has experienced group living.

Did she graduate from high school? "Three months before graduation, they let me go," Pearl says pointing to herself. "Straight As in sewing and PE I got too."

Should Pearl change her mind about dressmaking, she can choose from classes in nursing, electronics assembly, printing, food service, child care, teacher-librarian assistance and business machines.

How will she raise her daughter?

"Hard," she said. "I mean I'm going to keep her in church, none of that playing sick and ditching school. I'm going to keep her in clothes so she can't quit school, and I'm going to keep her bank account up."

The dormitory at Tongue Point echos with excited voices and blaring music. The bedrooms are immaculate.

Curtains and bedspreads match in yellow, blue, green or pink. Fresh bouquets of daffodils stand on each dressing table — gifts from the staff.

"You want to see what they gave us to wear?" Pearl says with glee as she hold up a faded denim skirt, grey sweatshirt and navy cotton slacks. "You like it? You can have it!" she laughs.

Within the first month, each corpswoman gets $35 to spend on clothes in Astoria. Most will buy date and church clothes.

"No miniskirts," Pearl says a "They show too much."

The Job Corps knows a new outfit can build a girl's confidence. They will get instruction in color, style, fit, makeup and posture. They will even learn how to make those denim skirts fashionable.

During orientation, a hairdo contest will be held. Advisers will discuss why the prettiest hairdo is not always the best.

Pearl likes the food. "[illegible] like at home."

The large [illegible] Tongue Point was a naval base, is decidedly feminine now. Blue, green, pink and yellow tablecloths and bouquets of artificial flowers decorate each long table. Flowered curtains line each window.

Pearl says she loves the Job Corps, and would like to stay at Tongue Point forever, but adds, "One year is enough. My baby needs me."

AMONG FIRST WOMEN RECRUITS — Pearl Haygood, left, and Hortensia Navar were in the first group of 56 who arrived this month at the new Job Corps center for women near Astoria. Both 19 and from California, they hope for careers in clothesmaking. Hortensia is one of a number of Mexican-Americans recruited from the Southwest. Pearl is the subject of the background interview appearing above. (AP)

Alternative To Corps

The Personalized Education Plan (PEP) the Portland School District is planning to pilot as an alternative to the Job Corps appears to have high promise.

Purely as a matter of economy, it should point the way to an improvement over Job Corps as a whole. The Tongue Point Job Corps was typical of its per capita cost in 1966 of $7,400-$2,000 a man-year, which was to be the level set by Congress. The Portland (PEP) program for 200 can close at $1 million a year and takes out as well below half the 1966 cost at Tongue Point. One reason is that only half the 200 will be housed.

But there are more important considerations. The Job Corps operates through institutional units, as at Tongue Point. It thus has all the deficiencies of institutional life, including isolation and dehumanization as something less than citizens. Youngsters in PEP will have more contact with the community as a whole.

The PEP program was worked out in Oregon beginning two years ago, through cooperative efforts of the Portland public schools, the University of Oregon and Dr. Edith Green. The federal government is willing to invest $3 million over the years in the [illegible] that [illegible] school system is a [illegible] to substitute to salvage [illegible] academic and work [illegible] But the Portland program, the first of four now planned by the Office of Economic Opportunity, could evolve into a demonstration project as an example for the Northwest school districts. Some [illegible] of the Y will add and can [illegible] from the [illegible] planning. There is good [illegible] that many [illegible] and what to [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] adopted by the [illegible] some of the [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

SECTION TWO PAGES 1-4

The Oregonian

HOSTESS HOUSE

PORTLAND, OREGON, SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1967

(Staff Photos by Leonard Bacon)

THE RED, white and blue Job Corps emblem will provide a gay touch to Hortensia Navar's navy blue sweater. California girl found raincoat issued "way too long."

FRANCES SHEELEY checks through the stack of navy and denim blue garments issued each corpswoman. Sizes stocked range from 8 to 20.

LANGUAGE master "self teacher" is operated by (from left) Pearl Haygood, Celia Jaquez and Mary Helen Gonzales. Pearl's story is told in detail on page 2 today by Sheilah Toomey, Associated Press women's feature service writer at Tongue Point Center.

WITH THE administration building and dormitories of Tongue Point as background Donna Charles (left) checks coiffure in compact held by her sister, Patricia. There are five other sister sets among first 59 recruits.

Tongue Point Gains Feminine Look

By MILLY WOHLER

Orientation started, the first [illegible] Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women settled Monday for [illegible] study which will lead them to 59 separate destinations.

Seemingly the only universal complaint was—"This weather."

Virgil Savage, religious coordinator, eating lunch [illegible] the girls at the [illegible] this rain.

Like most of the staff who [illegible] when it was an urban center for men, Savage was still adjusting to the contrast in altitude of the corpswomen.

"Principally I notice the lack of hostility. From the very first the girls speak when they see you. There's a responsiveness and desire to be friendly.

Most of the girls confessed homesickness.

Carol Weaver, 19, San Bernardino, Calif., admitted, "I was homesick for the first week. Now I'm not. I've had a cold ever since I've been here but I've gained seven pounds in two weeks."

Savage commented, "The boys wouldn't say they were homesick. But then they'd lock themselves in their rooms and you'd hear them sobbing as you walked down the hall."

Diet Plates Faced

Although rail-thin Carol was pleased about her [illegible] the girls were facing diet plates for luncheon. A large number of recruits are obese.

[illegible] Mrs. Doris Alexander, Portland charm consultant, who is at the Center two nights each week.

"She's teaching us the perfect way to walk and how to hold your head up," Carol explained. "And a lot of them she put on diets."

Bouncy Sonja Carlstrom, 19, Tacoma, Wash., decided she'd have to work gradually into the diet bit.

"She told me I'd have to [illegible] wouldn't be a thing left of me," Sonja worried.

Sonja's ebullient attitude didn't quite hide a certain steely determination.

"I graduated from high school. I've been out two years on my own and it's [illegible] ing fenced in again. But I've never stuck to anything. Now I'm going to. I'll have something when I get out of here."

Sonja's goal is in the drafting field, specifically aerospace drafting.

Drafting [illegible] five main vocational areas in which girls will be trained at Tongue Point.

Others are health and social service programs, with specialties in nurses aide, child day care and teacher-librarian aide areas; business and clerical, from clerk through secretary according to ability; food services, with a range of commercial and institutional applications; and electronics assembly and testing courses.

"There's only two in our drafting class now. We'd better get some more or we're going to drive that poor teacher crazy," Sonja commented.

More recruits arrived Tuesday and Wednesday—bringing the corpswomen population up to almost [illegible]

Meanwhile the painting and repairing continued.

"It's really no more than what a landlord does when one tenant moves out and other moves in," explained Dr. W. L. Van Loan, center director.

Another staff member added, "We're just putting doors in the bathrooms and painting."

Blue Tablecloths

[illegible] pointed out authoritatively by the religious coordinator, Savage. Blue mayonnaise and rose tablecloths in the dining room, with centerpieces of gay artificial flowers.

"They also painted the pillars in pastel colors. Before [illegible] and people kept crashing into them."

Most of the drafting and electronic equipment was retained from the men's program and training tools for the other three vocational [illegible]

The first 59 girls came from [illegible] Arizona, Washington, Hawaii, Alaska, Nevada and Oregon. Of [illegible] nine Negro and 11 Oriental, Indian or other.

A small part of the more than $5.7 million rehabilita-

Continued Page 2, Col. 2

MAR 31 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Center Opens For Women

The Women's Job Corps has taken over the Tongue Point Center, which was formerly operated for men. This is very much an Oregon product. Senator Wayne Morse was strongly involved in having Tongue Point used by the Job Corps and Rep. Edith Green was equally insistent that women must be given opportunity. The facility will care for the educational needs of 530 young women. It opened in March with 50 corpswomen, but it hoped [illegible] will be [illegible]

The Tongue Point Center will offer the usual classes which prepare those who have not graduated from high school to take the G.E.D. equivalency tests. Everyone has [illegible] and family living, physical education and health, and optional courses in music and art.

An interesting new vocational course is offered—electronics for women—involving the skills needed for work on an assembly line operation. A second vocational course covers health services—training in child care, and licensed practical nursing. There are courses in drafting, and a complete business and clerical curriculum, including typing, filing, and stenography. To be added within two months is the culinary and food service department. This will prepare enrollees for better restaurant work.

The Job Corps is open to young women from 16 to 21 years of age, from low income families who need additional education, vocational training and a new start in the business of living. Some girls [illegible]

[illegible] the young woman could be referred. A girl who cannot get into Salem easily, may phone the WICS office at 581-4012 and arrangements will be made for transportation.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
MAR 31 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

65 More Arrive At Job Center

ASTORIA — Tongue Point [illegible] with arrival of 65 trainees from San Francisco.

[illegible] two-week orientation program Thursday.

[illegible] the first 59 women at the center who are taking basic vocational [illegible] vices, health service and office work, with one specializing in drafting.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
APR 4 - 1966
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

$1 Million Slated For Dropouts Here

By MILES GREEN
Journal Education Writer

A $1 million-per-year Job Corps type program to be operated by the Portland School District for 1967-68 seems assured, it was reported Tuesday.

Norman Hamilton, assistant superintendent for curriculum for the Portland district, said only final contract negotiations with the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity remains in the effort to get started this fall with the program, called the Personalized Education Program.

"Also needed, he added, is permissive legislation, which has been passed by the Senate and is before the House.

Final approval of the program will make Portland the first of four demonstration centers in the nation in which school districts will attempt to provide education and training for high school dropouts and potential dropouts who have [illegible] been sent to Job Corps centers, such as Tongue Point.

Hamilton said the initial Portland program will provide [illegible] for 150 students who will live at home but be at the center from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
MAR 29 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

[illegible] departure to [illegible] at Tongue Point [illegible] their new [illegible] Sharon Brown, 18, Salem, Mary Alice Mata, 21, Salem and Francisca Gonzalez, 20, Woodburn, gathered in Portland YMCA prior to bus trip to center near Astoria. Two were part of second contingent of girls heading for Job Corps center since its change from men's to women's training site this month. Two weeks ago 52 girls entered school. Tuesday 59 girls left for Portland to center Wednesday. 60 girls were expected to gather in Portland before going to center. Center has capacity for 530 girls.

OREGON
Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Mill City, Oregon
Enterprise
(Cir. 795)

42 Job Corps Recruits Arrive

[illegible] recruits [illegible] Louisiana and Texas arrived Wednesday night at [illegible] Point [illegible] This is in addition to 65 arrivals from San Francisco Bay area [illegible] last week and to 166 the total enrollment at [illegible] women [illegible]

[illegible] Wednesday night were the first group recruited [illegible] Hawaii and Alaska.

Women's Job Corps Needs Recruits

Women's Job Corps has taken over the Tongue Point Center (near Astoria) which was formerly used for men. The facility will care for the educational needs of 530 young women. It opened in March with a full staff of teachers and only 50 Corps women.

The Tongue Point Center will offer the usual classes which prepare those who have not graduated from high school to take the G.E.D. equivalency tests. Everyone has classes in home and family living, physical education and health, and optional courses in music and art.

Electronics is offered, involving skills needed for work on assembly line operation. Applications are accepted and processed by the Women in Community Service at 247 Commercial St. N. E., Salem between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. If any girl cannot get to Salem phone 581-4012 and arrangements will be made for transportation.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir.
Allen's P.C.B.

[illegible] Corps Driver [illegible] Tongue Point [illegible] [illegible] way out of driving [illegible] [illegible] up county to a [illegible] education class [illegible] where numerous accidents occur are being noted as [illegible] particularly poor road conditions in view [illegible] trainee driver [illegible] adapt to area conditions, a spokesman Wednesday.

SISTERS OF FIRST JOB CORPSMAN

Donna Charles (left) and Patricia Charles (middle), two of the first girl enrollees at Tongue Point, are sisters of the first U.S. Job Corp enrollee Ken Charles, now a Private in the Army stationed at Fort Stevens.

Girl Job Corps Makes Good Impression

The Tongue Point Job Corps Center was prepared to handle a difficult problem in public relations to win local enthusiasm for the young women coming to replace the young men in that curious change that was ordered by Washington, D.C. headquarters.

Local people were determined to do their best in welcoming the Job Corps girls.

This hospitality problem of the Job Corps staff and the local public has ended in appreciation for the young women who have arrived early for Job Corps training.

Anyone visiting the local Job Corps Center is taken by the sudden change in what can be called social refinement in the place after the young women arrived. The mess hall has table cloths, place mats and synthetic flowers on the tables.

But far more significant is the polite air of dining that has replaced the healthy male lust to satisfy hunger in the hurry that prevailed in the male job corps days as in our logging camp messhalls.

The messhall has the same correct appearance that pervades over the whole establishment. What strikes visitors is that many of the young women seem to lack nothing but an opportunity to succeed. They are not young people hopelessly handicapped and defeated in the struggle to get on in the world. The faculty at Tongue Point appears to be impressed that it has material it can work with.

The growing number of early arrivals seem to be agreeable and serious-minded individuals who are resolved to take advantage of their opportunity.

No one at the center is more conscious of the change for more style at Tongue Point than Chester Lipscomb who is in charge of the mess hall. A change in the fare has been prescribed with a cut in daily calories for each enrollee from 3,000 to 2,400. This has been done by less starches and more salads.

Lipscomb is a retired army food expert who was senior instructor as a master sergeant in the quartermaster department's food science school at Fort Lee, Va. He is fully dedicated to having the messhall force contribute substantially to morale and even discipline.

When he first arrived at Tongue Point, some enrolees didn't show up for breakfast on time because they didn't get up on time. By removing food from serving areas at precisely the closing time, he corrected one of the serious discipline problems at Tongue Point--that of getting the enrolees out of bed. The instruction was exclusively designed for absorption for those out of bed.

It was recalled by two enrolees from Port Angeles, Wash., Donna M. Charles, 19, and her sister, Patricia, 17, that their brother, now Private Ken Charles at Fort Lewis, was No. 1 enrolee when the center was opened. He was the only enrolee on hand when a big shot from Washington, D.C. and other dignitaries were present for seeing the center get started. Eighteen months later, Ken left the center for military service, one of the many who were better prepared for the Army by training at the center.

Among the new enrolees are those who love rain. These include a number from Arizona, Nevada, Colorado and Calif. Thus far Astoria has appealed very much to them. In compliance with Job Corps instruction they brought cold weather dress, but raincoats are few. Somebody has already poisoned their minds that this community has more rain than is absolutely necessary.

A menu that is lighter in calories than the menus of the boys' meals, but just as well balanced, greeted the girls.

FIRST JOB CORPSMAN

KEN CHARLES

Tongue Point Conversion

Young Mother Says She Needs Goal in Life

By SHEILAH TOOMEY

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — Her 3½-year-old daughter in Bakersfield, Calif., is a good reason why the Job Corps may work for a 19-year-old mother.

Pearl Haygood is at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria because, "I just knew I had to go someplace to learn something."

"In my family they go from one job to the next. That's not good," Pearl said.

Pearl is one of 56 recruits who arrived at Tongue Point in mid-March. The center was opened in February of 1965 for men. By last Jan. 20, when it was announced it would be converted to a training site for women, 2,300 men had been assigned to the center.

About 100 more women will arrive next week from the San Francisco and Austin, Texas, areas. Officials expect 650 women by June.

Of the first group, 24 were from California, 16 from Arizona, 8 from Washington and the rest were from Oregon, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii.

Pearl is lively and pretty. She is direct, confident, and expressive. Her daughter Stephanie is now with friends in Bakersfield.

A number of corpswomen have children. Some have husbands, some don't.

Pearl talks of designing clothes, but she also speaks of working in a clothes factory. To her, they're the same thing.

Does she have brothers and sisters. "Whew!" she says, waving a hand in the air. "Ten — all at home."

"Three bedrooms. The girls on one side, the boys on the other."

"My father — my stepfather — supports the whole family. He lives about a block away. The kids — they drive him crazy."

She doesn't want a large family like her mother, but on the other hand, Pearl is pleasantly pessimistic.

"Big families run in my family. My sister has five, she was married when she was 13. My brother had two and another sister has three. They all live at home."

During orientation, Pearl will get a corpswomen's handbook. It says:

"These pages contain suggestions, information, and guidelines for group living."

There is little doubt Pearl already has experienced group living.

Did she graduate from high school? "Three months before graduation, they let me go," Pearl says pointing to herself. "Straight As in sewing and PE. I got too."

Should Pearl change her mind about dressmaking, she can choose from classes in nursing, electronics assembly, printing, food service, child care, teacher-librarian assistance and business machines.

How will she raise her daughter?

"Hard," she said. "I mean I'm going to keep her in church, none of that playing sick and ditching school. I'm going to keep her in clothes so she can't quit school, and I'm going to keep her bank account up."

The dormitory at Tongue Point echoes with excited voices and blaring music. The bedrooms are immaculate.

Curtains and bedspreads match in yellow, blue, green or pink. Fresh bouquets of daffodils stand on each dressing table — gifts from the staff.

"You want to see what they gave us to wear?" Pearl says with glee as she hold up a faded denim skirt, grey sweatshirt and navy cotton slacks. "You like it? You can have it!" she laughs.

Within the first month, each corpswoman gets $35 to spend on clothes in Astoria. Most will buy date and church clothes.

"No miniskirts," Pearl says. "They show too much."

The Job Corps knows a new outfit can build a girl's confidence. They will get instruction in color, style, fit, makup and posture. They will even learn how to make those denim skirts fashionable.

During orientation, a hairdo contest will de held. Advisers will discuss why the prettiest hairdo is not always the best.

Pearl likes the food. "Just like at home."

The large dining room, once a wartime mess hall when Tongue Point was a naval base, is decidedly femminne now. Blue, green, pink and yellow tablecloths and bouquets of artificial flowers decorate each long table. Flowered curtains line each window.

Pearl says she loves the Job Corps, and would like to stay at Tongue Point forever, but adds, "One year is enough. My baby needs me."

MAR 30 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Women's Job Corps At Tongue Point

Women's Job Corps has taken over the Tongue Point Center (near Astoria) which was formerly operated for men.

Senator Wayne Morse was strongly involved in having Tongue Point used by the Job Corps and Rep. Edith Green was equally insistent that women must be given opportunity - not equal, but 23%. The facility will care for the educational needs of 650 young women; it opened in March with 50 Corpswomen, but wants to fill the program by the end of June.

The Tongue Point Center will offer the usual classes which prepare those who have not graduated from high school to take the GED - equivalency tests. Everyone has classes in home and family living, in physical education and health, and optional courses in music and art.

A vocational course offered - electronics for women - involves the skills needed for work on an assembly line operation. A second vocational course covers health services - training in child care and licensed practical nursing. There are courses in drafting, and a complete business and clerical coverage including typing, filing and stenography. To be added within two months is the culinary and food service department. This will prepare enrollees for restaurant work.

Job Corps is open to women from 16 to 21 from low income families, who need additional education, vocational training and a new start on the business of living. Some girls have been attracted but were reluctant to go as far from home as has been necessary in the past. The waiting period for assignment will be decreased.

Applications are accepted and processed by the Women in Community Service (WICS). Their office is in Salem at 247 Commercial St. N. E. and office hours are from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Mrs. William Bernert, project director, says that the office has no backlog of applications and is ready to help girls, either toward Job Corps training or training in some other agency to which the young women could be referred. A girl who cannot get into Salem easily, may phone the WICS office at 581-4912 and arrangements will be made for transportation.

Women of Marion and Polk counties have donated more than 8,000 hours of their time since the organization was formed in May, 1965.

PEARL MAY HAYGOOD, left, ... were among the first group of 56 ... arriving at the Tongue Point women's job corps center at Astoria. Mrs. Haygood hopes to learn a trade ... she can support her three and a half year old daughter. About 160 more corpswomen are due to arrive next week. AP

Young Mother Hopes To Learn Something In Job Corps

By SHEILAH TOOMEY
Associated Press Writer

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — Her 3½-year-old daughter in Bakersfield, Calif., is a good reason why the Job Corps may work for a 19-year-old mother.

Pearl Haygood is at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria because, "I just knew I had to go someplace to learn something."

"In my family they go from one job to the next. That's not good," Pearl said.

Pearl is one of 56 recruits who arrived at Tongue Point in mid-March. The center was opened in February of 1965 for men. By last Jan. 20, when it was announced it would be converted to a training site for women, 2,300 men had been assigned to the center.

About 100 more women will arrive next week from the San Francisco and Austin, Texas, areas. Officials expect 650 women by June.

Of the first group, 24 were from California, 16 from Arizona, 8 from Washington and the rest were from Oregon, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii.

Pearl is lively and pretty. She is direct, confident, and expressive. Her daughter Stephanie is now with friends in Bakersfield.

A number of corpswomen have children. Some have husbands, some don't.

Pearl talks of designing clothes, but she also speaks of working in a clothes factory. To her, they're the same thing.

Does she have brothers and sisters? "Whew!" she says, waving a hand in the air. "Ten — all at home."

"Three bedrooms. The girls on one side, the boys on the other."

"My father — my stepfather — supports the whole family. He lives about a block away. The kids — they drive him crazy."

She doesn't want a large family like her mother, but on the other hand, Pearl is pleasantly pessimistic.

"Big families run in my family. My sister has five, she was married when she was 13. My brother had two and another sister has three. They all live at home."

During orientation, Pearl will get a corpswomen's handbook. It says:

"These pages contain suggestions, information, and guidelines for group living."

There is little doubt Pearl already has experienced group living.

Did she graduate from high school? "Three months before graduation, they let me go," Pearl says pointing to herself. "Straight As in sewing and PE. I got too."

Should Pearl change her mind about dressmaking, she can choose from classes in nursing, electronics assembly, printing, food service, child care, teacher-librarian assistance and business machines.

How will she raise her daughter?

"Hard," she said. "I mean I'm going to keep her in church, none of that playing sick and ditching school. I'm going to keep her in clothes so she can't quit school, and I'm going to keep her bank account up."

The dormitory at Tongue Point echoes with excited voices and blaring music. The bedrooms are immaculate.

Curtains and bedspreads match in yellow, blue, green or pink. Fresh bouquets of daffodils stand on each dressing table — gifts from the staff.

"You want to see what they gave us to wear?" Pearl says with glee as she hold up a faded denim skirt, grey sweatshirt and navy cotton slacks. "You like it? You can have it!" she laughs.

Within the first month, each corpswoman gets $35 to spend on clothes in Astoria. Most will buy date and church clothes.

"No miniskirts," Pearl says. "They show too much."

The Job Corps knows a new outfit can build a girl's confidence. They will get instruction in color, style, fit, makup and posture. They will even learn how to make those denim skirts fashionable.

During orientation, a hairdo contest will be held. Advisers will discuss why the prettiest hairdo is not always the best.

Pearl likes the food. "Just like at home."

The large dining room, once a wartime mess hall when Tongue Point was a naval base, is decidedly femminne now. Blue, green, pink and yellow tablecloths and bouquets of artificial flowers decorate each long table. Flowered curtains line each window.

Pearl says she loves the Job Corps, and would like to stay at Tongue Point forever, but adds, "One year is enough. My baby needs me."

Job Corps Information is available

Teenage girls from low income families who are interested in learning more about the Job Corps women's training program at Tongue Point center near Astoria may obtain information in Salem.

The "women in community service" agency maintains an office at 247 Commercial N.E. in Salem, open from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. weekdays, to interview girls.

Girls who apply may be directed to Job Corps training or training in some other agency to which young women may be referred. If transportation to the Salem office is a problem, information may be obtained by phoning 581-4912.

Now that Tongue Point has been converted to a women's training center, girls can be placed there without delay or the necessity of being a long way from home. The center will offer education classes leading to a high school diploma equivalency and vocational courses ranging from restaurant work to assembly line electronics work. Also included will be child care, business and clerical, home and family living and physical education and health courses.

Women s Job Corps To Take Charge Of Tongue Point Center

Women's Job Corps has taken over the Tongue Point Center (near Astoria) which was formerly operated for men. This is very much an Oregon product. Senator Wayne Morse was strongly involved in having Tongue Point used by the Job Corps and Rep. Edith Green was equally insistent that women must be given opportunity --not equal but 23%. The facility will care for the educational needs of 650 young women. It opened in March with 50 Corpswomen, but wants to fill the program by the end of June.

The Tongue Point Center will offer the usual classes which prepare those who have not graduated from high school to take the G.E.D. equivalency tests. Everyone has classes in Home and Family Living, in Physical Education and Health, and optional courses in Music and Art.

An interesting new vocational course is offered - Electronics for Women - involving the skills needed for work on an assembly line operation. A second vocational course covers health services - training in Child Care and Licensed Practical Nursing. There are courses in Drafting and a complete Business and Clerical coverage including Typing, Filing and Stenography. To be added within two months is the Culinary and Food Service Department. This will prepare enrollees for better restaurant work.

Job Corps is open to women from 16 to 21 and from low income families, who need additional education, vocational training and a new start on the business of living. Some girls have been attracted but were reluctant to go as far from home as has been necessary in the past. The opening of Tongue Point brings this opportunity to our door step. The waiting period for assignment will be decreased.

Applications are accepted and processed by the Women in Community Service (WICS). Their office is in Salem at 247 Commercial St. N. E. and the office hours are from 10:00 a.m. until 2 p.m. Mrs. William Bernert, Project Director, says that the office has no backlog of applications and is ready to help girls, either toward Job Corps training or training in some other agency to which the young women could be referred. A girl who cannot get into Salem easily, may phone the WICS office at 581-4912 and arrangements will be made for transportation.

Senator Morse says the program is expensive because we are dealing with special cases in special ways, but the processing cost the government nothing because of the concern of women who are united in Women In Community Service. Women of Marion and Polk Counties have donated more than 8,000 hours of their time since the organization was formed in May, 1965.

JC Recruits Arrive

Wednesday night, March 29 the first Job Corps recruits arrived at Tongue Point Center, Astoria and most of them were from Louisiana and Texas. Sixty-five arrivals from the Bay area in California had been signed in on Thur-day night. The total number enrolled at the new women's center at the end of the week totaled 166. Some of the girls are from Hawaii and Alaska, as well as other western states

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Dayton Tribune
Dayton, Oregon
(Cir. 750)
APR 6 - 1967

Spokane, Wash
Chronicle
APR 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Training Costly

PORTLAND (AP)—Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) says a General Accounting Office audit shows that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green, in a telephone interview from her Washington home yesterday, said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee at nearly $15,000 in 1966, compared with $13,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $7,500 per trainee.

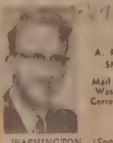
Mrs. Green said the figures included $920,000 paid for the former Navy base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were "outrageous in terms of money spent for value received."

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO reported noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

Mrs. Green Says Cost Of Job Corps In Oregon Is Too High



By A. ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (Special) — The total cost to the federal government of the Tongue Point Job Corps training center during its first two years of operation averaged nearly $15,000 per enrollee per year — a figure Rep. Edith Green computed and criticized as "outrageous."

The basis for this computation by the Portland congresswoman is an audit report made at her request by the U.S. General Accounting Office, which said the grand total of costs from Dec. 15, 1964 through Dec. 31, 1966 came to $14,706,000.

This total included an item of $920,000 fixed by GAO as the value of the old Tongue Point navy base, although this figure was for an actual expenditure GAO said it included this figure because the city of Astoria has offered to buy the base for that amount but was turned down by the Kennedy Administration due to protests from Sen. Wayne Morse, who argued that it would be better used by some federal agency.

Grand Total Noted

GAO reported that the grand total included $11,484,000 in operating costs, $1,867,000 in costs of converting and equipping the base for its new purpose, and $525,000 for supplies.

"The audit confirms my view that this is an outrageous cost in terms of each enrollee," declared Rep. Green.

Mrs Green recalled that government officials had previously estimated that the cost per enrollee at Tongue Point was $13,000 in 1965, whereas the national average for all Job Corps centers for boys was $9,100, and for girls $8,400.

The problem with computing the average cost per enrollee is that the number of young men at Tongue Point during the two-year period varied. GAO noted that there were 480 trainees on board at the end of this period. Originally planned to accommodate 1,200, the center's enrollment leveled off at something less than half this goal.

Staff Too Large

Asked how she thought the costs at Tongue Point could be [illegible] Mr. Green said the center was never used to its full capacity and the staff was too large for the number of trainees. The GAO report noted that the center had 395 employes to serve 480 trainees at the end of the two-year period.

Mrs Green said Philco-Ford, the subcontractor who handled vocational training under University of Oregon management of the center, was paid a fixed fee of $120,000 during the first 18-month period for providing training for less than half the number of trainees it had contracted to train. She said this was not Philco-Ford's fault, but that the contract should have been renegotiated when it was apparent the enrollment would not meet initial expectations.

Noting that Sen. Morse has recently been defending the costs at Tongue Point, Mrs. Green said: "I have no sympathy for those who rationalize or justify loose management of funds or extremely high costs simply because you are engaged in the noble effort to fight poverty. The money ought not to go to the middleman but to the people for whom the program was intended."

She reiterated her objection to the Job Corps' failure to evaluate its training in terms of results to "find out how well these youngsters are prepared to hold down a job."

She said the program is "too much based on the opportunity theory," is too permissive and fails to impart self-discipline and motivation "which are woefully lacking in an awful lot of Job Corps trainees."

Green Attacks 'Double Cost' At Job Center

PORTLAND (AP) — Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) says a General Accounting Office audit shows that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green, in a telephone interview from her Washington home yesterday, said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee at nearly $15,000 in 1966, compared with $13,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $7,500 per trainee.

Mrs. Green said the figures included $920,000 paid for the former Navy base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were outrageous in terms of money spent for value received.

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO reported noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

Tongue Point was converted in December from a center for men to one that eventually will accommodate about 600 women.

Arthur Fleming, president of the University of Oregon which is in charge of operating the center, described to committee Mr. Green's criticism of costs.

"I have no comment on that," he said, but the conversion of the center from a boys' Job Corps to a girls' Job Corps is progressing very satisfactorily."

95 Trainees Due Here Tuesday

Navy Transport ships [illegible] coast ships [illegible] Tuesday at Tongue Point Center officials were reported Monday.

A [illegible] trainees will be from the Texas-Louisiana area.

A [illegible] weekly [illegible] Tongue Point took place [illegible] brought in [illegible] Washington Job Corps Center [illegible] partners for the [illegible] girls said it was successful.

Vanguard
Portland, Ore.
APR 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps A-Go-Go...

Coordinator Provides Adventure

By JEPI HUNT
Staff Writer

Last October, the Portland State drama department invited 100 Tongue Point Job Corpsmen to a special performance of "The Knack." It was the first time many of the boys had ever seen a play.

Many other such first experiences are arranged for corpsmen by energetic Helene Kennedy, Oregon Job Corps coordinator, the only such job in the U. S.

It is typical to find Mrs. Kennedy chatting in her Portland YMCA office with a former trainee who "just stopped in to say thanks and good bye" before leaving for his first job after Job Corps training.

The Job Corps is a national program offering academic and vocational training to young people of poverty backgrounds who have dropped out of school and are unequipped for adequate employment.

Mrs. Kennedy provides an essential communications link between scattered Job Corps centers, and provides outside experiences for the boys, most of whom have never participated in normal, American society action. Until Explorer Scout programs were initiated in various centers, some trainees had never heard of the Boy Scouts, said Mrs. Kennedy.

"Each center provides its members with athletic and recreational opportunities," she said. "But my main concern has been to supplement them with a program in Portland."

"My biggest problem is what to do with 50 or 100 Job Corps boys on a Saturday afternoon in an unfamiliar city."

Mrs. Kennedy, who is well acquainted with Portland citizens and organizations, has worked closely with PSC, and any groups who will help her organize interesting and diverse activities, from the Golden Gloves boxing exhibition to the Portland Symphony Orchestra.

"The boys like to come to Portland State because here they come in contact with other young people," she said.

PSC facilities are used by visiting Job Corps trainees for classroom and vocational observation, parties, and student exchange between PSCers and Corpsmen. Last spring a Job Corps swing choir exchanged notes, then sang together in class.

People have been very generous, said Mrs. Kennedy. "Besides cooperation from the college, the Junior Symphony donated some season tickets to the Job Corps, and the Portland Symphony also gave us some seats."

Mrs Kennedy is now working with other Job Corps leaders to reorient the Tongue Point program as a women's urban center. Women trainees have been at Tongue Point since March.

"Although the Astorians didn't accept the Job Corps at first," she said, "they seemed really put out when Tongue Point closed down in January."

One of the last boys to leave Tongue Point was a Mexican trainee. On the day he "graduated" from the Job Corps, he became a U. S. citizen at a ceremony attended by Mrs. Kennedy.

On The Job Training Funds Available To Employers In Area

A program which can help an employer offset the cost of hiring a new employe is now available in this area. The program, called "On the-Job Training," is funded by the Department of Labor and administered by the Valley Migrant League with headquarters in Woodburn.

Under an O.J.T. Program, an employer can be reimbursed for the training he provides new employees in his establishment. Although the trainee's entire salary cannot be offset, a certain portion can be reimbursed while a trainee learns to perform his duties with the organization.

There are no restrictions on the people selected for the new positions. An employer may choose people that have received educational or vocational training with the Valley Migrant League. If he wishes, however, he may select from people referred by the Oregon State Employment Service or use his own recruiting methods. The only qualification is that people must come from the ranks of the unemployed or disadvantaged.

A few examples of training programs now in progress are as follows

A door manufacturing company is training a man to be a Painter's Helper He is learning to operate a spray gun, wood sander, wood grainer, and buffer over an 18 week period. The employer will receive a total payment of $450 for providing this training to a new employee

An automobile dealer is training a young man in his parts department. The youth is a Tongue Point Job Corps Center graduate. He will learn to read parts catalogues, shelve stock and receive and ship parts over a 16 week period with a payment to the employer by On-the-Job Training of $370.

A service station took an unskilled employee doing general clean up and pumping gas and is upgrading him to Automobile Service Mechanic. The trainee is learning lubrication, electrical and carburetor repair and tune up. This is a 14 week program with a total payment by On-the-Job Training of $340.

Albert Klinge, Coordinator of the program, says that there are still funds available for more training programs. Employers who will need more help in the future and feel they can benefit from the program should contact Mr. Klinge at the Valley Migrant League, P. O. Box 297, Woodburn, Ore. or phone 981-1637

Allen's P.C.B.

Recreation Class At Tongue Point Set on Mondays

Class in Recreation for the Handicapped University of Oregon spring term offering, will be held Monday, starting April 10, from 7 to 10 p.m. at Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Hangar 1. The three-hour credit course is open to all interested adults and may be applied to the physical education certification or as part of the regular program and park management curriculum.

Instructor is Don Lindley, who has worked in a variety of institutional and community settings.

Further information may be obtained from Allan Anderson at Clatsop Community college or from the instructor.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,500)
APR 7 - 1967

Job Corps Resident Supervisor Talks to Trinity Lutheran Women

[illegible] residents A and B of the Tongue Point Job Corps center for women, was the principal speaker of the recent meeting of Trinity Lutheran Church Women in the church parish house.

[illegible] who has been associated with the Job Corps for many [illegible] and the [illegible] Tongue Point in some [illegible] said among other things, [illegible] women are more interesting to work with because of their wider interests and greater motivation than the men trainees." He indicated that, although the complete training program has not yet been set up, the women keep [illegible] a project day [illegible] April 13 from 10 a.m. [illegible] at the parish house.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,500)
APR 7 - 1967

Joings TP Staff

Dr. Robert Struthers has joined the Tongue Point Job Corps Center as staff physician, replacing Dr. James J. Jardee, who has gone into private practice in Othello, Wash. Dr. Struthers comes from Kenai, Alaska, where he was the sole physician in a community of 7,000 people. He is a graduate of Oregon State university and University of Vermont School of Medicine.

Off to A Good Start

The women's Job Corps seems to have made an auspicious start in Astoria. The young women have so far caused no trouble in town, or apparently at the center either, and their conduct has been praiseworthy. Furthermore, there has been none of the spirit of indifference that was manifested by many of the young men who were sent here previously. Instead of a fourth of them heading back home once they had looked the place over, virtually all the young women are staying.

Of course, only 166 of the girls are here so far, out of an eventual quota of 650. And they have not yet had much opportunity to visit the downtown area except in supervised parties. Some are bound to get into trouble later on, but the prospects seem good for considerably less friction with town youth than was the case with the men's Job Corps Center.

Tongue Point officials are inclined to credit an improved screening process for much of the evident improvement. There obviously was little or no screening at all in recruiting for the men's center, and in fact some judges were giving young malefactors the choice of going to jail or Job Corps. There could be no better way to wreck the Job Corps program than to make it a substitute for a penal institution.

Flemming Silent on Criticism of Cost At Tongue Point

EUGENE (UPI)—Dr. [illegible] Flemming, president of [illegible] versity of Oregon, had [illegible]

Tongue Point Job Corps Center officials had a comment Monday on the statements by Rep. Edith Green regarding high costs of training there. They said any comment would have to come from University of Oregon or Office of Economic Opportunity.

Job Trainee Cost Said 'Outrageous'

PORTLAND — Rep. Edith Green D-Ore., was a Government Accounting Office audit shows that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green, in a telephone interview from her Washington home Sunday said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee to operate $13,000 in 1966, compared with $6,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $8,500 per trainee.

Mrs. Green said the figures indicated $920,000 paid for the former Navy base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were "outrageous in terms of monies spent for value received."

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO reported noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

Tongue Point was converted in December from a center for men to one that eventually will accommodate about 600 women.

Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, which is in charge of operating the center, declined to comment on Mrs. Green's criticism of costs.

"I have no comment on that," he said, but the conversion of the center from a boys Job Corps to a girls Job Corps is progressing very satisfactorily."

Tongue Point 'Experiment' To Be Topic

[illegible] Tongue Point as a "great American experiment," and in reviewing the two years the center operated as a men's camp, will deal with the questions of Tongue Point's success, its goals and its accomplishments, its [illegible] and planned [illegible] speech [illegible] by Lane Community College as a part of the college's lecture-forum series.

OEO's Whims at Fault

Much of the blame for the high cost of operating Tongue Point Job Corps Center cannot properly be laid at the door of the contractor, University of Oregon, which operates it.

The Office of Economic Opportunity never did give the contractor a chance to prove what it could do. The center was established originally two years ago to accommodate around 1,250 male trainees. Staff personnel to handle this number were authorized and employed. But never did OEO provide the trainee personnel to bring it even close to authorized strength. About 700 were the most ever on hand at one time.

Thus the staff-to-trainee ratio was generally around 1 to 2 instead of the 1 to 3 considered optimum.

Furthermore, poor screening by the OEO was undoubtedly largely responsible for excessively high turnover. Many trainees came, looked about, then demanded transportation home. Adequate screening would have weeded out many of these youngsters who apparently were just looking for a free trip at government cost, or who were emotionally or mentally too unstable to make a go of the training opportunity, or who were just plain bad actors.

When finally new screening policies were developed that provided a more sensible basis of selecting trainees, the OEO arbitrarily wiped out the old center and converted Tongue Point into a women's center—involving substantial extra expenses in transferring out unsuitable equipment and providing new equipment and in remodelling quarters. There was also a period of several weeks when the center lay idle and operating expense continued.

All this sort of nonsense, which seems almost inevitable in a government operation, added unnecessary expenses and sheer waste to the cost of operation. If the contractors had been given a fair chance to do a job, free of the whimsicalities of Washington, the cost could have been far less than the $15,000 per student that Rep. Edith Green correctly labels far too high.

Mrs. Green thinks a "little Job Corps" in her own Portland district, run by Portland school board, can be conducted at far less cost than Tongue Point. Perhaps it can, but not if Washington interferes to the extent it has done at Tongue Point.

Tongue Point Costs Hit by Edith Green

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Statesman Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (Special) — The total cost to the federal government of the Tongue Point Job Corps training center during its first two years of operation averaged nearly $15,000 per enrollee per year — a figure Rep. Edith Green computed and criticized as "outrageous."

A. Robert Smith

The basis for this computation by the Portland congresswoman is an audit report made at her request by the U.S. General Accounting Office, which said the grand total of costs from Dec. 15, 1964 through Dec. 31, 1966 came to $14,796,000.

This total included an item of $920,000 fixed by GAO as the value of the old Tongue Point navy base, although this figure was not an actual expenditure. GAO said it included this figure because the city of Astoria had offered to buy the base for that amount but was turned down by the Kennedy Administration due to protests from Sen. Wayne Morse, who argued that it would be better used by some federal agency.

GAO reported the grand total included $11,484,000 in operating costs, $1,867,000 in costs of converting and equipping the base for its new purpose, and $525,000 for supplies.

"The audit confirms my view that this is an outrageous cost in terms of each enrollee," declared Rep. Green.

Mrs. Green recalled government officials had previously estimated the cost per enrollee at Tongue Point was $13,000 in 1965, whereas the national average for all Job Corps centers for boys was $9,100, and for girls $8,400.

The problem with computing the average cost per enrollee is that the number of young men at Tongue Point during the two-year period varied. GAO noted there were 480 trainees on board at the end of this period. Originally planned to accommodate 1,200, the center's enrollment leveled off at something less than half this goal.

Asked how she thought the costs at Tongue Point could be reduced, Mrs. Green said the center was never used to its full capacity and the staff was too large for the number of trainees. The GAO report noted the center had 395 employes to serve 480 trainees at the end of the two-year period.

Mrs. Green said Philco-Ford, the subcontractor who handled vocational training under University of Oregon management of the center, was paid a fixed fee of $120,000 during the first 18-month period for providing training for less than half the number of trainees it had contracted to train. She said this was not Philco-Ford's fault, but that the contract should have been renegotiated when it was apparent the enrollment would not meet initial expectations.

Noting that Sen. Morse has recently been defending the costs at Tongue Point, Mrs. Green said: "I have no sympathy for those who rationalize or justify loose management of funds or extremely high costs simply because you are engaged in the noble effort to fight poverty. The money ought not to go to the middleman but to the people for whom the program was intended."

She reiterated her objection to the Job Corps' failure to evaluate its training in terms of results to "find out how well those youngsters are prepared to hold down a job."

She said the program is "too much based on the opportunity theory," is too permissive and fails to impart self-discipline and motivation "which are woefully lacking in an awful lot of Job Corps trainees."

Tongue Point Center Defended at Forum

By HENRY WILLIS
Of the Register-Guard

Has the Tongue Point Job Corps center at Astoria been successful? Are the results worth the expense?

The answer from one who has investigated the program — an unqualified "yes" to both questions.

Paul Jacobson, dean of the University of Oregon School of Education, discussed the two-year-old Tongue Point program for about 100 persons Wednesday night in Eugene in a lecture-forum sponsored by Lane Community College.

(Tongue Point, which began operating as an anti-poverty training camp for men early in 1965, was recently converted into a women's training center. It has been administered by the University of Oregon under grants from the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.)

Jacobson termed Tongue Point and other such centers around the country "an American experiment well worth the time, effort and expense."

He readily acknowledged that the center in Astoria had problems from its beginning. Chief among these, Jacobson said, were poor selection and screening of candidates and "not enough time to get the center operational."

Screening failures accounted for the high dropout rate among trainees at the center's start, he said. Many youths were sent to the center under a "jail or Job Corps" ultimatum, Jacobson said, adding that he feels selection methods have greatly improved.

Jacobson said major problems were encountered by the rapidity with which the Job Corps program moved from conception to full scale operation. He said staff members at Tongue Point had about a month to make plans for training [illegible] Corps center at Astoria been successful? Are the results worth the expense?

The answer from one who has investigated the program — an unqualified "yes" to both questions.

Paul Jacobson, dean of the University of Oregon School of Education, discussed the two-year-old Tongue Point program for about 100 persons Wednesday night in Eugene in a lecture-forum sponsored by Lane Community College.

(Tongue Point, which began operating as an anti-poverty training camp for men early in 1965, was recently converted into a women's training center. It has been administered by the University of Oregon under grants from the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.)

Jacobson termed Tongue Point and other such centers around the country "an American experiment well worth the time, effort and expense."

He readily acknowledged that the center in Astoria had problems from its beginning. Chief among these, Jacobson said, were poor selection and screening of candidates and "not enough time to get the center operational."

Screening failures accounted for the high dropout rate among trainees at the center's start, he said. Many youths were sent to the center under a "jail or Job Corps" ultimatum, Jacobson said, adding that he feels selection methods have greatly improved.

Jacobson said major problems were encountered by the rapidity with which the Job Corps program moved from conception to full scale operation. He said staff members at Tongue Point had about a month to make plans for training [illegible] Corps center at Astoria been successful? Are the results worth the expense?

The answer from one who has investigated the program — an unqualified "yes" to both questions.

Paul Jacobson, dean of the University of Oregon School of Education, discussed the two-year-old Tongue Point program for about 100 persons Wednesday night in Eugene in a lecture-forum sponsored by Lane Community College.

(Tongue Point, which began operating as an anti-poverty training camp for men early in 1965, was recently converted into a women's training center. It has been administered by the University of Oregon under grants from the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.)

Jacobson termed Tongue Point and other such centers around the country "an American experiment well worth the time, effort and expense."

He readily acknowledged that the center in Astoria had problems from its beginning. Chief among these, Jacobson said, were poor selection and screening of candidates and "not enough time to get the center operational."

Screening failures accounted for the high dropout rate among trainees at the center's start, he said. Many youths were sent to the center under a "jail or Job Corps" ultimatum, Jacobson said, adding that he feels selection methods have greatly improved.

Jacobson said major problems were encountered by the rapidity with which the Job Corps program moved from conception to full scale operation. He said staff members at Tongue [illegible] divide 12 by 4." He also said many trainees came needing medical, dental and eye care, and many came undernourished. "All of them came for a chance at something," he added.

The uneven selection and the "less than-we-expected" educational backgrounds of the trainees caused a re-arranging of the center's educational programs, Jacobson said.

Once these initial problems were met, Jacobson said, the trainees themselves created new problems.

Minor thievery became a problem early in the program, he said, but this was later eliminated by the group action and discipline of the trainees themselves. "Many of the boys stole clothing just to mail it back home to a sister or brother who needed it more," he said.

A "student-court" handled most of the minor disciplinary problems, Jacobson said.

"We had some discipline problems, of course," Jacobson said, "but we never had a knife fight or a racial incident or any pushing of dope."

On the whole he said the trainees were "well behaved, but terribly noisy."

In answering recent criticism on the dropout rate at the women's center, Jacobson said 50 to 60 per cent of the trainees completed the program. "That's better than we do at the University of Oregon," he said.

A member of the audience asked Jacobson to comment on Oregon Congresswoman Edith Green's barrage of criticism on the cost of the Job Corps program. "I have no comment to make on anything Mrs. Green has to say," Jacobson said with a grin.

About the cost, however, he did say that it was "better to spend $3,000 or even $10,000 on a disadvantaged youth than to watch him go on relief and possibly into a life of crime." (He earlier had said the cost per student at Tongue Point was about $7,500 per youth.)

He suggested improvements in teaching methods and more use of successful trainees to encourage other trainees to complete the program. He also said "reading and arithmetic should be made more meaningful for the students."

Tongue Pt. Criticism Ignored

Job Corps cost said 'outrageous'

WASHINGTON — The total cost to the federal government of the Tongue Point Job Corps training center during its first two years of operation averaged nearly $15,000 per enrollee per year — a figure Rep. Edith Green computed and criticized as "outrageous."

The basis for this computation by the Portland congresswoman is an audit report made at her request by the U.S. General Accounting Office, which said the grand total of costs from Dec. 15, 1964 through Dec. 31, 1966 came to $14,796,000.

This total included an item of $920,000 fixed by GAO as the value of the old Tongue Point navy base, although this figure was not an actual expenditure. GAO said it included this figure because the city of Astoria had offered to buy the base for that amount but was turned down by the Kennedy Administration due to protests from Sen. Wayne Morse, who argued that it would be better used by some federal agency.

GAO reported that the grand total included $11,484,000 in operating costs, $1,867,000 in costs of converting and equipping the base for its new purpose, and $525,000 for supplies.

"The audit confirms my view that this is an outrageous cost in terms of each enrollee," declared Rep. Green.

Mrs. Green recalled that government officials had previously estimated the cost per enrollee at Tongue Point was $13,000 in 1965, whereas the national average for all Job Corps centers for boys was $9100, and for girls $8400.

The problem with computing the average cost per enrollee is that the number of young men at Tongue Point during the 2-year period varied. GAO noted that there were 480 trainees on board at the end of this period. Originally planned to accommodate 1200, the center's enrollment leveled off at something less than half this goal.

Asked how she thought the costs at Tongue Point could be reduced, Mrs. Green said the center was never used to its full capacity and the staff was too large for the number of trainees. The GAO report noted that the center had 395 employes to serve 480 trainees at the end of the 2-year period.

Mrs. Green said Philco-Ford, the subcontractor who handled vocational training under University of Oregon management of the center, was paid a fixed fee of $120,000 during the first 18-month period for providing training for less than half the number of trainees it had contracted to train. She said this was not Philco-Ford's fault, but that the contract should have been renegotiated when it was apparent the enrollment would not meet initial expectations.

Noting that Sen. Morse has recently been defending the costs at Tongue Point, Mrs. Green said: "I have no sympathy for those who rationalize or justify loose management of funds or extremely high costs simply because you are engaged in the noble effort to fight poverty. The money ought not to go to the middleman but to the people for whom the program was intended."

She reiterated her objection to the Job Corps' failure to evaluate its training in terms of results to "find out how well those youngsters are prepared to hold down a job."

She said the program is "too much based on the opportunity theory," is too permissive and fails to impart self-discipline and motivation "which are woefully lacking in an awful lot of Job Corps trainees."

Style Show Set By Job Trainees

ASTORIA—Tongue Point Job Corps women will join in the community's annual spring opening and style show this year, it was agreed at a meeting of the Astoria Chamber of Commerce Merchants' [illegible]

The program will be held in the theater building at the center April 28, with corps women as official hostesses. Both trainees and local residents will serve as models.

Corps Camp Grows

ASTORIA (AP) — New arrivals totalling 99 swelled enrollment at the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center to 168 this week. The new trainees began a two-week orientation program Thursday.

Enrollment Rises

ASTORIA (AP) — New arrivals totalling 99 swelled enrollment at the Tongue Point women's Job Corps center to 168 this week.

Trains for Dressmaking Job

Tongue Point Recruits Include Mother, 19

By SHEILAH TOOMEY
Associated Press Writer

Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria because, "I just knew I had to go someplace to learn something."

"In my family they go from one job to the next. That's not good," Pearl said.

Pearl is one of 56 recruits who arrived at Tongue Point in mid-March. The center was opened in February of 1965 for men. By last Jan. 20, when it was announced it would be converted to a training site for women, 2,300 men had been assigned to the center.

About 100 more women will arrive next week from the San Francisco and Austin, Texas, areas. Officials expect 650 women by June.

Of the first group, 24 were from California, 18 from Arizona, 8 from Washington and the rest were from Oregon, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii.

Pearl is lively and pretty. She is direct, confident, and expressive. Her daughter Stephanie is now with friends in Bakersfield.

A number of corpswomen have children. Some have husbands, some don't.

Pearl talks of designing clothes, but she also speaks of working in a clothes factory. To her, they're the same thing.

Does she have brothers and sisters? "Whew!" she says, waving a hand in the air. "Ten — all at home."

"Three bedrooms. The girls on one side, the boys on the other."

"My father — my stepfather — supports the whole family. He lives about a block away. The kids — they drive him crazy."

She doesn't want a large family like her mother, but on the other hand, Pearl is pleasantly pessimistic.

"Big families run in my family. My sister has five, she was married when she was 13. My brother had two and another sister has three. They all live at home."

During orientation, Pearl will get a corpswomen's handbook. It says:

"These pages contain suggestions, information, and guidelines for group living."

There is little doubt Pearl already has experienced group living.

Did she graduate from high school? "Three months before graduation, they let me go," Pearl says pointing to herself.

"Straight A's in sewing, and PE I got too."

Should Pearl change her mind about dressmaking, she can choose from classes in nursing, electronics assembly, printing, food service, child care, teacher-librarian assistance and business machines.

How will she raise her daughter?

"Hard," she said. "I mean I'm going to keep her in church, none of that playing sick and ditching school. I'm going to keep her in clothes so she can't quit school, and I'm going to keep her bank account up."

The dormitory at Tongue Point echos with excited voices and blaring music. The bedrooms are immaculate.

Curtains and bedspreads match in yellow, blue, green or pink. Fresh bouquets of daffodils stand on each dressing table — gifts from the staff.

"You want to see what they gave us to wear?" Pearl says with glee as she held up a faded denim skirt, grey sweatshirt and navy cotton slacks. "You like it? You can have it!" she laughs.

Within the first month, each corpswoman gets $35 to spend on clothes in Astoria. Most will buy date and church clothes.

"No miniskirts," Pearl says. "They show too much."

The Job Corps knows a new outfit can build a girl's confidence. They will get instruction in color, style, fit, makup and posture. They will even learn how to make those denim skirts fashionable.

During orientation, a hairdo contest will be held. Advisers will help girls fix the perfect look, window.

Pearl says she loves the Job Corps and would like to stay at Tongue Point forever, but adds, "One year is enough. My baby like at home."

The large dining room, once Tongue Point was a naval base, is decidedly feminine now. Blue, green, pink and yellow tablecloths and bouquets of artificial flowers decorate each long table. Flowered curtains line [illegible] they will get instruction a wartime mess hall when needs me."

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Sisters at Center

Among the first corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps center are, from left, Patricia and Donna Charles of Port Angeles, Wash., sisters of the nation's first urban Job Corps trainee. They are shown arranging a bouquet of daffodils for their dormitory room. Both plan to take vocational training in food service.

Port Angeles sisters at Job Corps center

Patricia and Donna Charles of Port Angeles, Wash., sisters of the nation's first urban Job Corps trainee, are following their brother's footsteps by undergoing vocational training at Tongue Point Job Corps center.

The sisters were among the first corpswomen to arrive at the center March 14 -- two years after their brother, Kenneth, became Tongue Point's first trainee.

Kenneth Charles achieved national prominence when he became not only the nation's first Job Corpsman from an urban center, but the first corpsman to be drafted into the U.S. Army and the first corpsman to see action in Vietnam. He is stationed at Ft. Lewis after completing his Vietnam service.

"Kenny talked a lot about Tongue Point," 16-year-old Donna explained. "But we had no idea we'd end up here. We didn't think it would be open so soon." The Tongue Point center was converted from a men's training center to one for women after announcement of the change was made in January.

Donna dropped out of school after the eighth grade. Her 16-year-old sister quit after completing the seventh grade.

"I just didn't care for school," soft-spoken Patricia said. "But neither of us was getting anywhere at home."

Four brothers are living at home and occasionally the girls would babysit for the youngest one. Other than babysitting, they had not held any other type of job.

The girls have expressed interest in food service vocational training courses offered at the center and plan to "stick it out." "We wanted to go back home after the first couple of days, but the other girls talked us out of it," said Patricia.

"Once you get used to it (the center) you're so busy you don't have time to get homesick," Donna said. "There's lots to do -- especially recreation. I'd recommend it to any girl who has dropped out of school."

One deciding factor in their staying was a letter from home. "Mom wrote that everyone was proud of us back home - that we are going to make something of ourselves."

6 -- Yakima Republic Friday, March 31, 1967

AMONG FIRST — Pearl Haygood, left, and Hortensia Navar were in first group of 56 to arrive this month at new Job Corps center for women near Astoria, Ore. Both 19, and from California, they hope for careers in clothes-making. Hortensia is one of number of Mexican-Americans recruited from Southwest. (AP Wirephoto)

Youthful Mother—Tells Why She Joined Job Corps

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — Her 3½-year-old daughter in Bakersfield, Calif., is a good reason why the Job Corps may work for a 19-year-old mother.

Pearl Haygood is at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria because, "I just knew I had to go someplace to learn something."

"In my family they go from one job to the next. That's not good," Pearl said.

Pearl is one of 56 recruits who arrived at Tongue Point in mid-March. The center was opened in February of 1965 for men. By last Jan. 20, when it was announced it would be converted to a training site for women, 2,300 men had been assigned to the center.

About 100 more women will arrive next week from the San Francisco and Austin, Texas, areas. Officials expect 650 women by June.

Of the first group, 24 were from California, 18 from Arizona, 8 from Washington and the rest were from Oregon, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii.

Pearl is lively and pretty. She is direct, confident, and expressive. Her daughter Stephanie is now with friends in Bakersfield.

A number of corpswomen have children. Some have husbands, some don't.

Pearl talks of designing clothes, but she also speaks of working in a clothes factory. To her, they're the same thing.

Does she have brothers and sisters? "Whew!" she says, waving a hand in the air. "Ten — all at home."

"Three bedrooms. The girls on one side, the boys on the other."

"My father — my stepfather — supports the whole family. He lives about a block away. The kids — they drive him crazy."

She doesn't want a large family like her mother, but on the other hand, Pearl is pleasantly pessimistic.

"Big families run in my family. My sister has five, she was married when she was 13. My brother had two and another sister has three. They all live at home."

During orientation, Pearl will get a corpswomen's handbook. It says:

"These pages contain suggestions, information, and guidelines for group living."

There is little doubt Pearl already has experienced group living.

Did she graduate from high school? "Three months before graduation, they let me go," Pearl says pointing to herself.

"Straight A's in sewing and PE I got too."

Should Pearl change her mind about dressmaking, she can choose from classes in nursing, electronics assembly, printing, food service, child care, teacher-librarian assistance and business machines.

How will she raise her daughter?

"Hard," she said. "I mean I'm going to keep her in church, none of that playing sick and ditching school. I'm going to keep her in clothes so she can't quit school, and I'm going to keep her bank account up."

The dormitory at Tongue Point echos with excited voices and blaring music. The bedrooms are immaculate.

Curtains and bedspreads match in yellow, blue, green or pink. Fresh bouquets of daffodils stand on each dressing table — gifts from the staff.

"You want to see what they gave us to wear?" Pearl says with glee as she held up a faded denim skirt, grey sweatshirt and navy cotton slacks. "You like it? You can have it!" she laughs.

Within the first month, each corpswoman gets $35 to spend on clothes in Astoria. Most will buy date and church clothes.

"No miniskirts," Pearl says. "They show too much."

The Job Corps knows a new outfit can build a girl's confidence. They will get instruction in color, style, fit, makup and posture. They will even learn how to make those denim skirts fashionable.

During orientation, a hairdo contest will be held.

Idaho Evening Statesman
Boise, Idaho
(Cir. D 10,180)
MAR 31 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

FIRST

AMONG FIRST RECRUITS

PEARL HAYGOOD, left, and Hortensia Navar were in first group of 56 arriving this month at new Job Corps center for women near [illegible], Ore. Both 19, and from California, they hope for careers in clothes-making. Hortensia is one of number of Mexican-Americans recruited from southwest. Pearl is subject of background interview. (AP Wirephoto)

Yaquina Cruise To Be Subject Of Lecture Here

DR KILHO PARK

"Yaquina in the Midst of the Pacific," will be [illegible] a lecture by Dr [illegible] Park [illegible] State University oceanographer Thursday in Astoria.

He [illegible] at 7:30 p.m., will be held at the Community Hall [illegible] Astoria.

[illegible] will be in session [illegible] ating the women's center.

Kieffer said Flemming [illegible] it would be "inappropria[illegible] for him to sound off at this point" on Mrs Green's criticisms.

Mrs. Green said the federal General Accounting Office computed the average cost of training enrollees at Tongue Point at almost $15,000 a man. She called the figure "outrageous."

UO Chief Has No Comment On Criticism

University of Oregon President Arthur Flemming won't have any comment on criticism of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center [illegible] Representative Edith Green.

That was the word Monday from Jarold Kieffer, assistant to Flemming. The president himself wasn't available for comment.

Mrs. Green, an Oregon Democrat, has leveled a blast at the cost of operation of Tongue Point during its first two years as a men's Job Corps Center. The University operated the Astoria center, which has since been changed to a women's facility, under contract with the Peace Office of Economic Opportunity.

The university also is operating the women's center.

Kieffer said Flemming feels it would be "inappropria[illegible] for him to sound off at this point" on Mrs Green's criticisms.

Mrs. Green said the federal General Accounting Office computed the average cost of training enrollees at Tongue Point at almost $15,000 a man. She called the figure "outrageous."

Called 'Outrageous' by Solon

Tongue Point Costs Rapped

By A ROBERT SMITH
Register-Guard Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The total cost to the federal government of the Tongue Point Job Corps Training Center during its first two years of operation averaged nearly $15,000 per enrollee per year—a figure Representative Edith Green computed and criticized as "outrageous."

The basis for [illegible] computation by the Portland congresswoman is an audit report made at her request by the U.S. General Accounting Office, which paid the grand total of costs from Dec. 15, 1964 through Dec. 31, 1968 came to $14,796,000.

[illegible] total included an item of $92[illegible] as the [illegible] of the Job Corps [illegible] figure was not an actual expenditure to [illegible] future because the city of Astoria had offered to [illegible] base for that amount but was turned [illegible] by the Job Corps [illegible] Senator [illegible] argued that it would be better [illegible] to GAO reported that the grand total [illegible] operating costs of $10,000,000 [illegible] the base for its new purpose and $5[illegible] for supplies.

The center is operated by the [illegible] of Oregon under government contract.

"The audit confirms my [illegible] cost in terms of each enrollee [illegible] expected," Mrs. Green recalled that government estimates [illegible] estimated that the cost per enrollee at Tongue Point was $13,000 in 1965, whereas the national average for all Job Corps Centers for boys was $9,100 and for girls $8,400.

The problem with computing the average cost per [illegible] is that the number of young men at Tongue Point [illegible] two-year period varied. GAO noted that there were 480 on board at the end of this period. Originally [illegible] accommodate 1,200, the center's enrollment level [illegible] off at something less than half this goal.

Asked how she thought the costs at Tongue Point could be reduced, Mrs. Green said the center was never used to its full capacity and the staff was too large for the number of trainees. The GAO report noted that the center had 385 employes to serve 480 trainees at the end of the two-year period.

Mrs. Green said Philco-Ford the subcontractor who handled vocational training under University of O[illegible] management of the center was paid a fixed fee of $120 [illegible] during the first 18 month period for providing training for [illegible] than half the number of trainees it had contracted to [illegible]. She said this was not Philo Ford's fault, but that the [illegible] should have been recognized when it was apparent the enrollment would [illegible]

[illegible] cost to Tongue Point [illegible] for those who [illegible] of extremely high costs simp[illegible] mobile offices [illegible]

[illegible] direction to the Job Corps' failure to [illegible] in terms of results to "find out how well [illegible] prepared to hold down a job."

[illegible] to impart self-[illegible]

Mrs. Green said she [illegible] expectations for a "Little Job Corps" program of [illegible] in Portland later this year [illegible] school dropouts. It would be [illegible] School System "at greatly red[illegible]

Trainees Keep Busy at Tongue Point

Some of the first Job Corpswomen arrivals at Tongue Point have begun their training. At top are, from left, Donna Hedge, Phoenix, Ariz.; Mary Helen Gonzales, Elmsage, Ariz., and Clementina Pacheco, Glendale, Ariz., working at their electronics assembly course. Below, new arrival Juanita Palvadore, Coolidge, Ariz., has retinoscope eye exam from Pacific university optometry student Kirk Snick, Puyallup, Wash. Snick is one of nine PU students who came Thursday with Instructor Richard Sefton to give eye tests.

Corpswomen Little Noticed In First Weeks in Astoria

Tongue Point Job Corps Center, the first corpswomen arrived more than three weeks ago, and their arrival has created considerable interest.

Sixty young women arrived March 14 and another 108 Mar 28.

The group was taken by bus to the station where made no impact on the community. One would hardly know they were here.

Astoria police Chief Paul Bri- reports no trouble at all making classes. The course for nurses' aide training was awaiting some beds and other hospital equipment for training purposes expected to arrive this week.

Two nights weekly Doris Alexander, Portland charm school operator, conducts an elective class in poise, posture and grooming.

Within another month the girls are to be equipped with uniform consisting of blazer and skirt or casual wear off the campus.

100 Girls Due Tuesday

The first group of new girls will arrive next Tuesday night, then 100 more about April 25-26, as the building is completed to contain 650 persons.

The girls seem industrious, courteous and cheerful and they say they appreciate the opportunity. The fact that all have been in training connected to the highest paid jobs among area artisans in the Job Corps points to the girls' comment.

The staff is making efforts to keep the girls busy. Many are now selling the $5.50 weekend passes and there have been requests that buses be provided. Some are making plans for their rooms.

Girls Visit Victoria

Social plans are also getting started. A dance has been held between the girls and officers and there is a dance tonight. Officers are normally limited with the Astoria cadre. They have also been supplemented into town to [illegible] the dance.

Last night the girls were guests of the Victoria Job Corps Center near Victoria, B.C. There was a tour of the center and a dance. About a score of Coast Guardsmen were invited. The dance was successful and orderly, officials reported.

[illegible] to arrive [illegible]

Tongue Point Report

Green Assails $15,000 Cost Per Corpsman

By A. ROBERT SMITH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The [illegible] government [illegible] to [illegible] operation [illegible] $1,000 per [illegible] — a figure Rep. Edith Green [illegible] and criticized as "outrageous."

The basis from this computation by the Portland congresswoman is an audit report made at her request by the U.S. General Accounting Office, which said the grand total of costs from Dec. 15, 1964, through Dec. 31, 1966 came to $14,796,000.

The total included an item of [illegible] GAO as [illegible] although [illegible] by the base for that amount [illegible] was turned down by the Kennedy administration due to protests from Sen. Wayne Morse, who argued that it would be better used by some federal agency.

GAO Operates Center

GAO reported that the grand total included $11,484,000 in operating costs, $1,567,000 in costs of converting and equipping the base for its new purpose and $525,000 for supplies. The center is operated by the University of Oregon under government contract.

"The audit confirms my view that this is an outrageous cost in terms of each enrollee," declared Rep. Green.

Mrs. Green recalled that government officials had previously estimated that the cost per enrollee at Tongue Point was $13,000 in 1965, whereas the national average for all Job Corps centers for boys was $9,100. And for girls $8,400.

The problems with computing the average cost per enrollee is that the number of young men at Tongue Point during the 2-year period varied. GAO noted that there were 480 trainees on board at the end of this period. Originally planned to accommodate 1,200 the center's enrollment leveled off at something less than half this goal.

Staff Said Too Large

Asked how she thought the costs at Tongue Point could be reduced, Mrs. Green said the center was never used to its full capacity and the staff was too large for the number of trainees. The GAO report noted that the center had 395 employes to serve 480 trainees at the end of the 2-year period.

Mrs. Green said Philco-Ford, the subcontractor who handled vocational training under University of Oregon management of the center, was paid a fixed fee of $130,000 during the first 18-month period for providing training for less than half the number of trainees it had contracted to train.

She said this was not Philco-Ford's fault, but that the contract should have been renegotiated when it was apparent the enrollment would not meet initial expectations.

Mrs. Green said she has greater expectations for a "little Job Corps" program of vocational training to be launched in Portland later this year for 300 boys and girls, primarily high school dropouts. It will be conducted by the Portland public school system "at greatly reduced cost."

The estimated per pupil cost is less than $5,000. Some students will live at home and receive job training at day centers, while others will receive residential accommodations.

Trainee Outlines Personal Goals

By SHEILAH TOOMEY
Associated Press Writer

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) —Her 3½-year-old daughter in Bakersfield, Calif., is a good reason why the Job Corps may work for a 19-year-old mother.

Pearl Haygood is at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria because, "I just knew I had to go someplace to learn something."

"In my family they go from one job to the next. That's not good," Pearl said.

Pearl is lively and pretty. She is direct, confident, and expressive. Her daughter Stephanie is now with friends in Bakersfield.

A number of corpswomen have children. Some have husbands, some don't.

'Ten At Home'

Pearl talks of designing clothes, but she also speaks of working in a clothes factory. To her, they're the same thing.

Does she have brothers and sisters? "Whew!" she says, waving a hand in the air. "Ten—all at home.

"Three bedrooms. The girls on one side, the boys on the other.

"My father—my stepfather—supports the whole family. He lives about a block away. The kids—they drive him crazy."

She doesn't want a large family like her mother, but on the other hand, Pearl is pleasantly pessimistic.

"Big families run in my family. My sister has five, she was married when she was 13. My brother had two and another sister has three. They all live at home."

During orientation, Pearl will get a corpswomen's handbook. It says:

"These pages contain suggestions, information, and guidelines for group living."

Group Living Experienced

There is little doubt Pearl already has experienced group living.

Did she graduate from high school? "Three months before graduation they let me go," Pearl says pointing to herself. "Straight A's in sewing and PE I got too."

Should Pearl change her mind about dressmaking, she can choose from classes in nursing, electronics assembly, printing, food service, child care, teacher-librarian assistance and business machines.

How will she raise her daughter?

"Hard," she said. "I mean I'm going to keep her in church, none of that playing sick and ditching school. I'm going to keep her in clothes so she can't quit school, and I'm going to keep her bank account up."

"You want to see what they gave us to wear?" Pearl says with glee as she held up a faded denim skirt, grey sweatshirt and navy cotton slacks. "You like it? You can have it!" she laughs.

Within the first month, each corpswoman gets $35 to spend on clothes in Astoria. Most will buy date and church clothes.

"No miniskirts," Pearl says. "They show too much."

Pearl likes the food. "Just like at home."

Pearl says she loves the Job Corps, and would like to stay at Tongue Point forever, but adds, "One year is enough. My baby needs me."

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
D - S 384,694

Port Angeles, Wash.
MAR 23 '96

Allen's P C B

JOB CORPS RECRUITS — Patricia and Donna Charles of Port Angeles, among the first Corpswomen at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, have the added distinction of being sisters to Kenneth Charles who was the nation's first Job Corpsman from an urban center.

Girls follow in footsteps of brother in Job Corps

Patricia and Donna Charles of Port Angeles, sisters of the nation's first urban Job Corps trainee, are following their brother's footsteps by undergoing vocational training at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The sisters were among the first Corpswomen to arrive at the Center March 14—two years after their brother, Kenneth, became Tongue Point's first trainee.

Kenneth achieved national prominence when he became not only the nation's first Job Corpsman from an urban center, but the first Corpsman to be drafted into the U.S. Army and the first Corpsman to see action in Vietnam.

The youth is presently stationed at Ft. Lewis after completing his Vietnam stint.

"Kenny talked a lot about Tongue Point," 19-year-old Donna explained. "But we had no idea we'd end up here. We didn't think it would be open so soon."

The Tongue Point Center was converted from a men's training center to one for women after announcement of the change was made in January.

Donna dropped out of school after the eighth grade, and her 16-year-old sister quit after completing the seventh grade.

"I just didn't care for school," soft-spoken Patricia said. "But neither of us were getting anywhere at home."

Four brothers are living at home and occasionally they would baby-sit for the youngest one. Other than baby-sitting, they had not held any other type of job.

The girls have expressed interest in food service vocational training courses offered at the Center and plan to "stick it out."

"We wanted to go back home after the first couple of days, but the other girls talked us out of it," said Patricia.

"Once you get used to the center you're so busy you don't have time to get homesick," Donna said. "There's lots to do—especially recreation. I'd recommend it to any girl who has dropped out of school."

Rep. Green Says Tongue Point Doubles Ceiling Fixed By Congress

Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., told The Oregonian in Portland Sunday that the estimated $15,000 price tag for each Job Corpsman enrolled at Tongue Point, was twice as much as the ceiling of $7,500 per enrollee set by Congress last year.

She referred to the audit report made at her request by the U.S. General Accounting Office, which estimated the grand total of costs from Dec. 15, 1964, through Dec. 31, 1966, as $14,796,000 for the training of only 480 students.

She conceded the figure included an item of $920,000 fixed by GAO as the acquisition value of the former Navy base. The figure was arrived at arbitrarily because it was equal to the offer made for the property by the City of Astoria, an offer killed by Sen. Wayne L. Morse, who argued the base would be better used by some federal agency.

Mrs. Green, however, said the $13,000 per enrollee figure arrived at for 1965, did not include the acquisition cost and was still $4,000 higher than the national average for Job Corps costs.

In any event, she said, the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the Job Corps Center were "outrageous" in terms of money spent for value received.

One reason why the costs were so high, she said, was because the center never has been used to full capacity, and overhead was too large. The GAO report noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve only 480 students, a ratio of almost one to one.

She reiterated her earlier view that much more could be expected from the "Little Job Corps" program of vocational training which will be launched in Portland later this year for 300 boys and girls of high school age. Some of these students will live at home and receive training at day centers, others will be provided quarters.

Of other developments on the national scene, Mrs. Green said she had not yet read the text of Gov. George Romney's speech on Vietnam policy, which appeared in the Sunday Oregonian, in which the Michigan governor and presidential hopeful said it was "unthinkable that the United States withdraw from Vietnam." She declined to comment until she had read

Of the recent court decision on Rep. Adam Clayton Powell's suit to force Congress to reseat him, in which the court ruled it did not have power to do so, Mrs. Green concurred.

"I heartily agree that under the principle of separation of powers, this is an area in which the court should not intervene. Under the Constitution only the House has the right to seat its own members."

She said, however, that if Powell is re-elected in his district this month, she would urge the House to reconsider its resolution which went beyond the Cellar committee recommendation and barred the controversial representative from being seated in the 90th Congress.

"It is my judgment that the House will reconsider the resolution in the event Mr. Powell is re-elected, and I think it should.

"I voted originally against the exclusion and for the committee recommendation which provided for loss of seniority and committee chairmanship, repayment of the $40,000 and removal of his wife from the payroll. This seemed to me to have been preferable, but when this failed there was no alternative but to let him in or to vote for exclusion."

Yakima Republic
Monday, April 10, 1967 — 3

Job Trainees Cost $15,000

PORTLAND (AP) — Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., said Sunday that a General Accounting Office report she requested estimated the cost of training each person at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center was nearly $15,000.

And she said it was twice as much as the ceiling of $7,500 per enrollee set by Congress.

She conceded that the figure included $920,000 fixed by the GAO as the cost of buying the former Navy base near Astoria on the Northwest Oregon coast.

In any event, she said, the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the 2-year-old Job Corps center were "outrageous in terms of money spent for value received."

She said the overhead of the center was too large and the center never had been used to capacity.

The GAO report noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

Tongue Point was transformed this winter from a center for men to one that will have more than 600 women by June.

SECTION TWO PAGES 1-4

The Oregonian

HOSTESS HOUSE

PORTLAND, OREGON, SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1967

(Staff Photos by Leonard Bacon)

THE RED, white and blue Job Corps emblem will provide a gay touch to Hortensia Navar's navy blue sweater. California girl found raincoat issued "way too long."

FRANCES SHEELFY checks through the stack of navy and denim blue garments issued each corpswoman. Sizes stocked range from 8 to 20.

LANGUAGE master "self teacher" is operated by (from left) Pearl Haygood, Celia Jaquez and Mary Helen Gonzales. Pearl's story is told in detail on page 2 today by Sheilah Toomey, Associated Press writer. Trio started classes at Tongue Point Center.

WITH THE administration building and dormitories of Tongue Point as background Donna Charles (left) checks coiffure in compact held by her sister, Patricia. There are five other sister sets among first 59 recruits.

Tongue Point Gains Feminine Look

By MILLY WOHLER

Organized activities [illegible] the first 59 recruits [illegible] Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women settled [illegible] into routines of work and study when [illegible] to [illegible] Set [illegible] weather.

Virgil Savage, religious coordinator, eating lunch with the girls in the dining room, took the brunt of the good-natured moaning about "his" rain.

Like most of the staff who worked at Tongue Point when it was an urban center for men, Savage was still adjusting to the contrast in attitude of the corpswomen.

"Principally I notice the lack of hostility. From the very first the girls speak when they see you. There's a responsiveness and desire to be friendly."

Most of the girls confessed homesickness.

Carol Weaver, 19, San Bernardino, Calif., admitted, "I was homesick for the first week. Now I'm not. I've had a cold ever since I've been here but I've gained seven pounds in two weeks."

Savage commented, "The boys wouldn't say they were homesick. But then they'd lock themselves in their rooms and you'd hear them sobbing as you walked down the hall."

Diet Plates Faced

Although rail-thin Carol was pleased about her weight gain, many of the girls were facing diet plates for luncheon. A [illegible] number of [illegible] when

Most of the [illegible] had received [illegible] from Mrs. Doris Alexander, Portland charm consultant, who is at the Center two nights each week.

"She's teaching us the perfect way to walk and how to hold your head up," Carol explained. "And a lot of them she put on diets."

Bouncy Sonja Carlstrom, 19, Tacoma, Wash., decided she'd have to work gradually into the diet bit.

"She told me I'd have to lose 70 pounds. Why there wouldn't be a thing left of me," Sonja worried.

Sonja's ebullient attitude didn't quite hide a certain steely determination.

"I graduated from high school. I've been out two years on my own and it's going to be a little hard being fenced in again. But I've never stuck to anything. Now I'm going to. I'll have something when I get out of here."

Sonja's goal is in the drafting field, specifically aero-space drafting.

Drafting is one of five main vocational areas in which girls will be trained at Tongue Point.

Others are health and social service programs, with specialties in nurses aide, child day care and teacher-librarian aide areas; business and clerical, from clerk through secretary according to ability; food services, with a range of commercial and institutional applications; and electronics assembly and testing courses.

"There's only two in our drafting class now. We'd better get some more or we're going to drive that poor teacher crazy," Sonja commented.

More recruits arrived Tuesday and Wednesday—bringing the corpswomen population up to almost 200—nearly a third of the 650 to be admitted by June.

Meanwhile the painting and repairing continued.

"It's really no more than what a landlord does when one tenant moves out and other moves in," explained Dr. W. L. Van Loan, center director.

Another staff member added, "We're just putting doors on the bathrooms and painting."

Blue Tablecloths

Another innovation was pointed out admiringly by the religious coordinator, Savage. Blue, turquoise and rose tablecloths in the dining room, with centerpieces of gay artificial flowers.

"They also painted the pillars in pastel colors. Before they blended into the wall and people kept crashing into them."

Most of the drafting and electronic equipment was retained from the men's program and training tools for the other three vocational fields are being added.

The first 59 girls came from California, Arizona, Washington, Hawaii, Alaska, Nevada and Oregon. Of these 39 were Caucasian, nine Negro and 11 Oriental, Indian or other

A small part of the more than $5.7 million rehabilitation and operation budget for the first 18 months of the Women's Center will go toward added recreational facilities.

Continued Page 2, Col. 2

Continued From Page 1

"The intention is to keep the girls on the grounds more than we did the boys," Dr. Van Loan explained.

Planned are bowling, skating, volleyball and the existing pool, chess and table games.

60 Boys Come

There's already been a party. Sixty boys from the Tillamook Conservation Center came for a dance and program the last Saturday of orientation. Party dresses, hairdos and manners were donned for the event which was labeled by one corpswoman—"a smash."

Until the Tongue Point Center converted to a woman's facility, Los Angeles had the only Job Corps Center for Women in the West. The California Center has a capacity of 340 persons, about half of that slated for the former U.S. Naval Air Station.

The Women's Center is being operated, as was the Men's Job Corps, by University of Oregon under contract to the Office of Economic Opportunity, with Philco-Ford Corporation as sub-contractor for vocational training.

Many of the girls, almost half, are high school graduates. However, all qualify for training in being unable to find or hold an adequate job, being underprivileged from having grown up in impoverished surroundings, or needing a change of environment to become productive citizens.

The Charles sisters, Patricia, 17, and Donna, 19, of Port Angeles, Wash., are sisters of Kenneth Charles, the first man to arrive at Tongue Point in February, 1965. He was also the first Job corpsman to be drafted. After service in Vietnam, Kenneth is stationed at Fort Lewis.

Neither of the Charles girls went to high school. Both are aiming at jobs in the food services field, preferable short-order cook.

Hortensia Navar, 19, Los Angeles, graduated from high school but with six brothers and five sisters at home there was no money for the secretarial training she desired.

Soft-spoken Hortensia is lonesome for her nine younger brothers and sisters, but realistic.

"This was the only way for me. You know, to get a job and make more money. A better life."

Trainee Outlines Personal Goals

By SHEILAH TOOMEY
Associated Press Writer

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP)—Her 3½-year-old daughter in Bakersfield, Calif., is a good reason why the Job Corps may work for a 19-year-old mother.

Pearl Haygood is at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria because, "I just knew I had to go someplace to learn something."

"In my family they go from one job to the next. That's not good," Pearl said.

Pearl is lively and pretty. She is direct, confident, and expressive. Her daughter Stephanie is now with friends in Bakersfield.

A number of corpswomen have children. Some have husbands, some don't.

'Ten At Home'

Pearl talks of designing clothes, but she also speaks of working in a clothes factory. To her, they're the same thing.

Does she have brothers and sisters? "Whew!" she says, waving a hand in the air. "Ten—all at home.

"Three bedrooms. The girls on one side, the boys on the other.

"My father—my stepfather—supports the whole family. He lives about a block away. The kids—they drive him crazy."

She doesn't want a large family like her mother, but on the other hand, Pearl is pleasantly pessimistic.

"Big families run in my family. My sister has five, she was married when she was 13. My brother had two and another sister has three. They all live at home."

During orientation, Pearl will get a corpswomen's handbook. It says.

"These pages contain suggestions, information, and guidelines for group living."

Group Living Experienced

There is little doubt Pearl already has experienced group living.

Did she graduate from high school? "Three months before graduation they 'let me go,'" Pearl says pointing to herself. "Straight As in sewing and PE I got too."

Should Pearl change her mind about dressmaking, she can choose from classes in nursing, electronics assembly, printing, food service, child care, teacher-librarian assistance and business machines.

How will she raise her daughter?

"Hard," she said. "I mean I'm going to keep her in church, none of that playing sick and ditching school. I'm going to keep her in clothes so she can't quit school, and I'm going to keep her bank account up."

"You want to see what they gave us to wear?" Pearl says with glee as she held up a faded denim skirt, grey sweatshirt and navy cotton slacks. "You like it? You can have it!" she laughs.

Within the first month, each corpswoman gets $35 to spend on clothes in Astoria. Most will buy date and church clothes.

"No miniskirts," Pearl says. "They show too much."

Pearl likes the food. "Just like at home."

Pearl says she loves the Job Corps, and would like to stay at Tongue Point forever, but adds, "One year is enough. My baby needs me."

LIQUOR, GAMBLING, DRUG CHARGES FACE UPWARD BOUND GROUP

10 Mt. Angel College Students Arrested

By BOB EVANS
Capital Journal Reporter

MT. ANGEL — [illegible] Mt. Angel College [illegible] were arrested Friday on charges of [illegible] liquor, gambling and drug violations.

Police said the students, according to the Silverton Appeal-Tribune, showed them "overwhelmingly unwilling to continuing the pro[illegible]

[illegible] was no report on the suggestions, but some students have said they think the program is too large for Mt. Angel College which has 380 students.

[illegible] persons are expected [illegible] the program not be [illegible] Upward Bound [illegible] 50 percent financial [illegible] next year.

Some Angela Dieker, the [illegible] program with six faculty members and two teen-aged [illegible] the program next year.

[illegible] the eight-month Upward Bound program, said today that [illegible] not sure what effect, if any, the arrests will have on the program.

He said: "We cooperate completely with the police department [illegible] and we feel that the program [illegible] are that the students get every [illegible] which they're entitled.

He said that Upward Bound [illegible] to give young people [illegible] educational [illegible]

[illegible] have been coming [illegible] was expected. Some [illegible] students were referred to Mt. Angel from MacLaren School for Boys, Hillcrest School for Girls and the Tongue Point Job Corps.

"We take the kids because [illegible] make it," Williams said.

Tom Ball, 20, Charleston, S.C., making liquor available to a minor.

Charles William Ray Jr., 20, [illegible] making liquor available to a minor.

[illegible] said the charges in[illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] a red [illegible] [illegible] campus. The gambling charges involve dice.

Taylor said more arrests would be made this afternoon. He declined to say how many.

The investigation of a [illegible] came to the Upward Bound program April 1 when [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] making available to [illegible] person a dangerous drug.

The 17-year-olds are charged, respectively, with being a minor in possession of liquor, making [illegible] and being a minor [illegible] tampering with an auto.

The Statesman
Oregon
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1868

Charges Out of Proportion, Says Upward Bound Official

(Story also on page 1.)

MOUNT ANGEL — All youths [illegible] arrested Friday as the result [illegible] of activities of an undercover [illegible] agent here were free on bail [illegible] to be turned over to the [illegible] [illegible] of Mount Angel College [illegible] officials.

All had been cited to Mount Angel Municipal Court except Donna June Detrick, 18, Portland, who was apprehended on a Marion County District Court warrant charging her with possession and giving to another a dangerous drug (LSD). She was free on $100 bail Friday night.

Lesser Charges Made

The others, all arrested on lesser charges involving liquor and gambling were:

Tom Ball, 20, Charleston, S.C., making liquor available to a minor, bail $100.

Robert Kemp, 18, Sillsbee, Tex., gambling, bail $50.

Robert Schoppert, 19, Juneau, Alaska, making liquor available to a minor, bail $100.

James Hererra, 21, Denver, Colo., gambling, bail $50.

Brent Graham, 18, Proctorville, N.C., minor in possession of liquor, and gambling, $100 bail.

Charles Ray Jr., 20, Cleveland, Ohio, minor in possession, and gambling, $100 bail.

James Allen, 22, 830 S. Water St., Silverton, making liquor available to a minor; pleaded guilty and fined $50.

Marie Beasley, 19, Mount Angel, minor in possession of liquor, $50 bail.

Julie Goodfellow, 20, Mount Angel, minor in possession of liquor.

Four juveniles, one on a charge of making liquor available to a minor, two minors in possession of liquor, and one attempting to break into an automobile.

Allen and Miss Beasley are not students.

In Upward Bound

All except Allen and Miss Beasley were identified as students in Mount Angel's Upward Bound program.

The Upward Bound program began here in January for 60 students, including transfers from the Job Corps Center at Tongue Point, from MacLaren School for Boys and Hillcrest School for Girls.

Lane Williams, co-director with Miss Pearson for the program said the charges, except for the LSD, "seemed quite a bit out of proportion."

Sees Little Unusual

"Of course we will cooperate with the police," he said, but added that the involvements were about the same you might expect to find on any college campus.

Chief Taylor said the gambling charges involved dice games with "about $10 to $20 dollars." The liquor charges involved beer, he said

The LSD charge resulted in supplying of the drug by Miss Detrick to Officer James Brookes Sunday, Taylor said. He added that a crime laboratory analysis showed it be lysergic acid (LSD). A so-called mind expanding drug.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1868

Tongue Point Center Defended at Forum

By JENNY WILLIS
Of the Register-Guard

Has the Tongue Point Job Corps center, at Astoria, been a success? Are the results worth the expense?

We asked the Tongue Point center under investigation by Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) and a number of others.

The answer, from one who has a job at the center, was an unqualified "yes" to both questions.

Paul Jacobson, dean of instruction at the University of Oregon School of Business and Economics, is on leave to help the Job Corps get off to a full-scale operation. He says staff members at Tongue Point had an 8 a month "on the job" training session to help them prepare for counseling the corpsmen.

(Tongue Point, which began operations as an experiment in training center for men ages 16 to 21, was converted to a conservation center in 1965.)

Jacobson said that the center is beginning to get more than 1 per cent of the trainees from the Job Corps' educational program. Jacobson said.

Once these initial problems are met, Jacobson said, the center should begin running smoothly.

Minor thievery became a problem early in the program, he said, but this has been eliminated by the group [illegible] and peer pressure.

Jacobson stressed that the center is not a "correctional institution" and that the trainees are free to leave at any time.

Jacobson said the center's educational program is designed to help the trainees develop their own potentials and not to "make them over."

Screening failures accounted

Why So High

Representative Edith Green, never a friend of the Job Corps, is more distressed than ever. She asked the General Accounting Office for an audit of the operation at Tongue Point. GAO reported that the cost per enrollee was $15,000 a year. That, she thinks, is too much.

So it is, if true. However, auditors, with their mysterious ways, can come up with all sorts of answers from the same set of apparent facts. An audit re-

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
APR 17 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1868

99 Girls Join Job Trainees

ASTORIA — Tongue Point Job Corps center is 99 more trainees hanging total enrollment to 200 girls.

A party of [illegible] arrived in the Pacific Coast states arrived from San Francisco; another 23 from the Gulf Coast states came from Austin.

Orientation sessions for the new trainees will continue two weeks.

The Oregonian
APR 14 1967

Tongue Point's Roster Climbs

ASTORIA (Special) — Enrollment at Tongue Point women's Job [illegible]

[illegible] day.

Previous arrivals all are embarked on their regular training programs, Tongue Point officials said. Some issued are still short of new equipment that is on order.

Fewer than 10 girls have left the new women's center. Since its start a month ago officials said. Of those who left, a few departed because they had scruples against undergoing the physical examination required on entrance

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)
APR 18 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1868

[illegible] quested by the Office of Economic Opportunity might show a different cost figure. And, as Mrs. Green admits, the audit included the estimated cost of the Tongue Point installation. That's like buying a new house and, at the end of the year, figuring in the value of the house as part of the year's living expenses.

The Daily Astorian, much interested in Tongue Point, defends the center's administration and also the University of Oregon, which is in overall charge. The GAO audit showed the center with a ratio of two boys for one employe, which seems outrageous. The optimum is 3-to-1, which also seems high. The university staffed the place for 1,200 boys. But 700 was the largest enrollment it ever had at one time. That was not the university's fault.

Faulty screening in the early months of the program resulted in an excessive turnover. It was, and probably still is, too easy for a boy to join the Job Corps for a free plane trip across the country and then when home, knows sets in to get another free ride home.

The fault again lies in Washington where the OEO's director Sargent Shriver, is fighting to keep the OEO alive. Some congressmen want to turn its functions over to traditional agencies with better records of management. Needed now is an audit, by the GAO or somebody else, covering the last few months of the Job Corps. If management remains as sloppy as it was over the first two years, heads should roll, starting at the top.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
APR 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1868

Job Corps To Join in Spring Show

The annual spring opening and show [illegible] this year will be a gala affair involving both the conservation and Tongue Point Job Corps center [illegible] plans [illegible] the center [illegible] Wednesday in [illegible]

The two-day [illegible] open at the main building at the center [illegible] April 28 [illegible] women will be [illegible] than [illegible] dresses signed [illegible]

Adrienne Satter and Mrs. Robert [illegible] center's Community [illegible] are [illegible] planning.

Mrs. Orville Alexander, Portland [illegible] will be narrator for modeling. Mrs. Jeanne Macklot [illegible] will narrate the [illegible] while [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] as accompanist.

[illegible] be made [illegible] Job Corps [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Macklot [illegible] Conservation [illegible] Director [illegible] were [illegible] Advisory [illegible] Vocational [illegible] Bookery [illegible] Santa Anna Beach Stitch and Sew, Newberg [illegible]

Port Angeles, Wash.
News
(Cir D 7,280)
APR 5 1967
Allen's PCB Est 1888

Small daughter plays role in Job Corps

By SHEILAH TOOMEY
Associated Press Writer

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — Her 3½-year-old daughter in Bakersfield, Calif., is a good reason why the Job Corps may work for a 19-year-old mother.

Pearl Haygood is at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria because, "I just knew I had to go someplace to learn something."

"In my family they go from one job to the next. That's not good," Pearl said.

Pearl is one of 56 recruits who arrived at Tongue Point in mid-March. The center was opened in February of 1965 for men, but last Jan. 20, when it was announced it would be converted to a training site for women, 2,300 men had been assigned to the center.

About 100 more women will arrive next week from the San Francisco and Austin, Texas, areas. Officials expect 650 women by June.

Of the first group, 24 were from California, 16 from Arizona, 8 from Washington and the rest were from Oregon, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii.

Pearl is lively and pretty. She is direct, confident, and expressive. Her daughter Stephanie is now with friends in Bakersfield.

A number of corpswomen have children. Some have husbands, some don't.

Pearl talks of designing clothes, but she also speaks of working in a clothes factory. To her, they're the same thing.

Does she have brothers and sisters? "Whew!" she says, waving a hand in the air. "Ten — all at home."

"Three bedrooms. The girls on one side, the boys on the other."

"My father — my stepfather — supports the whole family. He lives about a block away. The kids — they drive him crazy."

She doesn't want a large family like her mother, but on the other hand, Pearl is pleasantly pessimistic.

"Big families run in my family. My sister has five, she was married when she was 13. My brother had two and another sister has three. They all live at home."

During orientation, Pearl will get a corpswomen's handbook. It says:

"These pages contain suggestions, information, and guidelines for group living."

There is little doubt Pearl already has experienced group living.

Did she graduate from high school? "Three months before graduation, they let me go," Pearl says pointing to herself.

"Straight As in sewing and PE I got too."

Should Pearl change her mind about dressmaking, she can choose from classes in nursing, electronics assembly, printing, food service, child care, teacher-librarian assistance and business machines.

How will she raise her daughter?

"Hard," she said. "I mean I'm going to keep her in church, none of that playing sick and ditching school. I'm going to keep her in clothes so she can't quit school, and I'm going to keep her bank account up."

The dormitory at Tongue Point echos with excited voices and blaring music. The bedrooms are immaculate.

Curtains and bedspreads match in yellow, blue, green or pink. Fresh bouquets of daffodils stand on each dressing table — gifts from the staff.

"You want to see what they gave us to wear?" Pearl says with glee as she holds up a faded denim skirt, grey sweatshirt and navy cotton slacks. "You like it? You can have it!" she laughs.

Within the first month, each corpswoman gets $35 to spend on clothes in Astoria. Most will buy date and church clothes.

"No miniskirts," Pearl says. "They show too much."

The Job Corps knows a new outfit can build a girl's confidence. They will give instruction in color, style, fit, make-up and posture. They will even learn how to make those denim skirts fashionable.

During orientation, a hairdo contest will be held. Advisers will discuss why the prettiest hairdo is not always the best.

Pearl likes the food. "Just like at home."

The large dining room, once a wartime mess hall when Tongue Point was a naval base, is decidedly feminine now. Blue, green, pink and yellow tablecloths and bouquets of artificial flowers decorate each long table. Flowered curtains line each window.

Pearl says she loves the Job Corps, and would like to stay at Tongue Point forever, but adds, "One year is enough. My baby needs me."

A Robert Smith Says

Rep. Green Says Tongue Point Per-pupil Costs 'Outrageous'

WASHINGTON (Special) — computed and criticized as "outrageous."

The total cost to the federal government of the Tongue Point Job Corps training center during its first two years of operation, averaged nearly $15,000 per enrollee — per year — a figure Rep. Edith Green said the grand total of costs from Dec. 1, 1964 through Dec. 31, 1966 came to $14,796,000.

This total included an item of $2,900 for [illegible] As the value of the [illegible] Tongue Point was not actual expenditures, Mrs. Green added the figure because the [illegible] if vessels had [illegible] buy the land for that amount was turned down by the Kennedy Administration due to [illegible] from Sen. Wayne Morse, who argued that it [illegible] some federal agency.

GAO reported that the grand total [illegible] $11,185,700 in operating costs, $1,[illegible] in acquisition and repairing the base for its new purpose, and $525,[illegible] for supplies.

[illegible] confronting view that [illegible] outrageous cost in terms of each enrollee," declared Rep. Green.

Mrs. Green recalled that government officials had previously estimated that the cost per enrollee at Tongue Point was $13,000 in 1966, whereas the national average for all Job Corps centers for boys was $9,100 and for girls $7,400.

The problem with computing the average cost per enrollee is that the number of young men at Tongue Point during the center's [illegible] varied. GAO noted that there were 380 trainees on board at the end of this period originally planned to accomodate 1200, the center's enrollment leveled off at something less than half this total.

Asked how she thought the costs at Tongue Point could be reduced, Mrs. Green said the center was never used to its full capacity and the staff was too large for the number of trainees, the GAO report noted that the center had 295 employes to serve 48 trainees at the end of the 2-year period.

Mrs. Green said Puget Sound, the subcontractor who handled vocational training under University of Oregon management of the center, was paid a fixed fee of $420,[illegible] during the first 18-month period for providing training for [illegible] that half the number of trainees it had contracted to train. She said this was not [illegible]'s fault, but that the contract should have been renegotiated when it was apparent the enrollment would not meet initial expectations.

Noting that Sen. Morse has recently been defending the costs at Tongue Point, Mrs. Green said [illegible] in sympathy for those who rationalize an [illegible] amount of funds [illegible] such costs simply because [illegible] are engaged in the noble effort to fight poverty. The money ought not to go to the middleman but to the people for whom the program was intended."

She reiterated her objection to the Job Corps' failure to evaluate its training in terms of results to "find out how well these youngsters are prepared to hold down a job."

She said the program is "too much based on the opportunity theory," in the [illegible] and fails to impart self-discipline and motivation, "which are woefully lacking in an awful lot of Job Corps trainees."

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Eugene, Oregon
Univ. of Ore. Emerald

Green Criticizes Tongue Point

[illegible] value re[illegible]

OREGON

Allen's

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU

PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco Los Angeles

Daily Oregon
Enterprise
Circ. 5,525

APR 1967

"down the drain"

With

Mary Ellen Bendele

Being exposed to sports encounters one on all sides living college and high school age sons this is how one not naturally described a fall in Rickey's garden

It all happened one dark night when I stopped out in back to get my mop bucket I didn't realize Rick had dug a four foot bear pit somewhere the sun went down Anyway there I lay sprawled in the DUGOUT It wasn't the kind of PIT STOP I care to make again Anyway I HIT THE DIRT instead of POLE VAULTING his string fence After the WINDUP I stood on my feet in the PITCH darkness Heading back to the house in less than 10 YRDS I made my FIRST DOWN After all I made a BASKET at the same time—my laundry basket As I entered the carport, I'd forgotten about the clothesline and CHINNED myself like no Olympic star has ever done

When I finally entered the house and caught a glance of my bruised self in the mirror Well, I knew I'd been through a lot and I was still a good SPORT about it Only thing is that sight in the mirror' Now that was the MOMENT OF TRUTH

□ □

Anyone with a large family knows why the price of ivory stays up Looking at our dentist bills I'd say it's the cost of excavation And then I'd like to wring the neck of that guy who started the jogging bit It hurts my soul.

□ □

Judging from what I've heard about Tongue Point seems to me the smart thing is to encourage your kids to be dropouts Then they can go back to school at government expense and the government spends $15,000 a year on them Now if that's what the government figures it costs to educate one dropout one year??? Well how come we only get $600 exemption for the ones we keep at home and feed and clothe and educate in our public schools??? Let 'em give me the $15,000 next year I'll show them how to feed, educate clothe, job train nine kids and buy myself a new car to boot (I'd note Only bureaucrats and politicians are allowed this gravy We taxpayers are only allowed to pay the bills)

There is good news from the Supreme Court They upheld the conviction of two SMUT dealers and have put teeth into the anti smut law at least Some of the publications put out by those convicted wasn't just off color you'd have to say Paint It Sewer Decent people are glad that at last there is hope of cleaning up the POISON some people have been sending their children through the mail

□ □

While John was gone a gentle man came in to see John about butchering a beef He's in Fiji right now, I answered.

Dang! said the man 'Dang if he won't go anywhere to kill a beef'

99 More Girls At Tongue Point

Ninety-nine more girl trainees arrived at Tongue Point Job Corps Center this week, bringing the total enrollment to 260

A party of 76 recruited in the Pacific coast states arrived Tuesday night from San Francisco assembly center Another 23 from the Gulf coast states arrived from the Austin, Tex., assembly center Wednesday night

Orientation sessions for the new arrivals began Thursday morning, to continue two weeks

Previous arrivals all have begun their training programs, although equipment is still being awaited in some departments

Fewer than 10 of the Job Corpswomen assigned to Tongue Point have gone home, officials there said Thursday. Some of these went home because they had scruples against undergoing the physical examinations required upon entrance, officials report d.

'Outrageous Costs'

776

The high cost of fighting poverty popped up in the news this week when Oregon Representative Edith Green blasted the amount of funds it is taking to operate the Tongue Point Job Corps Training Center in Astoria.

Mrs. Green reported that she had an audit report made by the U. S. General Accounting Office (GAO) to find out what the actual cost was at Tongue Point during the first two years of operation. Much to her surprise, and we imagine the surprise of some other officials in the federal government, GAO came up with the figure of $14,796,000 for operating costs during the first two years. Breaking this down as an average per enrollee, the figure comes to nearly $15,000 per enrollee per year, an amount Mrs. Green termed "outrageous" and a figure we would term likewise.

Mrs. Green has been something less than impressed with the Tongue Point operation since its beginning. She has steadily maintained costs are out of line and we believe this time she has pretty well proven her point. Even when comparing the Tongue Point operation with others throughout the nation it is far out of line. Mrs. Green noted the national average for all Job Corps centers for boys was $9,100 and for girls $8,400. Even these figures are outrageous in our opinion.

Undoubtedly the biggest problem at Tongue Point has been the fact that it has never been utilized to capacity. Originally planned to accommodate 1,200, the enrollment ran between 480 and around 600. However, the staff operating the center remained pretty much at full capacity. The GAO report pointed out that at one time there were 395 employees to serve only 480 trainees, or almost one employee for each enrollee. Now that the center is being switched from a boys to a girls center even more expenses will be incurred.

Surely this is a ridiculous and ultra expensive program to try to aid those people in this country we call poverty stricken. As Congresswoman Green said when she noted Senator Morse recently defended the costs at Tongue Point, "I have no sympathy for those who rationalize . . . loose management of funds or extremely high costs simply because you are engaged in the noble effort to fight poverty. The money ought not to go to the middleman but to the people for whom the program was intended."

Surely Mrs. Green's observations and the GAO report she had completed on the Tongue Point Job Corps Center points out some definite problems that are found in the current war on poverty operation. In almost all of the poverty programs costs are running extremely high and the true value of the programs are not being determined. All of the talk now seems to point toward the fact that "look at all the fine things we are offering the poor folks." We can offer solutions until the end of the world, but if they are not effective then why beat our heads against the wall and pour money down the rat hole? Let's reconsider and see if there are some ways the programs can be tightened up, combined or eliminated whatever the case may be.

If there is as much fat in the operation of other Job Corps centers as there has been at Tongue Point, think of the millions of dollars of tax money being wasted. It would appear to us that the entire fight on poverty could use a little closer look and more wide-awake legislators like Mrs. Green will bring this about. — lrz

Allen's P.C.B.

Women's Job Corps Taking Application For Tongue Point

776

Women's Job Corps has taken over the Tongue Point Center (near Astoria) which was formerly operated for men. This is very much an Oregon product. Senator Wayne Morse was strongly involved in having Tongue Point used by the Job Corps and Rep Edith Green was equally insistant that women must be given opportunity. The facility will care for the educational needs of 650 young women, it opened in March with 50 corpswomen, but wants to fill the program by the end of June.

The Tongue Point Center will offer the usual classes which prepare those who have not graduated from high school to take the G.E.D. equivalency tests. Everyone has classes in home and family living, in physical education and health and optional courses in music and art.

An interesting new vocational course is offered — electronics for women — involving the skills needed for work on an assembly line operation. A second vocational course covers health services — training in child care, and licensed practical nursing. There are courses in drafting, and a complete business and clerical coverage including typing, filing and stenography. To be added within two months is the culinary and food service department. This will prepare enrollees for better restaurant work.

Job Corps is open to young women from 16 to 21 years of age, from low income families who need additional education, vocational training and a new start in the business of living.

Applications are accepted and processed by the Women in Community Service (WICS) Their office near Salem at 247 Commercial St. NE, said office hours are from 10 00 a m to 5 p.m. Mrs. William Bernert, project director.

Spokane, Wash.
Spokesman-Review
(Cir. 89,909 - Sun. 131,331)

APR 13 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Cost Proved Fantastic

776

Congresswoman Edith Green has performed a public service in securing an official audit report on a poverty war Job Corps installation in her home state of Oregon

The U.S. General Accounting Office made the audit report which indicated that the Tongue Point Job Corps training center cost the American taxpayers $14 976,000 from Dec. 15, 1964 through Dec 31, 1965 for the training of 480 students

This old Navy base cost something to convert for Job Corps purposes But Mrs Green has stated that her estimate of $13,000 cost per enrollee for 1965 did not include the acquisition cost of the camp and was still $4,000 higher than the national average for Job Corps costs.

The fantastic figures recently released by the GAO show that the training center had 395 staff employes to serve only 480 students It was operated under the management of the University of Oregon, which had let subcontracts for vocational training of job corpsment to the Phileo Ford company. During recent months the training center has been undergoing a conversion to provide facilities for women members of the Job Corps

The Tongue Point installation may not represent a typical case in the over-all federal poverty program. But the verified accounting would hardly have been made public without the requests and the probing of the Oregon congresswoman. As a member of the House Education and Labor Committee she has been a persistent inquirer into the claimed successes of the so-called war on poverty

The fantastic figures that have now come to light show the need for the kind of full-scale probing that the committee's former chairman, Adam Clayton Powell, prevented during the last few years.

Spokane, Wash.
Spokesman-Review
(Cir. 89,909 - Sun. 131,331)

APR 13 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

It Does Seem Unnecessarily Elaborate

'Too High' Says Green On T. Point

$15,000, rather than $7,5000 is a closer price tag for the schooling per pupil at Tongue Point in the Job Corps program, according to Rep. Edith Green.

She quoted this figure from an audit report made at her request by the U.S. General Accounting office, which estimated the total costs from Dec. 1964 through Dec., 31, 1966 as $14,786,000 for the training of 480 enrollees. This figure includes an amount of $920,000 cost figure for the base itself.

According to the report, the center had 395 staff employees to serve 480 students.

In summing up her viewpoint, Rep. Green is quoted as saying the costs of the Job Corps Center were "outrageous" in terms of money spent for the value received.

Tuesday was arrival day for 100 Job Corps girls, and 100 more are expected about April 25th. Buildup of the number of girls is expected to reach 850. Sixty young women arrived March 14 and 108 on March 28-29.

The girls have visited Astoria with little fanfare and most of the citizens were not aware that they were newcomers here.

Compton Calif
Westside Herald American
Cir. 24,000 - Sun.

APR 27 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Drive Goal 1250 Recruits

U.S.; unemployed and not attending school.

Persons enrolling in the program will receive a minimum ... a month during their ... training period ... post families ... allowances ...

... health services, graphic arts, recreation, and various electronics technician occupations

Interested young men and women may contact the California ... service ... with training and employment ... in East Los Angeles ... South Central Los Angeles or the Willowbrook area, and the local office of OEO at 868-5970

Women interested in the Job ... 654 ... Los Angeles ... 688-5970

OEO director reveals recruitment drive

776

Seeks 1250 Job corps sign-ups by June to fill openings

By City News Service

Drive to recruit 1250 out-of-work and out-of-school young men and women in Los Angeles county for the Job corps by June was announced recently ... M. Luevano, regional director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

"Openings exist for 1000 boys ... and 250 girls at 30 Job corps ... centers in the seven western ... states, he said.

A voluntary, national residential training program, the Job corps prepares underpri... permanent residents of ... U.S., unemployed ... tending school.

Persons enrolling in the pro... will receive a minimum ... training period ... post families ... allowances ...

To qualify for the Job corps, prospective enrollees must be 16-21 years old, citizens ... permanent residents of ... Angeles ... work ... and clerical ... demic training needed for permanent employment.

... ral conducted ... Youth Training and Employment projects and the California State Employment service.

Urban centers for women at ... Oregon ...

Aberdeen, Wash.
World
(Cir. D 15,037)

1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 188

Rep. Green Scores Job Corps Costs

PORTLAND (AP) — Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., says a General Accounting Office audit shows that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green, in a telephone interview from her Washington home Sunday, said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee at nearly $15,000 in 1966, compared with $13,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $7,500 per trainee.

Mrs. Green said the total figure, $11,484,000, included $920,000 paid for the former Navy Base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were "outrageous in terms of money spent for value received."

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO report noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

Tongue Point was converted in December from a center for men to one that eventually will accommodate about 600 women.

Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, which is in charge of operating the center, declined to comment on Mrs. Green's criticism of costs.

"I have no comment on that," he said, "but the conversion of the center from a boys Job Corps to a girls Job Corps is progressing very satisfactorily."

OREGON STATE NEWS

Training Costs Hit High Mark

PORTLAND (AP) — Rep. the center from a boys Job Edith Green, D-Ore., says a Corps to a girls Job Corps is General Accounting Office audit progressing very satisfactorily. show that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green, in a telephone interview from her Washington home Sunday, said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee at nearly $15,000 in 1966, compared with $13,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $7,500 per trainee.

Mrs. Green said the total figure, $11,484,000, included $920,000 paid for the former Navy Base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were "outrageous in terms of money spent for value received."

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO report noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

Tongue Point was converted in December from a center for men to one that eventually will accommodate about 600 women.

Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, which is in charge of operating the center, declined to comment on Mrs. Green's criticism of costs.

"I have no comment on that," he said, "but the conversion of

Olds Named Head of Sweet Home Schools

Statesman News Service

SWEET HOME—Douglas V. Olds, who was director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Training Center for the University of Oregon for two years, will be the new superintendent of Sweet Home Schools, the board announced Thursday.

Olds, one-time superintendent at Jefferson, has been executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council since last October. He will assume his new duties here July 1.

A graduate of Willamette University, Olds also received his master of arts degree there in 1954 and was winner of the Booth Award.

Olds went from Jefferson to the post of vice-principal at Lincoln High School in Portland. Three years later he was elected superintendent at Forest Grove Union High, then became superintendent of Astoria schools. He was assistant superintendent at Springfield when he was chosen for the Job Corps assignment in Oct. 1964.

Astoria Bills Style Show

ASTORIA (Special) — Tongue Point Job Corps Center will join with the Merchants' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce in staging a spring style show April 28 in the Tongue Point Center Theater.

According to a chamber committee that met with Job Corps officials, more than 100 corpswoman have volunteered to model, usher, and decorate the stage.

Named Queen

Dorinda Daggett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daggett of this city, has been named junior prom queen at Oregon State university. Her father is associate director at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

To Appear on TV

Miss Juanita Pedemore and Miss Carmen Cooper [illegible] at the Job Corps center Tongue Point will [illegible] KOIN-TV Friday at Tomorrow at 8 a.m. to tell about the first community Job Corps center social event and [illegible] to be held at the center Friday, April 28. The two girls are participating on Dorothy Alexander of the administrative staff of the center, and show colleges to be modeled at the style show from Astoria merchants, and courtesy of the air transit in each and in recreation at Tongue Point. That evening they will appear on KATU-TV to tell a similar story.

Port Angeles, Wash.
News
(Cir. D. 7,280)

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Job Corps training is proving costly

PORTLAND (AP) — Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., says a General Accounting Office audit shows that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green, in a telephone interview from her Washington home Sunday, said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee at nearly $15,000 in 1966, compared with $13,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $7,500 per trainee.

Mrs. Green said the figures included $920,000 paid for the former Navy base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were "outrageous in terms of money spent for value received."

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO reported noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

The Chesapeake
Publishing Division

Allen's P.C.B. Est

450 War On Poverty Projects Bring Nearly $39 Million In Federal Funds To Oregon

By CHARLES F. BEGGS

[illegible] has gone to the Job Corps — $21 million.

Youth Corps Successful

[illegible] Youth Bound; [illegible] and it is op- [illegible] ting one of the first and [illegible] zest VISTA training cen- [illegible] try.

[illegible] University has [illegible] tion in federal [illegible] ral programs.

[illegible] Bound of [illegible] ipment of [illegible]

Oregon Fares Well In Poverty Projects

By CHARLES F. BEGGS

[illegible] a multitude of [illegible] fer centers for [illegible] rural workers, [illegible] training projects, [illegible] Upward Bound [illegible] even governor [illegible] and summer [illegible] gram under the [illegible] Youth Corps.

[illegible] It takes [illegible] as a population [illegible] basis alone, Oregon has done very well in attracting poverty funds. If the state, which has roughly 1 per cent of the nation's people, had shared only on that basis, it would have received about $21 million out of the $2.5 billion spent by the government for the poverty war. But for several reasons, Oregon's share was stepped that figure by 40 per cent.

Probably the major reason for this is that Oregon [illegible] stemming a long tradition of executive and legislative progressivism. The U. of O has [illegible] a poverty program [illegible] with more [illegible] in federal [illegible]

[illegible] of these, the Job Corps center at Tongue Point is [illegible] ...ning for 354 [illegible] school will open. [illegible] ...ecause [illegible] Job Corps contract [illegible] ...ack Jones, [illegible] ...ted [illegible] ...ton.

The [illegible] of O [illegible] In other [illegible] anti-poverty efforts [illegible] ...ege to be [illegible] ...of 18 cit- [illegible] ...costs have been [illegible] ...ge under- [illegible] ...Oregon [illegible] ...ministra- [illegible] ...ard. [illegible] ...college [illegible] ...ministra- [illegible] ...ce under [illegible] ...the first [illegible]

Other [illegible] include commu- [illegible] nity action programs $4.4 mil- [illegible] lion; Neighborhood Youth Corps $5 million; work expe- [illegible] rience projects $2 million; Head Start summer projects $2,000,000; VISTA $87,- [illegible] 000; Teacher Corps $220,000 and adult basic education pro- [illegible] grants $52,000.

These programs range from [illegible] a week [illegible] to the big Job Corps [illegible] Upward Bound [illegible] even governor [illegible] and summer [illegible] gram under the [illegible] Youth Corps.

[illegible] It takes [illegible] as a population [illegible] basis alone, Oregon has done very well in attracting poverty funds. If the state, which has roughly 1 per cent of the nation's people, had shared only on that basis, it would have received about $21 million out of the $2.5 billion spent by the government for the poverty war. But for several reasons, Oregon's share was stepped that figure by 40 per cent.

Probably the major reason for this is that Oregon [illegible] stemming a long tradition of executive and legislative progressivism. The U. of O has [illegible] a poverty program [illegible] with more [illegible] in federal [illegible]

[illegible] of these, the Job Corps center at Tongue Point is [illegible] ...ning for 354 [illegible] school will open. [illegible] ...ecause [illegible] Job Corps contract [illegible] ...ack Jones, [illegible] ...ted [illegible] ...ton.

The [illegible] of O [illegible] In other [illegible] anti-poverty efforts [illegible] ...ege to be [illegible] ...of 18 cit- [illegible] ...costs have been [illegible] ...ge under- [illegible] ...Oregon [illegible] ...ministra- [illegible] ...ard. [illegible] ...college [illegible] ...ministra- [illegible] ...ce under [illegible] ...the first [illegible]

Oregon basic education pro- [illegible] ...grams were [illegible] ...enrolled 10,[illegible] ...adults [illegible] ...a [illegible] ...of $[illegible].

Aberdeen, Wash.
World
(Cir. D. 17,037)

1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Rep. Green Scores Job Corps Costs

PORTLAND (AP) — Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., says a General Accounting Office audit shows that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green, in a telephone interview from her Washington home Sunday, said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee at nearly $15,000 in 1966, compared with $13,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $7,500 per trainee.

Mrs. Green said the total figure, $11,484,000, included $920,000 paid for the former Navy Base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were "outrageous in terms of money spent for value received."

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO report noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

Tongue Point was converted in December from a center for men to one that eventually will accommodate about 600 women.

Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, which is in charge of operating the center, declined to comment on Mrs. Green's criticism of costs.

"I have no comment on that," he said, "but the conversion of the center from a boys Job Corps to a girls Job Corps is progressing very satisfactorily."

OREGON STATE NEWS

Training Costs Hit High Mark

PORTLAND (AP) — Rep. Edith Green D-Ore., says a General Accounting Office audit shows that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green in a telephone interview from her Washington home Sunday, said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee at nearly $15,000 in 1966, compared with $13,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $7,500 per trainee.

Mrs. Green said the figures included $920,000 paid for the former Navy Base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were "outrageous in terms of money spent for value received."

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO report noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

Tongue Point was converted in December from a center for men to one that eventually will accommodate about 600 women.

Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, which is in charge of operating the center, declined to comment on Mrs. Green's criticism of costs.

"I have no comment on that," he said, "but the conversion of the center from a boys Job Corps to a girls Job Corps is progressing very satisfactorily."

the center from a boys Job Corps to a girls Job Corps is progressing very satisfactorily."

Olds Named Head of Sweet Home Schools

Statesman News Service

SWEET HOME, Douglas V. Olds has been named the new superintendent of Sweet Home Schools. The board of trustees announced [illegible] ends one [illegible] superintendent of Jefferson [illegible] The secretary of the Oregon School Stud[illegible] October. He will assume his new duties [illegible] July 1.

A graduate of Willamette University, Olds also received his master of arts degree there in 1961 and was named to the Board's Award.

Olds went from [illegible] to the post of [illegible] Three years [illegible] superintendent at Forest Grove Union High [illegible] superintendent of Astoria schools. He was [illegible] vice chairman for the Job Corps assignment in Oct. 1[illegible]

Astoria Bills Style Show

ASTORIA (Special) — Tongue Point Job Corps Center will join with the Merchants' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce in staging a spring style show April 28 in the Tongue Point Center Theater.

According to a chamber committee that met with Job Corps officials, more than 100 corpswomen have volunteered to model, usher, and decorate the stage.

Named Queen

Brenda Daggett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daggett of this city, has been named junior prom queen at Oregon State university. Her father is associate director at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

To Appear on TV

Miss Hanks, Polvadere and Miss Gerwick, Corpsmembers at the Job Corps center, Tongue Point will appear on KGW-TV Friday on Telescope at 8 a.m. to tell about the first community Job Corps center social event and style show to be held at the center Friday, April 28. The two girls accompanied by Doris Alexander of the administrative staff of the center, will show clothes to be modeled at the style show from Astoria [illegible] and pictures of the girl students at work and in recreation at Tongue Point. That evening they will appear on KATU-TV to tell a similar story.

Port Angeles, Wash.
News
(Cir. D. 7,280)

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Job Corps training is proving costly

PORTLAND (AP) — Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., says a General Accounting Office audit shows that the cost of training students at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria is double the maximum set by Congress.

Mrs. Green, in a telephone interview from her Washington home Sunday, said the GAO report estimated the cost per trainee at nearly $15,000 in 1966, compared with $13,000 in 1965.

She said Congress had set a ceiling of $7,500 per trainee.

Mrs. Green said the figures included $920,000 paid for the former Navy base.

She said the audit confirmed her view that the costs of the center were "outrageous in terms of money spent for value received."

She said the expenses of the center were too high and that it never has been used to capacity.

The GAO reported noted the center had 395 staff employes to serve 480 students.

The Oregonian
[illegible], Oregon

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

450 War On Poverty Projects Bring Nearly $39 Million In Federal Funds To Oregon

By CHARLES F. BEGGS
[illegible]

WASHINGTON (Special) — [illegible] during the four months underway at Tongue Point has been which has operated the conservation [illegible] been the Neighborhood Volunteers in service in Ore- programs have enr[illegible] [illegible] and another 157 appro[illegible]

[illegible] Board program, the largest [illegible] contributions for Statewide health programs and Head Start [illegible] Work Corps and another 157 appro[illegible] [illegible] at Subscamillon. The [illegible] will report [illegible] other [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Enterprise-Courier

PR 7- 1967

Job Corps Success Story Seen Here

[illegible] Class Study ABOUT The Job Corps is told a Dress City boy [illegible] by the Department o. Employment, Welfare Welfare] Lord corpsman and [illegible] (left), [illegible] shown on the left above with Job Trainee, [illegible] Service Center, [illegible] Center Wolfard, Dress City.

The story began in Los Angeles when [illegible] enrolled in the Job Corps. Later he was assigned to the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria. Head Start Is another at Tongue Point, combining basic academic education and vocational training classes.

Before graduating [illegible] was required to work in woods in "live-in" [illegible] camps with two weeks on-the-job training. At graduation time nearby, Job Corp in training [illegible] along with a group of other Tongue Point Corpsmen, Portland after the [illegible] by officials of the Ford Motor Co. [illegible] was chosen by Wood-Wolfard Ford Co. on Oct and apprentice mechanic.

Hank thanks the Job Corps for hope. He says Corpsmen receive valuable experience gained in the responsibilities of group living, competent instructors, and a chance to [illegible] employment after graduation. Job Trainee [illegible] service manager of Web Wolfard, [illegible] Hank also thank Hank as tops. "He is rated very highly around here," Francis [illegible], "he had excellent training, gets along well with all the fellows in the department and we made no mistake in hiring him."

The Department of Employment continues to recruit daily for Job Corp training through the Oregon City office both locally and by appointment at other locations in Clackamas County. Shown below is Job Corps recruiter, Mrs. Eleanor Smith, interviewing potential Job Corpsman, Rocky L. Poulson, Rt. 1, West Linn. Also Mrs. and Mrs. Roland Poulson, Mrs. Smith is glad to hear from anyone interested in talking about the Job Corps. She may be contacted at the Oregon City Department of Employment office, Monday through Friday.

APR 14 1967

Job Corps (WALDPORT) Job Corps Centers, such as Camp Angell near Waldport on the coast, teach low income youths good work habits and job skills and raise their educational level. U.S. Forest Service supervisor Fred Rekow teaches spray painting to Dick Wilson, 19, of California, and others in class at Camp Angell, is opened in 1965. (Statesman Photo)

Job Corps Helps Thousands of Boys

Oregon has seven Job Corps centers. Action last year were [illegible] with about $16 million in federal funds and were helping 2,431 young [illegible].

The centers are Tongue Point at Astoria, Timberline, Fort Vancouver at Grants Pass, Marbleyard center at Burns, Camp Angell at Yachats, Timber Lake center at Estacada and Wolf Creek center at Glide.

All were for men 16 through 21, but the Tongue Point center was changed early this year and has been converted to use by the Women's Job Corps.

[illegible] with about 400 out of school and unemployed girls recruited for the Job Corps by state employment offices. Women also 16-21 and out of school and unemployed are recruited by Women in Volunteer Service (WIVS). A toll-free [illegible] office at 247 Commercial St. NE, covers Marion and Polk Counties.

Funds to operate the centers come from the Office of Economic Opportunity. But administration is handled at the state and federal level.

In Oregon centers are operated run by the University of Oregon, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, Department of Interior, the U.S. Forest Service.

Total cost this fiscal year for the Oregon centers, including construction and in some cases the 1966-67 budgets, is about $30 million.

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,538)

APR 14 1967

ASTORIA (AP) — New arrivals totalling [illegible] enrollment at the Tongue Point women's Job Corps center to 160 this week. The [illegible] trainees began a two-week orientation program Thursday.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,970)

APR 17 1967

160 Reach Center

ASTORIA (AP) — New arrivals totalling 99 swelled enrollment at the Tongue Point women's Job Corps center to 160 this week. The new trainees began a two-week orientation program Thursday.

The World
Coos Bay, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,630)

Dr. Van Loan Reviews Job Corps For Soroptimists

Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the Job Corps training program at Tongue Point, addressed the Bay Area Soroptimists at their regular noon meeting Wednesday.

Dr. Van Loan stated that the Job Corps training has been successful and that the trainees who complete the instruction are well equipped to go out and take a useful place in society. He said that some of the trainees at the center came from family situations where there had never been a gainfully employed member for as many as three generations. One goal for the Job Corps program is to reverse this cycle of generational unemployment.

Dr. Lillian Van Loan, counselor at Roosevelt High School and [illegible] Van Loan's sister, [illegible] that he was [illegible] the [illegible] girls at Marshfield High School.

[illegible] program was presented by the Soroptimists that would foster [illegible] Corpsmen in the direction [illegible] Point [illegible] placed Tongue [illegible] in [illegible] Corpsmen [illegible] Their [illegible] were [illegible] with enthusiasm.

The [illegible] by club member as a benefit for the [illegible] project have been received from [illegible] industries of the Land Area [illegible] to aid the project by purchasing a good broom may contact any Soroptimist.

Labor Agency Official Visits Tongue Point

Mrs. M. [illegible] Hilton, deputy director of the women's bureau, US Department of Labor, was in Astoria Tuesday for an unofficial visit to Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Mrs. Hilton, a former Oregon resident, said that while the Labor department is not directly involved in the Job Corps program, it is indirectly interested because of the program's effect [illegible] nation's employment [illegible] many job [illegible] is open to the women completing training [illegible] offered at Tongue Point.

APR 20 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1898

"Too bad you're not a girl," says Dana Hodge, member of the Women's Job Corps at Tongue Point, to "Big Red", the horse left over from the Men's Job Corps training center. "We'd love to have you stay," she added. Big Red just doesn't know what this is all about, but he's liking the attention. See story.

Auditors Find Horse In Job Corps

The Tongue Point Job Corps Center managed to change over from a horse to a female school, but no way has yet been found for transferring a riding horse, serial No. 18546, from [illegible] now phased out men's center to the now phased in women's center.

A brown gelder with white tail, the $45 horse was the only balky feature in the switch from a young men's to a young women's institution. It was pasturing out in the Lewis and Clark district when government auditors recently discovered a horse missing in the inventory of the center's government property. The horse, which had been once considered the property of cowboy corpsmen, was purchased and turned over to the center a week or so ago to satisfy the auditors.

Since then the history of that particular government property, which was given a serial number by the auditors, has enlightened many people who now have a greater understanding of what the term, "government property" means to auditors.

Auditors traced the record back more than two years. New corpsmen had then talked of buying a horse with their own money and keep it off the reservation for their own recreation. The recreational advisor heard of their intentions and said why spend your own money because the government provided a recreation fund"

As a result the corpsmen purchased a $45 horse with recreation fund money and had it stabled on a John Day ranch owned by Dick Price. Price was an instructor in communication skills at the center. To save them paying for keep of the horse, the corpsmen took turns at doing a little work on the farm.

This happy arrangement which the horse loving corpsmen believed would last as long as their $45 animal was wrecked by the Washington highways [illegible] the west of the rural job center.

The young men didn't think much of that business and decided that they would dispose of the $45 horse instead of turning it over to the girls.

Thereupon they organized a lottery and Job Corpsman Louis Mendoza of Denver won the horse. He sold it back to the corpsmen for another lottery which Fonta Porter of Sunshine, La., won. He sold the horse to a farmer in the Lewis and Clark district.

Everyone forgot about the $45 horse at the center until government auditors began checking and asked, "Where is the government's $45 horse?"

By then the corpsmen were gone. Price stepped in to straighten the record after checking up and discovering that anything purchased with recreation funds was government property.

Price found Old Red happy and content. He bought it for $26.50 and paid $5 for trailer delivery from Price where it had always been kept for recreation.

The auditors said the government's horse would have to be on the government reservation and have a serial number just like everything else at Tongue Point.

Price put out $5 more for trailer delivery.

The horse was given serial number 18546.

At this point, the government horse problem on the government reservation became complicated. Price was happy not to be directly concerned. The horse had to be fed, but how was the hay to be ordered and paid for without a horse authorized for corpswomen instruction?

Not only that, but the horse had to get water and something with a serial number to drink it from.

An entire new element entered the horse picture. Those government people moved in who were born to deal with government red tape.

They proceeded to find a serial number on an old water tank. They ordered the water tank to be cut in two and had the half with serial number made into a horse trough. Garden hose water did for horse water.

These people may have to get a course started on horseback driving if no way is found to get the horse off the center as surplus property. There is talk of riding horses for the girls being provided at the center, but is 18546 to be cleared by the auditors?

In the meantime orientation instruction has been enlarged. New corpswomen will be instructed that anything that is purchased with recreation funds is government property.

Big Red is getting fat on red tape. He may be transferred to Tillamook soon as "Surplus" property to the Men's Job Corps Center there.

CAROLYN HOOPER, (left) and Juanita Poivadore pose in stylish new suits which they will model at the fashion show April 28 at 7:30 p.m. at the Tongue Point Theater which will also feature entertainment and a Spring Opening of styles in local stores. The event is open to the public. Juanita and Carolyn are Job Corps trainees.

The World
Coos Bay, Oregon
(Cir. D 13,630)

APR

Est 1898

Tongue Point Success Says Ex-SWOCC Head

"The men's project at Tongue Point was successful; it was expensive."

Former Coos Bay resident and first Southwestern Oregon Community president Wendell Van Loan thus summed up the government's Job Corps program at the converted Astoria naval air base in speaking at the [illegible] Coos Bay-North Bend Rotarian meeting.

[illegible] SWOCC president [illegible] Chamberlain [illegible] a [illegible] the Job Corps [illegible] rection. Another former Bay Area resident — Guy Shellenbarger, Marshfield High School principal for many years, [illegible] also from the U of O faculty assisted Van Loan.

Referring to actual per capita [illegible] figure recently published. He termed the latter "blown up through administrative expenditures at the Washington, D.C. level.

Observing that training costs would of necessity remain high until enrollment increased, Van Loan declared that [illegible] can get 50 per cent of the trainees on a self-sustaining basis [illegible] will support the program costs.

The speaker said that the Office of Economic Opportunity, under which the Tongue Point program is administered, now conducts job training programs for men, women, and operates conservation camps. Oregon received $26 million of which was allocated for Tongue Point. A total of 95,000 Oregonians [illegible] volved [illegible] the education [illegible] 2,253 Corpsmen [illegible] at Astoria. [illegible] program [illegible] cluded [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

CHARLES E. BEGGS

Oregon Draws $39 Million In Anti-Poverty Funds

(This is the first of two articles on the federal anti-poverty programs in Oregon by Charles E. Beggs, a Salem Capital Journal staff member who is studying on a fellowship at Washington Journalism Center.)

WASHINGTON (Special) — The federal government has invested nearly $39 million in anti-poverty funds in Oregon since the war on poverty was launched two and a half years ago.

Records at the U.S. Office of Opportunity, the federal poverty war headquarters, show that about 450 separate projects were financed through OEO grants through March 31 of this year.

These programs range from the very small the loans of a few hundred dollars each to individual farmers, to the big Job Corps Center at Tongue Point, which was operated for men for two years by the University of Oregon at a cost of about $14 million.

In between these extremes lie a multitude of efforts: day care centers for children of migrant workers, teacher training projects, college training for poor youths under the Upward Bound program, and even government subsidized summer employment for teen-agers under the Neighborhood Youth Corps programs.

If taken on a population basis alone, Oregon has done very well in attracting poverty funds. If the state which has roughly 1 per cent of the nation's people had shared only on this basis, grants would have totaled about $25 million out of the $2.5 billion spent by the government so far in the poverty war. But, for several reasons, Oregon's share outstripped that figure by 60 per cent.

Probably the major reason for this is one man, Arthur Flemmung, a long-time federal executive and currently president of the University of Oregon. The U of O has operated eight poverty programs financed with more than $15 million in federal funds.

Of these, the Job Corps center at Tongue Point has been the largest, accounting for $14 million. The school will operate the center for women's Job Corps under a $5.7 million contract through June, 1968. When opened in 1965 as a men's training center, Tongue Point was the first urban Corps center in the nation.

The U of O has pioneered in other national anti-poverty efforts. It was one of 18 colleges to begin training underprivileged youths for college under Upward Bound, and it is operating one of the first and largest VISTA training centers in the country.

Oregon State University has obtained $1 million in federal money for several programs, chiefly Upward Bound projects.

Another big recipient of anti-poverty money has been the Valley Migrant League, which has operated day care centers, health programs and other efforts for migrant families with nearly $2 million.

Of the $38,990,305 spent for Oregon anti-poverty programs through March 31, the largest share has gone to the Job Corps — $21 million.

Other totals include community action programs, $8.4 million; Neighborhood Youth Corps, $5 million; work experience projects $2.7 million; two Headstart summer programs, $708,000; VISTA, $497,000; rural loans, $222,000; and adult basic education programs, $92,000.

There is little doubt that those programs which have affected the greatest numbers of people have been judged the most successful, in Oregon as well as across the nation.

In Oregon the largest program in terms of participation has been the Neighborhood Youth Corps, in which youths are employed at community service, receiving wages from federal grants. About 8,800 Oregon young people have participated, out of a million nationally.

Next highest involvement comes in the work experience projects for poor persons of all ages: 3,878 Oregonians have enrolled out of a national total of 172,000.

Operation Headstart, a preschool training program for children of poor families, has operated classes for 2,883 Oregon children. The national figure is 1,128,000.

The Job Corps in Oregon, with one large urban center and six rural "conservation centers," has reached 1,143 persons and about 64,000 across the nation. The VISTA program, often labeled the domestic Peace Corps has 45 volunteers in service in Oregon and another 152 approved for service. The national totals are 3,032 volunteers in the field and 3,200 more approved.

Oregon basic education programs have enrolled 782 adults of a national total of 425,000.

While some poverty projects have had notable success, others have not. Criticism over handling of funds and high costs have been leveled at programs in Oregon and elsewhere, and the Johnson administration is attempting to remedy the complaints.

Secretary Of State Visits Mac For Club, Linfield Talks

Big Government Major Concern In This Area

SECRETARY OF STATE Clay Myers addressed the McMinnville Kiwanis club at the group's Wednesday noon meeting, following a morning talk to the Linfield college student body. Colcord Studio Photo

"All forms of unrestrained paternalism and collectivism were rejected by the voters in the United States in the 1966 election when we changed the complexion of the National Congress," stated Secretary of State Clay Myers in an address before the McMinnville Kiwanis club here Wednesday.

"Our major concern in this country is not big business or big labor, but big government," continued the state official. "The rugged individualism and self reliance necessary back in the early history of our country is still needed. Each individual must still be responsible to carry his own weight."

Myers indicated that it is a great challenge to be a member of the Oregon State Board of Control. "To run the 11 state buildings, such as the state penitentiary, which are under our control takes $75 million every biennium and the problem is to see that the cost doesn't go up."

The Secretary of State continued: "We don't like paternalism in Oregon. Our state has been a leader in fighting big government control. An example of big government is shown by the fact that I could send my son to Yale for four years for what the federal government spends every year for each girl at Tongue Point.

"People are upset with the fact that the federal government is trying to solve all our problems. We need state and local officials who will help us solve our problems at the local level — close to home. We've been putting more and more money into the same old problems without solving them.

"One of our greatest wastes of money is our welfare pro-

Continued On Page 4

Too Good to Last

The excellent behavior of Tongue Point Job Corps girls during their first month was just too good to last, it appears.

The breakout of several of them who marched part way to the Astoria police station, then called off the march and consented to go back to the center, is the first serious example of misconduct among the corpswomen. Let us hope that it will be the last for some time. Some of the offenders have left for home, voluntarily, and others may be sent home. Maybe this will show the others that this sort of conduct cannot be tolerated.

One incident of misbehavior is not enough to justify condemnation of all the girls at the center. Evidently this march downtown involved only a small minority of the total, and the majority of the corpswomen still are, on the evidence so far, interested seriously in making good careers for themselves.

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oregon
APR 2 1967

Job Corps Girls Protest March Is Called Off

ASTORIA (UPI) — About 25 girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps training center marched out of the gate toward city police headquarters Sunday night, but were talked out of it by Job Corps Authorities.

The march was in protest to detention of a 16 - year - old trainee in connection with an altercation that sent another trainee to the center infirmary.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,510)
APR 25 1967

Federal Government Invests About $39 Million In Oregon

Editor's note: This is the first of two articles on the federal anti-poverty programs in Oregon.

By CHARLES E. BEGGS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Total federal government investment in anti-poverty programs in Oregon since the war on poverty was launched two and a half years ago is nearly $39 million, Neighborhood Youth Corps, $5 million, work experience projects, $2.7 million; two Headstart summer programs, $708,000; VISTA, $497,000; rural loans, $222,000, and adult basic education programs, $92,000.

Judged Successful

There is little doubt that those programs which have affected the greatest numbers of people have been judged the most successful, in Oregon as well as across the nation.

35 Volunteers In State

The Job Corps in Oregon, with one large urban center and six rural "conservation centers," has reached 1,143 persons and about 64,000 across the nation. The VISTA program, often labeled the domestic Peace Corps has 45 volunteers in service in Oregon and another 152 approved for service. The national totals are 3,032 volunteers in the field and 3,200 more approved.

Oregon basic education programs have enrolled 782 adults of a national total of 425,000.

While some poverty projects have had notable success, others have not. Criticism over handling of funds and high costs have been leveled at programs in Oregon and elsewhere, and the Johnson administration is attempting to remedy the complaints.

Big Government

Continued From Page 1

gram. We're trying to do something about it in Oregon. In fact, California Governor Ronald Reagan came to Oregon recently to talk to us about what we're doing with welfare. We need to get able-bodied men off welfare and back to work.

"A recent study showed us that the typical welfare family in Oregon is headed by a 34-year old male, Caucasian, native born, from a logging or agricultural family background, a school dropout who married a school dropout, and who has an average of five children.

"These men must be trained and taken off welfare. You can see the result of the problem when I tell you that one-third of all the adults in Oregon never finished high school.

"But something is being done about it. We're steering these people into night classes. We're training them. We're sakin them off welfare. If they can find a job we're putting them to work in city & county jobs and if they won't work and produce we're dropping them from the welfare roles."

Myers concluded by briefly discussing other phases of his Secretary of State responsibilities which make his days long and rugged, such as rehabilitation work with law breakers; development of a sound mental retardation program; and the problems of diversifying our economy, vocational training and water and air pollution.

His final statement was: "We must save and use all our human resources."

Job Corps Girls March Talked Out

ASTORIA AP — Two Tongue Point Center staff members walked nearly a mile in a successful attempt to talk about 25 Job Corps girls out of marching on the Astoria police station.

The Tongue Point authorities headed with the girls Sunday to abandon the march. City police kept an eye on the march but did not interfere.

The protest was over detention of a 16-year-old California girl on a federal assault charge, Rosette Beason, 17, Fort Worth, Texas, was beaten and injured at the police station.

Tongue Point authorities said the authorities said the incident started when one girl complained another had splashed water on her during a Sunday afternoon boat ride.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
APR 1 1967

More Girls Coming

ASTORIA (AP) — Total enrollment of the new women's Job Corps training center at Tongue Point will reach 350 Wednesday when 85 more girls arrive. Three hundred more girls are expected by July 1.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
APR 1 1967

ENROLLMENT INCREASES

ASTORIA (AP) — Total enrollment of the new women's Job Corps training center at Tongue Point will reach 350 Wednesday when 85 more girls arrive. Three hundred more girls are expected by July 1.

Wide range of projects

Nearly $39 million in anti-poverty funds have been invested in state

(This is the first of two articles on the federal anti-poverty programs in Oregon.)

By Charles E. Beggs

WASHINGTON — The federal government has invested nearly $39 million in anti-poverty funds in Oregon since the war on poverty was launched two and a half years ago.

Records at the U.S. Office of Opportunity, the federal poverty war headquarters, show that about 450 separate projects were financed through OEO grants through Mar. 31 of this year.

These programs range from the very small, the loans of a few hundreds dollars each to individual farmers, to the big Job Corps Center at Tongue Point, which was operated for men for two years by the University of Oregon at a cost of about $14 million.

In between these extremes lie a multitude of efforts: day care centers for children of migrant workers, teacher training projects, college training for poor youths under the Upward Bound program, and even government subsidized summer employment for teenagers under the Neighborhood Youth Corps.

If taken on a population basis alone, Oregon has done very well in attracting poverty funds. If the state, which has roughly 1 per cent of the nation's people, had shared only on this basis, grants would have totaled about $25 million out of the $2.5 billion spent by the government so far in the poverty war. But, for several reasons, Oregon's share outstripped that figure by 60 per cent.

Probably the major reason for this is one man, Arthur Flemming, a long-time federal executive and currently president of the University of Oregon. The U of O has operated eight poverty programs financed with more than $15 million in federal funds.

Of these, the Job Corps center at Tongue Point has been the largest, accounting for $14 million. The school will operate the center for women's Job Corps under a $5.7 million contract through June, 1968. When opened in 1965 as a men's training center, Tongue Point was the first urban Corps center in the nation.

The U of O pioneered in other national anti-poverty efforts. It was one of 18 colleges to begin training underprivileged youths for college under Upward Bound; and it is operating one of the first and largest VISTA training centers.

Oregon State University has obtained $1 million in federal money for several programs, chiefly Upward Bound projects.

Another big recipient of anti-poverty money has been the Valley Migrant League, which has operated day care centers, health programs and other efforts for migrant families with nearly $2 million.

Of the $38,990,305 spent for Oregon anti-poverty programs through Mar. 31, the largest share has gone to the Job Corps — $21 million.

Other totals include community action programs, $8.4 million; Neighborhood Youth Corps, $5 million; work experience projects, $2.7 million; two Headstart summer programs, $708,000; VISTA, $497,000; rural loans, $222,000; and adult basic education programs, $92,000.

There is little doubt that those programs which have affected the greatest numbers of people have been judged the most successful, in Oregon.

In Oregon the largest program in terms of participation has been the Neighborhood Youth Corps, in which youths are employed at community service, receiving wages from federal grants. About 8,800 Oregon young people have participated, out of a million nationally.

Next highest involvement comes in the work experience projects for poor persons of all ages; 3,878 Oregonians have enrolled out of a national total of 172,000.

Operation Headstart, a preschool training program for children of poor families, has operated classes for 2,883 Oregon children. The national figure is 1,128,000.

The Job Corps in Oregon, with one large urban center and six rural "conservation centers," has reached 1,143 persons out of 64,000 across the nation. The VISTA program, often labeled the domestic Peace Corps, has 45 volunteers in service in Oregon and another 152 approved for service. The national totals are 3,032 volunteers in the field and 3,200 more approved.

Oregon basic education programs have enrolled 782 adults of a national total of 425,000.

While some poverty projects have had notable success, others have not. Criticism over handling of funds and high costs have been leveled at programs in Oregon and elsewhere, and the Johnson administration is attempting to remedy the complaints.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 3,881)
APR 25 1967

Job Corps Girls Nearly March On City Jail

ASTORIA (UPI) — About 25 girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps training center marched out of the gate toward city police headquarters Sunday night, but were talked out of it by Job Corps Authorities.

The march was in protest to detention of a 16 - year - old trainee in connection with an altercation that sent another trainee to the center infirmary. Dr. Harold McAbee and Leonard Cohen of the Tongue Point staff, and security personnel, persuaded the girls to enter cars and return to the center.

ASTORIA (UPI) — About 25 girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps training center marched out of the gate toward city police headquarters Sunday night, but were talked out of it by Job Corps Authorities. The march was in protest to detention of a 16-year-old trainee in connection with an altercation that sent another trainee to the center infirmary. Dr. Harold McAbee and Leonard Cohen of the Tongue Point staff, and security personnel, persuaded the girls to enter cars and return to the center.

Corpswomen Models Get Fashion Show Training

"Hold your tummy in" instructs Doris Alexander who teaches a self-improvement course at Tongue Point Job Corps Center. Student is Corpswoman Hortensia Navar, one of the models for the April 28 fashion show to be held at the center theater. The 7:30 p.m. show, open to the public at no charge, is sponsored by the Job Corps Community Relations Council.

Tongue Point Job Corpswomen all committees ranging from and model clothing in Astoria's decorations to programs. They annual spring opening and style also will be hostesses and serve show Friday, April 28 at the at the refreshments tables. Food Job Corps Center are receiving is being donated by several wo- from assistance coaching as Portland more active clubs and by Rose Festival princesses. members of the Community Re-

Portland Junior school lations Council. director Doris Alexander, who daughters of the commun- has groomed several high school ity-wide activity are Mrs. Ade- Rose Festival princesses to laine Sather, vice-chairman of training group of corpswomen the Community Relations Com- who will model. Fashions from mittee, and Mrs. Robert Wilkes 14 participating Astoria firms communications will be Mrs. will be displayed. Harry Steinbock and Dudley Goff.

Sponsored by the Job Corps Community Relations Council, the fashion show will take place at the center theater. It is open to the public at no charge.

A piano trio arranged by Mrs. Jeanne Maddox, featuring talent from the community and the Job Corps Center, will take place at 7:30 p.m. prior to the promenade of fashions.

Corpswomen are assisting on

Astoria, Oregon
Columbia Press
(Cir. D. 1,321)
APR 29 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Olds Named Superintendent At Sweet Home

Douglas V. Olds, a former superintendent of Forest Grove Union High School, has been hired as superintendent of schools for the Sweet Home district. He will assume his new duties July 1.

Olds is presently the executive secretary of the Oregon School Study council, a position he has held for the last year. Previously he was director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Training center for the University of Oregon for two years.

Olds is a graduate of Willamette University and earned his master of arts degree there. Olds started his school administration career at Jefferson and went from there to the post of vice principal at Lincoln High School in Portland. Three years later he was elected superintendent at Forest Grove Union High School, then became superintendent of Astoria schools. He was assistant superintendent at Springfield when he was chosen for the Job Corps assignment in Oct. 1964.

77 Corpswomen Arrive Here

Seventy-seven Job Corpswomen from the Pacific coast states arrived at Tongue Point Center Wednesday, bringing total enrollment [illegible]

[illegible] to [illegible] to [illegible] week for [illegible]

Among [illegible] Mrs. Kathrine Beckman, Portland, as business and clerical training supervisor [illegible] was [illegible] and [illegible] Mrs. Beckman comes from Portland Community college, where she [illegible] business and clerical subjects for two years. Previously she was in the insurance business and taught [illegible] She [illegible] Oregon State university and BS degree from Iowa State University.

More Trainees Due Next Week

Another 80 Job Corps women [illegible] at Tongue Point Center next Tuesday and Wednesday, bringing the total complement to [illegible]

Job Corps [illegible] and usually [illegible] to [illegible] classes, assigned to the center are [illegible] hour [illegible] out activity has been almost [illegible] one [illegible] girl left [illegible] to school.

The girls are being kept active with various campus events. [illegible] officials reported [illegible] in [illegible] contest in preparation for the Tongue Point [illegible] style show scheduled April 28. They have also been getting out the [illegible] paper, which appeared Thursday. A contest to name the paper is planned.

The 80 girls the center [illegible] from the [illegible] Oregon, Washington, northern California, Idaho and Montana.

Girls now at the station receive passes for evening visits to downtown Astoria if they are up on their classwork and conduct otherwise is good, officials said. Buses carry them downtown and back. Those going downtown must sign in by 10 p.m. on their return, except that on Friday and Saturday nights they must sign in by midnight.

Trips downtown are generally for purposes of bowling, skating and going to the moving pictures, officials said.

Girls Halted In March

ASTORIA (AP) — About 25 girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps [illegible] center marched out of the gate toward city police [illegible] Sunday but were talked out of it by Job Corps [illegible].

The [illegible] was in protest to [illegible] of a [illegible] and [illegible] in connection with an [illegible] fight [illegible] another [illegible] to the center infirmary.

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Point Receives More Trainees

ASTORIA (Special) — Seventy-seven new women Job Corps trainees from the West Coast states arrived Wednesday at Tongue Point Center, bringing total enrollment to 308.

Job Corps officials expect to build enrollment there to a maximum 680 by July 1.

The new arrivals began a two-weeks orientation program Thursday.

Daily Astorian
Astoria
(Cir. [illegible])
APR 2 [illegible]

DISCIPLINE SEVERS 16 GIRLS FROM JOB CORPS

A new, harder kind of discipline is evident at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center this week.

A protest march involving approximately forty Job Corps trainees triggered by a mess hall fight between two girls, has resulted in 16 trainees being returned to their homes, two of the girls [illegible] return home on a voluntary severance basis rather than face the Campus Court. six were expelled from the center by the Campus Court and four of these have appealed to the Center Director following a decision by the Campus Court for their severence. All because of their involvement in an unruly expression of independence begun by an unauthorized march out of the base and continued with a march toward the city jail hoping to free a 16-year-old trainee being detained on a charge of assault. Approximately 200 women are now receiving training at the base.

According to Tongue Point authorities the emotional outburst started during a boating recreational activity in the afternoon when one girl accused another of purposely splashing water on her. The altercation flared again in the mess hall at the evening meal and as a result one girl was taken to the City jail by the Astoria Police. Friends of the attacker saying that she had been unjustly treated banded together and started walking toward the city with the intent of taking the police into releasing her. Members of the Center staff were able to persuade the girls into returning to the base where immediate disciplinary action was begun.

According to Tongue Point authorities, such displays of motion should not be considered unusual. Girls--or boys--away from home and familiar surroundings, different standards, strange rules controlled by a different almost foreign-asset of rules, become discontent without really knowing why they are dissatisfied. Most of these people recognized as being in a position where they must defend themselves and are naturally quick to assert anger and aggressiveness through emotion.

Interested parties have also expressed that though it was reported that the marching girls were loud, boisterous and profane to both occupants of police cars and to other passing automobiles, there are trouble makers and dissidents among all groups and that the Job Corps is no exception. "Wonderful work is being accomplished and much progress is being gained at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center," say administrators at the base and Astoria Community Relations personnel.

Mr. Wycoff, Community Relations Director, had this to say: "Where staff discipline is necessary, it must be administered toward the benefit of the most. It was learned with the Job Corps boys that one bad apple could cause eight or ten from deriving the benefits of which the Center is established. The same type of discipline must be maintained with the girls." "Those who don't wish to, or won't conform with necessary regulations must be removed so that they do not hold back the progress of others."

The Astoria Police department reports that the detained girl was released on Monday to a U.S. Marshall from Portland, and that the Astoria Police Department has a warrant for one of the girls who participated in the march, but that she may be one of the girls who have been sent home.

Olds Named to Sweet Home Job

[illegible] V. Olds, former Astoria superintendent and [illegible] director of Tongue Point Job Corps center, has been appointed superintendent of Sweet Home unified school district in Linn county, the Albany Democrat-Herald reported this week.

Olds will replace Ingold Dishaw, also a former Lebanon county educator who was principal of Warrenton high school from 1956 to [illegible].

Dishaw is leaving Sweet Home, [illegible] after 9 years [illegible] as Sweet Home superintendent.

Olds left Tongue Point a year ago and has been executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council with headquarters [illegible] University of Oregon.

Olds is a graduate of Willamette University, World War II veteran and has [illegible] experience [illegible] including four years as Astoria superintendent.

APR 2 4 1967

Corp Questioned At Convention

PORTLAND (AP) — Delegates to the National School Board Association convention were told that vocational education in high schools would be more effective and less expensive than the Job Corps.

Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., speaking at a general session of the convention Sunday compared the $15,000 average cost per trainee for 1966 at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center on the northern Oregon Coast to the average $500 per pupil in the nation's public elementary schools.

Mrs. Green did not recommend abandoning the Job Corps, but said alternatives should be sought.

MAY 1 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Tongue Point Girls In Protest March

ASTORIA (AP) — About [illegible] girls at the Tongue Point Job [illegible] center marched [illegible] Sunday but were talked out of it by Job Corps authorities.

The [illegible] Dr. Harold McAbee and Leonard Cohen of the Tongue Point staff, and security personnel persuaded the girls to enter [illegible]

APR 25 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Trainees Teach Spanish Class

Teachers at Tongue Point Job Corps Center will be taught by [illegible] corpswomen - students in [illegible] special evening class to begin [illegible]

[illegible] has organized a group of Spanish-American corpswomen who will instruct the class in Spanish.

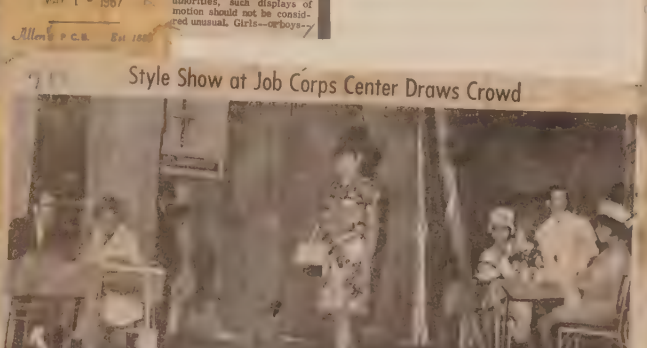
APR 25 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Job Corps Girls March

ASTORIA (UPI) — About [illegible] girls at the Tongue Point [illegible] center marched [illegible] Sunday but were talked out of it by Job Corps authorities.

The [illegible] Dr. Harold McAbee and Leonard Cohen of the Tongue Point staff, and security personnel persuaded the girls to enter [illegible]

Style Show at Job Corps Center Draws Crowd



The Sidewalk Cafe - La Francaise, style show produced by the Job Corps girls at Tongue Point, with the help of local merchants and townspeople, was such a success, there wasn't even standing room and several of the crowd of 700 who packed the theater at the center, had to be turned away. Dudley Goff and Mr. Harry Steinbock, left, were chairmen for the event, first social function for the townspeople to be given by the new girl students at the center. One of many attractive young models is displaying spring print dress, while two other girl students far right, look on. Clemencia Pacheco and Suzanne Anderson were co-chairmen for the show, presenting Adelaine Sather, co-ordinator, with a gift during the evening.

Spokane, Wash.
Chronicle
(Cir. 71,055)
APR 24 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Vocational School Urged

[illegible] JULY 1 (AP) — [illegible] to the National School Board Association convention here [illegible] told that vocational [illegible] should be [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Corpswomen Tour Columbia Hospital

...has toured nursing homes and hospitals in the area as part of their training. In lower photo X-ray technician at Columbia explains procedures to the visiting corpswomen. (Tongue Point Job Corps Center photo).

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Pt. Authorities Halt March

Tongue Point Job Corps authorities talked a group of corpswomen into abandoning a march on the city police station Sunday night to protest detention of one corpswoman.

The group marched out of the Tongue Point gate, with the one or two guards on duty there powerless to stop them, shortly after a 16-year-old trainee was taken to city police station to face a federal assault charge. She was taken into custody after an altercation that sent another corpswoman, Rosetta Beason, 17, Ft. Worth, Tex., to the center infirmary.

Tongue Point authorities said the number that marched out the gate was around 25. City police said they had been advised some 40 marched out.

Dr. Harold McAbee and Leonard Cohen of the Tongue Point staff headed out after the girls with some security personnel.

Broke Up March

They caught up with the group, then numbering about 20, near the Custard King, got out and walked beside them, trying to talk them out of the march.

Authorities said the two men gradually detached small groups or individuals and persuaded them into cars.

Finally, by the time the marchers reached the vicinity of 32nd and Leif Erickson, with about 15 girls still marching, all were persuaded to get into cars and go back to the center, except one who preferred to walk back and one who went back in a city police car. Tongue Point authorities said Police had kept the march under observation but did not interfere.

Police said at least a half dozen of the girls carried clubs or sticks.

They said about 20 were still in the march when it stopped. By the time the group passed the Custard King, only one still had a stick, Tongue Point officials said.

No Rocks Thrown

Tongue Point authorities quoted McAbee and Cohen as saying a few girls had sticks but apparently were using them only as walking sticks. They quoted McAbee and Cohen as stating that the girls at no time threatened them or picked up or threw any rocks.

Tongue Point authorities said a few of the girls apparently had some idea of trying to talk police into releasing the girl who had been detained. Others apparently went along as a lark; some thought they were going home.

"Their hearts weren't really in it," a Center spokesman said.

The altercation that led to the whole thing began on a boat cruise Sunday afternoon when one girl accused another of splashing water on her.

They resumed the argument during dinner. Miss Beason was knocked down and stepped...

Longview, Wash.
News
(Cir. D. 19,983)

APR 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Holloway Suggests Loan Plan To Finance College Education

College educated workers are greatly needed as the US economy changes from a production-oriented status to an idea-oriented status, President Charles Holloway of Oregon Board of Higher Education told chamber of commerce members Friday at their weekly luncheon in Cinders Restaurant.

But not all high school graduates qualified for post-high school education can afford it in these days when it costs $9,000 to $16,000 for a four-year college course, he said.

Holloway declared that "we need some bold plan" to solve this problem, as a third to a fourth of the high school grads capable of college training cannot now afford it, and the cost is going to go higher yet.

He suggested that, since college training pays for itself in four years with addition learning capacity, there could be some plan to extend credit to college students, with industry taking the lead. Perhaps government insurance could be arranged for such loans, he commented.

The job outlook for untrained workers is growing grimmer, he said. Industry does more work with fewer people these days, and the new jobs that develop must come from enterprises based on ideas. These jobs will increasingly required trained, educated people, he predicted.

The US needs leadership as it moves into the new type of economy, and leadership can only come from educated people, Holloway declared.

Holloway praised the work of a commission of five Oregon college presidents who made a study of Oregon higher education needs, involving two years of work. Dr. Wendell Van Loan of Tongue Point Job Corps Center was one of the five, he said. The study was better than any from other states he has seen.

Observer
LaGrande, Oregon
(Cir. D. 3,660)

MAY 1 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B.

School Vocational Training Preferred Over Job Corps

PORTLAND (AP)—Delegates to the National School Board Association convention were told that vocational education in high schools would be more effective and less expensive than the Job Corps.

Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., [illegible] session of the convention Sunday, compared the [illegible] average cost per trainee at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center on the northern Oregon coast to the average $500 per pupil in the nation's public elementary schools.

About 4,000 of the 9,000 delegates attended the session.

Mrs. Green did not recommend abandoning the Job Corps, but said alternatives should be sought.

She said a broader vocational program in public schools is needed "more than any other program if we are to have fewer dropouts."

She said this would include expansion of federal aid to high school vocational programs.

"The reason we have a million dropouts in the United States every year," she said, "is because we do not provide the programs needed. If we spent more time with children of 5 and 6 years of age, we would have fewer dropouts at 15 or 16 years of age."

She said that three fundamental beliefs will be brought out soon in a House subcommittee report to the Office of Education.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

APR 26 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

85 Corpswomen Arrive Today

Tongue Point Job Corps Center officials dispatched a bus and several automobiles to Portland Wednesday to collect 85 new corpswomen scheduled to arrive there during the day from northwest communities.

The new arrivals will bring to the enrollment past the 300 mark.

Meanwhile nine corpswomen who participated in a Sunday march into Astoria have gone home at their own request, while six appeared before a staff review board. Of these, one was severed and sent home, and five will be permitted to remain but will be given staff penalties, authorities said.

Center officials said Wednesday that 85 per cent of new instructional equipment and materials needed in conversion from a men's to a women's center is now on hand, the rest to arrive within two weeks. Equipment still to come includes electronics, business machine and hospital equipment.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon

League Luncheon Speaker, Guests To be from Corps

The League of Women Voters Wendesday May 3, luncheon will be at the Sea Fare and will feature as speaker the Rev. Virgil Savage, religious coordinator at Tongue Point Job Corps. His topic will be "Retrievin. Lost Resources."

Mrs. Savage, who is the league's Human Resources chairman, plans to bring some Job Corps trainees as her luncheon guests.

Reservations may be called in to Mrs. Garland Parks by Tuesday morning, May 2. The luncheon will be at 11:45 a.m.

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Green Advocates Vocational Training In High Schools

PORTLAND (AP)—Delegates to the National School Board Association convention were told that vocational education in high schools would be more effective and less expensive than the Job Corps.

Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., speaking at a general session of the convention Sunday, compared the $15,000 average cost per trainee for 1966 at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center on the northern Oregon Coast to the average $500 per pupil in the nation's public elementary schools.

About 4,000 of the 9,000 delegates attended the session.

Mrs. Green did not recommend abandoning the Job Corps, but said alternatives should be sought.

She said a broader vocational program in public schools is needed "more than any other program if we are to have fewer dropouts."

She said this would include expansion of federal aid to high school vocational programs.

"The reason we have a million dropouts in the United States every year," she said, "is because we do not provide the programs needed. If we spent more time with children of 5 and 6 years of age, we would have fewer dropouts at 15 or 16 years of age."

She said that three fundamental beliefs will be brought out soon in a House subcommittee report to the Office of Education.

She said the beliefs are that equality of education must not be neglected in pursuit of quality, that local citizens should continue to bear responsibility for educational decisions and that education is a primary responsibility of state and local districts.

Aberdeen, Wash.
World
(Cir. D. 17,037)

APR 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Trainee Arrested for Assault

...at the Tongue Point center for women w...

...Univ. of Ore. Emerald
Eugene, Oregon

APR 24 1967

Tongue Pt. Authorities Halt March

(Continued from Page 1)

...m. Tongue Point authorities said. The other girl was detained and Miss Beason went to the infirmary, where her injuries were reported not serious Monday. The detained girl was taken to city jail, and soon afterward the march downtown began.

...ce said they are still investigating the incident and ...tal arrests might be made. Tongue Point authorities took the names of 15 girls who will be given the opportunity to go home if they wish. Authorities said most of them apparently do wish. If any change their mind and wish to stay they will be given a hearing by the staff to determine if they should be permitted to do so or be sent home.

School Training Not As Costly As Job Corps

...Corps, but said alternatives should be sought.

She said a broader vocational program in public schools is needed "more than any other program if we are to have fewer dropouts."

She said this would include expansion of federal aid to high school vocational programs.

REPORT SCHEDULED

"The reason ... have a million ... the United States every year," she said, "is because we do not provide the programs needed. If we spent more time with children of 5 and 6 years of age, we would have fewer dropouts at 15 or 16 years of age."

She said that three fundamental beliefs will be brought out soon in a House subcommittee report to the Office of Education.

She said the beliefs are that equality of education must not be neglected in pursuit of quality, that local citizens should continue to bear responsibility for educational decisions and that education is a primary responsibility of state and local districts.

For higher education

'Master plan' in making

(The first of several regional meetings of Colleges for Oregon's Future was held in La Grande April 7. Widespread dialogue at the local level is expected to be generated in the ten eastern counties of Oregon by this conference. This article is one of a series providing background for our readers on this important subject. ——Editor)

What is the genesis of the two-year study of post-high school educational opportunity and the culminating report, Education Beyond the High School: Projection for Oregon?

In recent years, different institutions of higher Education adopted a set of guidelines for the public colleges and universities, each of which also set forth its objectives and expectations. But comment was frequently heard that a prime need in Oregon's planning of its educational resources was an all-embracing study of post-high school education, with projections based upon the most complete and reliable data possible. Such a study——a "master plan," if you will——could be useful for all engaged in planning the future of post-high school education.

At a meeting of presidents of colleges and universities in Oregon, held at the Village Green in late 1964, there was unanimous agreement that such a comprehensive study and resulting recommendations was one of the greatest urgencies confronting Oregon. Accordingly, the presidents carried the suggestion to what seemed the most appropriate body, the then Governor's Educational Coordinating Council and offered to cooperate in a comprehensive, impartial study.

The offer was accepted and the following were named to the Special Committee to Develop a Master Plan for Education Beyond the High School in Oregon:

President John R. Howard of Lewis and Clark College, Chairman.
President James H. Jensen of Oregon State University.
President Leonard Rice of Oregon College of Education.
President Paul E. Waldschmidt of University of Portland.
President Wendell Van Loan of Southwestern Oregon Community College.

(Later professor of education at University of Oregon and now director of the Job Corps Center at Tongue Point.)

Named as staff executive coordinator, with generalship over the gigantic task of data gathering and interpretation, was Dr. Miles Romney, vice chancellor for academic affairs in the State System of Higher Education. Also added to the task force to help interpret the project to the public was George Dial, director of communications development for the State System of Higher Education.

Early decisions were that the study should have full independence, reflecting the best judgments of the committee itself; that interim and final reports should be made to the Educational Coordinating Council, to appropriate decision-makers in the state government, and to the public.

Meetings — scores of them, so many in fact that no member of the committee is sure of the total —— were held by the group, which informally called itself the Post-High School Study Committee.

The most comprehensive data gathering in the history of education in Oregon, directed by Dr. Romney, saw many sub-committees appointed and various individuals named to coordinate various phases of the gigantic undertaking.

Expressions of views were invited from many knowledgeable specialists and lay citizens —— key people in government, higher education executives, spokesmen for the citizenry at large like College for Oregon's Future, and authorities in virtually every "problem area" in post-high school education. Some made three or four appearances.

The committee would also be hard-pressed to recall how many thousands of pages of data compilations, drafts of chapters, revisions of chapters, revisions of revisions, and related documents —— how many millions of words of discussions —— were entailed in producing the document which was released in the fall of 1966 —— 22 months after the start of the project.

Inevitably, the published product of the two-year teamwork will figure in many discussions by decision-makers across Oregon's educational and public-policy spheres.

Mrs. Green Believes Schools Better Prepared To Teach Than Job Corps

Story on Page One Also

... the out" there, before it was was needed "more than any the programs needed. If we delegates who attended the when at eve...
... other program if we are to spend more time with children ... must of ...
... have fewer dropouts." ... of 5 and 6 years of age, we'a subcommittee study of the ... cases of what
... comment on ... Mrs. Green said it was the obligation of school boards, local districts, and Congress to seek alternatives to the Job Corps system. She did not recommend abandoning this ... the Tongue Point center — which was recently ... with a girls' voca... — in spite of t... ternatives should be sought. ... But, she said, a broader vo... program in the public ... Corps training, also "drop ... into permanent jobs. ... Many of the dropouts who ... went to Tongue Point for J... Job Corps center ... This, she said, would include expansion of the present ... cational programs. At the present time only a small percentage of high schools offer this training. ... The reason we have a million dropouts in the United States every year," she said, "is because we do not provide ... However, she told the 4,000 ... Education, directed ... by the House, was to be released soon. ... In her keynote address to the National School Boards Association convention Sunday at the Memorial Coliseum, three fundamental beliefs that would be brought out: that education is a primary responsibility of state and local districts; that equality of education must not be neglected in pursuit of quality; and that local citizens "in spirit and action" should continue to bear the responsibility for educational decisions. ... She admitted that school boards today face problems which seem to be multiplying in geometric proportion because of the complex and rapidly changing society. ... "Besides the population explosion, the school board is faced with the knowledge ... — the desegregation ... needs, the seeming unrest ... who want ... groups within society ... seeking to own specific objectives, the ... needs at the local and state level coupled with the new relationship established by recent federal enactments." ... "How can the school board ... ...

CAP Officials Visit Center

Lt. Col. O. A. Donaldson, Oregon wing commander of the Civil Air Patrol, headed a delegation of CAP officials who recently visited Tongue Point Job Corps as part of CAP Day festivities at the center. Corpswomen Clemeenn Pacheco (left) and Mary Chamberlain were tour guides. Both corpswomen and women from Clatsop Community college are members of the center's CAP squadron.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 8 - 1967

Speaker on 'Fashion 1967' Billed at Navy Heights

JOAN KING

Corpswomen in the home economics department at the center will prepare refreshments to be served following the talk.

Joan King, former fashion editor of Harper's Bazaar, will present a talk on "Fashion 1967" Wednesday at the Community Hall in Navy Heights, south of Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The lecture at 8 p.m. is open to the public at no charge.

Miss King, a graduate of Harvard college, has been employed by several of the top fashion and accessory houses in New York. She has been a guest on To I & Tonight Show, store fashion shows [illegible] - Palmolive, styled commercials for the Tonight Show and was in charge of promotion and advertising for a [illegible] division of Rose Marie Reid.

Her May 10 appearance in Astoria is sponsored by Reynolds Metals company, in conjunction with the home economics department of the Job Corps Center.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpswomen Publish Newspaper

Ethel Jones of Beaumont, Tex., editor of the Tongue Point Job Corpswoman newspaper, presents first copy of The Gazette to Dr. W. L. Van Loan, center director. Miss Jones heads a staff of corpswomen who have complete responsibility for publishing the bi-monthly newspaper. Work on the paper is done after classes. Miss Jones is taking vocational training in business and clerical subjects.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,483)
MAY 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

JOB CORPS POST FILLED

ASTORIA (UPI) — An associate professor of sociology at Marylhurst College, Sister Mary Audrey, has been appointed by University of Oregon as center life director at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

1967 Job Corps Enrollees Facing Problems; Youth, Poor Health Rated Major Obstacles

By ROBERT OLMOS
Staff Writer, The Oregonian

Job Corps Joes and Janes — 1967 style — differ from those first counterparts who joined the program more than two years ago.

And the change is causing the Job Corps new worries.

Today's Job Corps Joe has changed in the following ways:

—He is younger. A year ago, less than 33 per cent of enrollees were 16 or 17. Now, that group makes up 60 per cent of all enrollees.

—Being younger, he is more likely to become homesick, less likely to stay through the entire program, less willing to accept social controls, more likely to create a behavior problem.

—He is in poorer health.

—He probably has never held a job — either part-time or full-time.

—He is more of a non-reader than his earlier counterpart and will need a greater amount of pre-vocational training.

—If he does get some vocational training, he probably will have less chance of finding a job. Because he is so young, age limit work laws and regulations in many states will be stacked up against him.

The shift to a younger population is leading to a problem described as "quite unlike that known in any other educational or training setting" in a recent report made by David Gottlieb, assistant director for plans and programs for the Job Corps.

"Our entering population is about the same way Gottlieb put it. "What has caused the shift of a much lower quality than it was a year ago," was the away from drawing in an richest of the poor"?

Gottlieb pinpoints three causes:

1. A growing number of younger people are dropping out of school or are being asked to leave.

2. The country's military needs are drawing greater numbers of the type of young men for which the program originally was designed.

3. Increased employment in past months has drawn away older, better qualified young men and women into a variety of jobs, including those that don't require much skill.

Because of these "dramatic changes", Job Corps officials are pondering what they can realistically accomplish with the youngsters that are in their charge.

Goals Weighed

"We cannot say all will be able to take on skilled jobs or earn salaries of $2 to $4 an hour. We cannot say every youngster will come out of the program able to read a high school-level novel or able to solve simple algebraic problems. We cannot say the majority will leave in physical [illegible]," Gottlieb stated.

What, then, can this new wave of young people — described as the "hard-core" cases of poverty, those most difficult to educate, train and [illegible] from it program?

New reading programs [illegible] guidance and counseling programs have been changed in order to communicate simple skills as personal cleanliness, table manners, appropriate behavior in addressing adults, procedures for seeking and obtaining employment.

"We have introduced, as strange as it may seem, a variety of materials directed at teaching the English language and, because there was no alternative, we have developed pre-vocational training programs which do not require basic reading and arithmetic skills," Gottlieb reported.

Other program innovations are being developed to help build up in the individual a "sense of pride and dignity."

"Even though the young graduate or the corpsman leaves [illegible] service, or return to school, he will (through program innovations) have the wherewithal to be a person [illegible] the needs of welfare assistance," Gottlieb stated.

The job is made doubly difficult because, as Gottlieb puts it:

"There is no set semester [illegible] students arrive, nor can there be an arbitrary period for graduation ceremonies.

"These young people are not a homogeneous group. They are not all 16 or 17. They [illegible] mores. They are not all from homes with employed fathers. They are not all from one neighborhood or city or one state. They are not all of a single racial, ethnic or religious background."

Experience Not New

Tackling problems is not something new to the Job Corps.

The corps was no more than a few months old when it was faced with difficulties, Gottlieb reported.

In planning the program, certain assumptions were made, based on what officials thought on poverty in general, he stated.

"We thought there was a population of young people who were in difficulty because they were poor. We assumed that with some basic education, some vocational training, guidance and counseling, some introduction to stability in the form of three meals a day, regular hours and an opportunity to come into contact with helpful adults, these youths would be ready to cope with the demands of our highly complex society," he stated.

It was not long before Job Corps officials found out how wrong [illegible] were.

They had planned a program to take an enrollee from the 5th to the 12th grade level. The program quickly had to go out the window when it was discovered that 50 per cent of the enrollees could read less than the third grade level and 30 per cent could not read a simple sentence.

"We assumed that because the law in most states says students must stay in school until they are 16, that they would be able to read some, communicate, and add and subtract," he stated.

Officials had put together a math program which would have been more than adequate for those who needed remedial work in multiplication and basic algebra. But they found out that more than 35 per cent of the enrollees had difficulty subtracting from 10, adding a column with [illegible]

Money Limited

A limited [illegible] of money was set aside for [illegible] per cent of the enrollees had a tooth when [illegible] there was need for a [illegible] new set of teeth.

Gottlieb said he does not feel that the errors in judgment were the result of haste or poor planning, nor were they the products of inept administration, choice of contractors, size of centers or quality of curricula.

[illegible] the Job Corps, educators, social workers, economists, those in governmental agencies — really, were aware of just how poor some young people in this country were and how the experience of poverty had affected their attitudes, behavior and self-concept.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Biologist Talks

Kirk Beiningan, marine biologist for the U. S Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, talked to members of a science class at Tongue Point Job Corps Center recently about industrial and vocational significance of the salmon industry in the west. As result of his talk, corpswomen plan to set up experimental temperature - controlled aquariums at the center for the class to study.

Job Corps Often Difference Between Dead End and Success Story

By MARY STAMP
Of the Register-Guard

To the young woman from Marcola, it seemed she had reached a dead end. She was a high school graduate but the only jobs she could get were babysitting or washing dishes.

Another girl, who worked as a nursemaid, was in a similar position. A young divorcee, she had dropped out of high school when she first married and became pregnant. Her husband's family had custody of the child, as she was unable to support him.

These two young women—both with the ability to hold better jobs but without the money for training—make two of the "success stories" of girls screened through the two-year-old Eugene Women in Community Service office.

Both were accepted into the Women's Job Corps and both now have positions as secretaries.

Underprivileged girls, high school dropouts, unwed mothers and other young women aged 17 to 21 come to the office, where 18 volunteer women recruiters screen applicants for the nation's 27 Women's Job Corps centers. Women with children make [illegible] arrangements for their care.

"They hear of the program and come in on their own—or a community agency may refer applicants," said Veola Wilmot, director of the Eugene screening center.

The office, in the basement of the main post office, is open four days a week. Two or three girls may drop by each day—or two days be no prospective applicants.

Not all of the girls are accepted. "Some are too young or [illegible] some are still in school. Some have cases pending in [illegible] court. Some are from families with enough money to help [illegible]," Mrs. Wilmot said.

She noted that most of the Eugene office applicants [illegible] from small communities and outlying rural areas—Springfield, Veneta, Creswell, Cottage Grove and Junction City, for example—rather than from Eugene, where there are more job training programs available.

After [illegible] the Eugene office, the girls are sent by the Women's Job Corps headquarters in Washington, D.C., to the [illegible] throughout the nation. About half of the [illegible] are sent to the University of Oregon's Tongue Point [illegible].

[illegible] centers offer training to help the young women become [illegible] nurses, cooks, secretaries, dental assistants, [illegible] aides, [illegible] clerks, home [illegible] [illegible] for the experienced [illegible].

But on a recent three month trip around the nation, Mrs. Wilmot visited five Women's Job Corps centers "to find out how we can do a better job in the screening office and what opportunities the different centers offer."

She talked to Lane County girls and their counselors in centers located in old hotels, resorts and abandoned military bases as Los Angeles, Calif.; Albuquerque, N.M.; Poland Spring, Me.; Omaha, Neb., and Tongue Point.

Mrs. Wilmot said all of the centers emphasized that the Job Corps is a three sided program.

"It offers job vocational training, as its name implies, but it also helps the girls to become better homemakers and to develop socially as participating citizens."

The program is particularly valuable to girls from underprivileged homes, she added, "because many of them have learned little about diet and family care."

The social focus helps them learn to live with other people and develop "acceptable patterns of behavior," Mrs. Wilmot said.

At all the centers, the girls live under round the clock supervision and strict rules. This control is hard for many girls to accept, especially at first, Mrs. Wilmot said, and some want to leave before they have given the program a chance.

Because girls from this area who are sent to Tongue Point are relatively near to their homes and boyfriends, they frequently find it especially difficult to adjust, she noted.

"Most of the girls want a change in environment so it is good to send them farther away. But the Tongue Point Center isn't yet full."

Mrs. Wilmot described three of the other centers she visited.

"The Los Angeles one is an urban center in a hotel and is arranged through the YWCA, unlike most which are set up through contracts with universities and businesses. This used to be the only center on the West Coast. Now a third one is being opened at Moses Lake, Wash.

"Poland Spring, the nation's largest center, is set up at an old resort in rural New England and trains more than 1,000 girls," she said.

"In Omaha, the center is in an area where there had been race riots and the community was eager for any constructive effort.

"The Women's Job Corps is an expensive program," Mrs. Wilmot admits, "but all experimental, remedial programs are."

Enters Training

Veola Wilmot, director of the Eugene screening center, reviews information on the Albuquerque Women's Job Corps Training Center with Dianna Wright. Dianna, 18, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wright, 1321 Gilham Rd. She will be training at the Albuquerque center.

Register-Guard photo by Don Peterson

College Board Accepts Albertson's And Also Three Staff Resignations

C. [illegible] Albertson's ... Point and ... returning on ... original manner left ... Southwestern Oregon ... College board, resigned Monday night. His resignation was one of four accepted by the directors.

Others resigning were staff ... and included Sydney Thompson, coordinator of community services and special programs director for the college, Sam Campston, assistant professor of physics and mathematics; and Bruce Vik, instructor in math.

Albertson is moving to Eugene where he will be manager of Pancreatin of Oregon. He is a former teacher, city councilman, planning commission member, business man in Myrtle Point as well as chairman of SWOCC board during its second year.

Thompson will be moving to Tongue Point July 1 to become ... center near Astoria to fill the position in the community rela- ...

It was announced ... Fawver, professor ... vocational ... the local section of ... Cosmetology Teachers' ... a meeting May 5 and 6 in Salem. Fawver is also chairman of the coordinating council, the group's highest office.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. ...)
MAY 1 ... 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Sociologist Slates Talk On Modern Life, Family

Dr. ROY H. RODGERS

"The Impact of Modern Life on the Family" will be discussed by University of Oregon sociologist Dr. Roy H. Rodgers at a public lecture Thursday 7:30 p.m. in the Community Hall on Navy Heights.

His talk will conclude this year's lecture series arranged by the Women's Activities Committee of Tongue Point Job Corps Center in conjunction with the Division of Continuing Education of the Oregon State System of Higher Education.

Dr. Rodgers' lecture will dwell on the four basic facts of modern life which have had inevitable influence on "the American family organization, industrialization, secularization and industrialization. He will analyze results of these changes which weakened or strengthened the family unit."

Now vice-chairman of the Department of Sociology Dr. Rodgers has been at University of Oregon since 1963. He holds degrees from Wheaton college, University of North Carolina and University of Minnesota.

The lecture is open to the public. Tickets will be available at the door.

Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 7 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Benefit Concert Here by Pianist Draws Interest

Appearance of Antonio De Peralta, noted Nicaraguan pianist in a "Chapel for Fairview" benefit concert here Saturday night has excited interest elsewhere in the state, sponsors of the event reported.

The artist, with representatives of the Clatsop County Association for Retarded Children and heads of the Portland and state association, was interviewed on three Portland television stations Tuesday, and held a press conference Tuesday afternoon at the Hilton hotel.

De Peralta is accompanied on his trip to Oregon by his wife.

Mrs. Audrey C. Benedict, director of the Charaleers singing group which will also perform at the benefit concert, founded and was director of the Fontana School of Fine Arts in California, where De Peralta began his musical studies at the age of 10 as a refugee. After his father and uncle were slain in a revolution in Nicaragua.

Saturday's concert will be at 8 p.m. at the Astoria high school auditorium. Sponsors are Catsop Association for Retarded Children, Tongue Point Job Corps Center and Charaleers. Its purpose is to raise funds in a state-wide campaign to build a chapel at Fairview Home for the Retarded. The home does not have such a facility.

Tickets may be purchased at several downtown locations in Astoria or at the concert.

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

MAY 18 1967

He Wanted To Be Somebody

Dream Fulfilled For Job Corps Graduate

By YVONNE FRANKLIN
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON – [illegible] sent to real good techniques and ma- [illegible] n centers terials to provide a special [illegible] throughout the country who program of basic education," [illegible] signed up to learn a trade and he said. "It wasn't just a bowl [illegible] make a better life for them of cherries. I had to give a [illegible] served in Oregon selves. little, take a little."

"I was a high school drop- "Thanks a million to the vo- out," he wrote. "Everywhere cational instructors. They I went to apply for a job the have taught me to be wanted first question was how much by employers."

[illegible] arrived in Ore- education did I have. I got fed Baker explained that he [illegible] 1965, "not know- up to my neck on that ques- came from a family of 13 chil- [illegible] do or how to do tion. dren and that "not one of my [illegible] get [illegible] family finished high school."

[illegible] learn a trade. Staff Praised

"I'm the only one who has [illegible] instructor on. He decided to join the Job come this far in life out of my [illegible] a Job Corps Corps and was sent to Oregon family," he said. "This is why [illegible] for training. He was the last of I strived so hard and adhered [illegible] the boys to leave Tongue to all the principles the Job [illegible] place to Point before it became a Job Corps had."

[illegible] center for [illegible] "I had an outstanding [illegible] he examples. above average record in the [illegible] staff members who Job Corps, so I was offered [illegible] helped him. seven or eight jobs as a gen- [illegible] of Ford. "Tongue Point had some real automotive mechanic."

Yvonne Franklin

Tongue Point training helped him realize his dream 'to be somebody'

WASHINGTON – A young Negro graduate of the Job Corps camp at Tongue Point who arrived in Oregon with "a want in my mind to be somebody" has realized his dream.

Young Frank Baker arrived in Oregon in June, 1965 "not knowing what to do or how to do it". But he was determined to stick with the training, finish high school and learn a trade.

He is now an "instructor in automotive" at a job corps center in Utah. He makes $2.89 an hour, "I have a '57 Chevy and a real nice place to live."

Baker was telling about his experiences in a newspaper called The Corpsman which is published by the Office of Economic Opportunity and sent to all the volunteers in centers throughout the country who signed up to learn a trade and make a better life for themselves.

"I was a high school dropout," he wrote, "Everywhere I went to apply for a job the first question was how much education did I have. I got fed up to my neck on that question."

He decided to join the Job Corps and was sent to Oregon for training. He was the last of the boys to leave Tongue Point before it became a job training center for young girls. He praised his instructors and staff members who helped him.

"Tongue Point had some real good techniques and materials to provide a special program of basic education," he said, "It wasn't just a bowl of cherries. I had to give a little, take a little."

"Thanks a million to the vocational instructors. They have taught me to be wanted by employers."

Baker explained that he came from a family of 13 children and that "not one of my family finished high school."

"I'm the only one who has come this far in life out of my family," he said, "This is why I strived so hard and adhered to all the principles that the Job Corps had."

"I had an outstanding, above average record in the Job Corps, so I was offered seven or eight jobs as a general automotive mechanic."

Baker is employed by the Thiokol Chemical Corp. as an instructor in automotive mechanics at the Clearfield Job Corps center in Clearfield, Utah.

"Now I'm working, making good money, paying taxes and doing something I never dreamed of – teaching other Corpsmen," he wrote.

His parting advice to fellow Corpsmen was to finish their training.

"The rewards are not given to the fastest or the swiftest, but only to those who stay there and finish. This is my motto."

The Job Corps training camps, both the rural conservation camps in Oregon and the large camps for skill training, are an experiment to remove poor boys and girls, aged 16 to 21, from a poor environment and give them an opportunity to become taxpaying citizens.

Because of the cost of training, the program is in trouble with Congress. The war on poverty bill has not yet been renewed this year, but cuts are expected.

Critics of the Corps, such as Rep. Edith Green, who is a member of the House Education and Labor Committee handling the bill, think the schools could do a better job at less money for more young people.

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,138)
MAY 18 1967

A. Robert Smith Says:

War on Poverty Benefits Oregon

By CHARLES E. BEGGS

(This is the first of two articles on the federal anti-poverty programs in Oregon.)

WASHINGTON (Special) — The federal government has invested nearly $39 million in anti-poverty [illegible] in Oregon since the war on poverty was launched two and a half years ago.

Records at the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity, the federal poverty war headquarters, show that about 450 separate projects were financed through OEO grants through March 31 of this year.

These programs range from the very small, the loans of a few hundred dollars each to individual farmers, to the big Job Corps Center at Tongue Point, which was operated for nine for two years by the University of Oregon at a cost of about $14 million.

In between these extremes lies a multitude of efforts: day care centers for children of migrant workers, summer training projects, college training for poor youths under the Upward Bound program, and even government subsidized summer employment for teen-agers under the Neighborhood Youth Corps program.

If taken on a population basis alone, Oregon has done very well in attracting poverty funds. If the state, which has nearly 1 per cent of the nation's people, had shared only on this basis, grants would have totaled about $2 million out of the $2.[illegible] billion spent by the government so far in the poverty war. But, for several reasons, Oregon's share outstripped that figure by 60 per cent.

Probably the major reason for this is one man, Arthur Flemming, a long-time federal executive and currently president of the University of Oregon. The U of O has operated eight poverty programs financed with more than $15 million in federal funds.

Of these, the Job Corps center at Tongue Point has been the largest, accounting for $[illegible] million. The school will operate the center for women's Job Corps under a $6.7 million contract through June, 1968. When opened in 1965 as a men's training center, Tongue Point was the first urban Corps center in the nation.

The U of O has pioneered in other national anti-poverty efforts. It was one of 18 colleges to begin training underprivileged youths for college under Upward Bound; and it is operating one of the first and largest VISTA training centers in the country.

Oregon State University has obtained $1 million in federal money for several programs, chiefly Upward Bound projects.

Another big recipient of anti-poverty money has been the Willie Vigrant League, which has operated day care centers, health programs and other efforts for migrant families with nearly $2 million.

Of the $38,190,305 spent for Oregon anti-poverty programs through March 31, the largest share has gone to the Job Corps—$21 million.

Other totals include community action programs, $8.4 million; Neighborhood Youth Corps, $5 million; work experience projects, $2.7 million; two Head-start summer programs, $708,000; VISTA, $137,000; rural loans, $223,000; and adult basic education programs, $82,000.

There is little doubt that those programs which have affected the greatest numbers of people have been judged the most successful. In Oregon as well as across the nation.

In Oregon the largest program in terms of participation has been the Neighborhood Youth Corps, in which youths are employed in community service, receiving wages from federal grants. About 9,800 Oregon young people have participated, out of a million nationally.

Next greatest involvement comes in the work experience projects for poor persons of all ages; 9,876 Oregonians have enrolled out of a national total of 172,000.

Operation Headstart, a pre-school training program for children of poor families, has operated classes for 2,400 Oregon children. The national figure is [illegible],000.

The Job Corps in Oregon, with one large urban center and six rural conservation centers, has reached 1,111 persons and about 24,000 across the nation. The VISTA program, often labeled the domestic Peace Corps, has 60 volunteers in Oregon and another 1[illegible] approved for service. The national totals are [illegible],[illegible]2 volunteers in the field and [illegible],200 more approved.

Oregon's job education programs have enrolled 50 adults of a national total of 4,000.

While some poverty projects have had notable success, others have met criticism over handling of funds and high costs. [illegible] areas of operation [illegible] and several [illegible] and the Legislature [illegible] is attempting to research the anti-poverty [illegible]

Young Negro Graduate Of Job Corps Realizes His Long Dream

BY YVONNE FRANKLIN
Mail Tribune Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (Special) — A young Negro graduate of the Job Corps camp at Tongue Point who arrived in Oregon with "a want in my mind to be somebody" has realized his dream.

Young Frank Baker arrived in Oregon in June, 1965, "not knowing what to do or how to do it." But he was determined to stick with the training, finish high [illegible] and learn a trade.

He is now an "instructor in automotive" at a job corps center in Utah. He makes $2.89 an hour, "I have a '57 Chevy and a real nice place to live."

Baker was telling about his experiences in a newspaper called The Corpsman which is published by the Office of Economic Opportunity and sent to all the volunteers in centers throughout the country who signed up to learn a trade and make a better life for themselves.

"I was a high school dropout," he wrote, "Everywhere I went to apply for a job the first question was how much education did I have. I got fed up to my neck on that question."

He decided to join the Job Corps and was sent to Oregon for training. He was the last of the boys to leave Tongue Point before it became a job training center for young girls. He praised his instructors and staff members who helped him.

"Tongue Point had some real good techniques and materials to provide a special program of basic education," he said, "It wasn't just a bowl of cherries. I had to give a little, take a little."

"Thanks a million to the vocational instructors. They have taught me to be wanted by employers."

Baker explained that he came from a family of 13 children and that "not one of my family finished high school."

"I'm the only one who has come this far in life out of my family," he said. "This is why I strived so hard and adhered to all the principles that the Job Corps had."

"I had an outstanding, above average record in the Job Corps, so I was offered seven or eight jobs as a general automotive mechanic."

Baker is employed by the Thiokol Chemical Corp. as an instructor in automotive mechanics at the Clearfield Job Corps center in Clearfield, Utah.

"Now I'm working, making good money, paying taxes and doing something I never dreamed of — teaching other Corpsmen," he wrote.

His parting advice to fellow Corpsmen was to finish their training.

"The rewards are not given to the fastest or the swiftest, but only to those who stay there and finish. This is my motto."

The Job Corps training camps, both the rural conservation camps in Oregon and the large camps for skill training, are an experiment to remove poor boys and girls, aged 16 to 21, from a poor environment and give them an opportunity to become taxpaying citizens.

Because of the cost of training, the program is in trouble with Congress. The war on poverty bill has not yet been renewed this year, but cuts are expected.

Critics of the Corps, such as Rep. Edith Green, who is a member of the House Education and Labor Committee handling the bill, think the schools could do a better job at less money for more young people.

Nun to Become Corps Official At Tongue Point

[illegible] professor of Modern [illegible] for some years [illegible] become director [illegible] at Tongue Point [illegible] ter, subject to [illegible] Office of Economic [illegible] social scientist [illegible] dell Van Loan announced Wednesday. Her appointment [illegible] pensation from [illegible] aside her nun's [illegible] civilian clothes for the Tongue Point assignment. She will also use her original [illegible] Liliana Kopp.

Dr. Kopp has [illegible] gree from Marquette [illegible] degrees in modern [illegible] political science [illegible] and Slavic languages [illegible] doctor's degree [illegible] ant. sociology from St [illegible] versity.

[illegible] and [illegible] tant professor [illegible] in [illegible] university [illegible] home [illegible] curriculum [illegible] relations [illegible] Catholic [illegible] Radio [illegible]

Dr. Kopp [illegible] Polo [illegible]

Sr. [illegible] Strange [illegible] to take [illegible] psychology [illegible] Dr. [illegible] Tongue Point [illegible] as [illegible] Miss Strange [illegible] Portland [illegible] in [illegible] June 10 for a European vacation before [illegible] Portland.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
MAY 19 1967

Tongue Point Needs Trainees

ASTORIA (UPI) — The 3-month-old Tongue Point Job Corps center here [illegible] its scheduled [illegible]

The shortage of corpswomen was disclosed this week at a conference of officials of the center and Clatsop County cities.

The recruitment schedule set at the opening of the center in March was 650 women by June 30. At present there are only 325 trainees.

Tongue Point Grad Praises Job Corps

By YVONNE FRANKLIN
Statesman
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON [illegible] sent to real good techniques and ma- [illegible] n centers terials to provide a special [illegible] throughout the country who program of basic education," [illegible] signed up to learn a trade and he said. "It wasn't just a bowl [illegible] make a better life for them of cherries. I had to give a [illegible] served in Oregon selves. little, take a little."

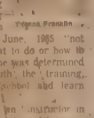
"I was a high school drop- "Thanks a million to the vo- out," he wrote. "Everywhere cational instructors. They I went to apply for a job the have taught me to be wanted first question was how much by employers."

[illegible] arrived in Ore- education did I have. I got fed Baker explained that he [illegible] 1965, "not know- up to my neck on that ques- came from a family of 13 chil- [illegible] do or how to do tion." dren and that "not one of my [illegible] get [illegible] family finished high school."

[illegible] learn a trade. Staff Praised

"I'm the only one who has [illegible] instructor on. He decided to join the Job come this far in life out of my [illegible] a Job Corps Corps and was sent to Oregon family," he said. "This is why [illegible] for training. He was the last of I strived so hard and adhered [illegible] the boys to leave Tongue to all the principles the Job [illegible] place to Point before it became a Job Corps had."

[illegible] center for [illegible] "I had an outstanding [illegible] he examples. above average record in the [illegible] staff members who Job Corps, so I was offered [illegible] helped him. seven or eight jobs as a gen- [illegible] of Ford. "Tongue Point had some real automotive mechanic."



Baker is employed by the Thiokol Chemical Corp. as an instructor in automotive mechanics at the Clearfield Job Corps center in Clearfield, Utah.

"Now I'm working, making good money, paying taxes and doing something I never dreamed of — teaching other Corpsmen," he wrote.

His parting advice to fellow Corpsmen was to finish their training.

"The rewards are not given to the fastest or the swiftest but only to those who stay there and finish This is my motto."

The Job Corps training camps, both the rural conservation camps in Oregon and the large camps for skill training, are an experiment to remove poor boys and girls, aged 16 to 21, from a poor environment and give them an opportunity to become taxpaying citizens.

Because of the cost of training, the program is in trouble with Congress. The war on poverty bill has not yet been renewed this year, but cuts are expected.

"I was a high school dropout," he wrote, "Everywhere

Recruitment Program Drags At Tongue Point

ASTORIA (special) ... than had been expected. Recruitment of corpswomen-to-be ... and Job Corps Center ... for the Tongue Point ... been in operation here ... Special ... Corps Center ... week ... conference of officials ... heads of the center and Astoria Community ...

Trouble Slight

Astoria city officials told ... Point officials they had been little trouble with ... when several ... adjustment ... Officials said they did not know why recruitment was ... March in the city and apparently ... Recruiting ... the small ... handful of organizations ... involved in ... Women In Community Service ...

Recruitment so far totals ... 359 young women, but 54 have ... gone home for various reasons. The dropout rate ... in direction of the center's ... ed to help girls adjust to ... getting more ... Women trained by community ... advisers.

Girls Average 18 Years

He ... the average age of the girls is 18.1 years, ... average ... attended ... ough the 10th grade, and ... age reaching level is that of the sixth grade.

Enrollment includes 29 per cent white girls of American descent, 18 per cent Negroes, 22 per cent of Mexican or Spanish descent, 7 per cent American Indian and 4 per cent Hawaiian center officials said.

There has been no restriction on assistance of passes to visit nearby communities and up to 65 passes have been issued each day. However, ... enrollment increases some restriction on number of passes may be needed, center officials said.

Job Corps Changes Youth's Life Fast

BRAD C. BASS

MEDFORD — From high school dropout to Job Corps trainee, then to a job in less than a year ... a transition for a 17-year-old youth.

Brad C. Bass of Medford made it when he started work this month in the General Services Administration mail pool.

Today he is hoping for a scholarship to Fullerton Junior College in the fall. He holds a record for achievement in a Job Corps Center of 2,300 boys and a general educational development certificate the equivalent of high school completion, commonly known as the GED.

THREE MONTHS

Bass went to Parks Job Corps Center in Pleasanton, Calif., near Oakland.

He had completed his sophomore year when he left high school. He didn't want to be a dropout. He liked Medford High School and was making ... on roll grades, but for financial reasons he had no choice.

He looked around for some means of continuing his education. Counseled by John Turner of the Medford Office, Oregon State Employment ...

Patricia Mullin Will be Model At Style Show

Miss Patricia Mullin of San Marcos, an enrollee at Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women, will be a fashion model in a community-wide style show designed to introduce the nearly 300 recent arrivals at the Job Corps Center to community residents.

"A French Cafe" is the theme of the style show which will be held April 28 in the Center theater.

Miss Mullin is one of 60 corpswomen who will display fashions selected from the stocks of 14 participating Astoria firms. The young women are being coached by a Portland, Ore., charm school instructor.

The program is being arranged by the Tongue Point community relations council, an organization of Astoria residents formed to facilitate communications between the center and the community.

Paul Harvey

Job Corps 'Cures' Costly

With the exception of the FBI, which recovers more than it costs, government services are no bargain.

Parkinson's Law inevitably pads federal payrolls to such an extent that for minuscule benefits we pay astronomical handling charges.

The Job Corps is spending $13,000 a year on each high school dropout while our schools spend less than $500 a year educating the average elementary schoolchild.

The Job Corps promoters insist that they are salvaging many of the million dropouts a year so that they become self-supporting, productive, taxpaying members of society.

Man, alive, at $13,000 a head they should be accomplishing something!

As Oregon's Congresswoman, Edith Green, says, if they'll "give public schools a fraction of that two billion dollars a year you could virtually eliminate dropouts by emphasizing vocational education in school!"

Presently only nine per cent of United States high schools offer good vocational programs.

A generation ago, liberal educators sold us on the notion that every young man and woman should go to college, assuming that all menial labor would soon be performed by machines.

Surely the results of this costly experiment should have convinced us by now that not every young person either wants to or will accept college.

The Job Corps is a typical government effort to erase our mistake. Yet, while we continue to apply the eraser at astronomical cost, we continue to make the mistake. We continue to de-emphasize vocational training.

Mississippi, coming from behind in education, is establishing a statewide junior college system. Students may live at home, where they are needed for farm and other work, being bussed to central junior colleges — with emphasis on vocational skills.

The cost-per-student cannot yet be accurately calculated, but will be a minute fraction of the Job Corps' per-pupil budget.

Washington officials praise the Fort Custer, Michigan, Job Corps center as one of the best in the nation. Annual budget, $8.9 million.

Of 1,400 youths who signed up at that center, 632 have quit.

Another 156 were kicked out for being AWOL.

Another 103 were discharged for various other reasons.

Another 193 were transferred.

315 graduated. That's 22 per cent of the original trainees who made it through training.

Thus, the cost per graduate is $28,254!

I have not emphasized the pox of trouble which has plagued the Job Corps centers inasmuch as the virus of trouble was in the bloodstream of this effort prior to launching.

Now they have to be "cured"; the problem should have been "prevented."

Quickly, let's cease and desist from compounding the crime. Let's re-establish courses in basic woodworking, metalworking, machine shop, electronics, auto mechanics and aircraft mechanics — in junior high and high schools.

Then the prize which youths derive from handcraft will grab them before they drop out!

A thought for the day—Scottish essayist Thomas Carlyle once said: "Adversity is something hard upon a man. But for one man who can stand prosperity there are a hundred who will stand adversity."

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Allotments Go To Dependents Of Trainees

Job Corps men and women have sent $110,200 in allotments home to needy dependents in Oregon during the past two years, announced Job Corps Director William P. Kelly.

Corps members from Washington have set home $135,600 in allotments during the same period.

The majority of those making allotments send the maximum of $25 a month, with Job Corps matching most of the allotment, Kelly said.

The share of the allotment by the Corps man or woman is taken from the $60 a month (for each month in Job Corps) readjustment allowance which is paid each youth on leaving the program.

Kelly said the first allotments were paid in March, 1965, and the monthly total has increased steadily since running at the rate of more than $1 million a month nationally since November, 1966. This brings the total to nearly $16 million in allotments sent to dependents in all 50 states.

Texas has received the largest amount in allotments—$1,-...,720. New York is second with $1,600,000 and California is third with $1,057,410.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Merchants, Schools, Groups, Individuals Sponsoring Benefit for Fairview Chapel

Sixty-four merchants, schools, organizations and individuals have lent their support in some manner to presentation of the "Chapel for Fairview" benefit concert at Astoria high school Saturday night, sponsors of the event reported.

The concert, to raise funds for construction of a chapel at Oregon's Fairview Home for the Retarded, will feature Nicaraguan pianist Antonio De Peralta playing a program of Chopin and Debussy selections, and vocal numbers by the Chorsleers of Long Beach Peninsula. Sponsors are the Clatsop County Association for the Retarded. Tongue Point Job Corps center, and the Choraleers. Corpswomen from Tongue Point will usher and assist at the reception in the high school cafeteria following the concert, which will begin at 8 p.m.

Listed as patrons and patronesses are: Mayor and Mrs. Harry Steinbock, Mr and Mrs. Paul Autio, Mr and Mrs. Desdin Bergey, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Opdyke, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Baldwin Jr., Mr and Mrs. Herman M. Haggren, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mead, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Neikes, Mr. and Mrs. I. K. Kingsbury, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Youngblood, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ruff, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Wykoff, Jeanne Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Maddox Dance Studios, Harry Truesdell, Miss Adelaine Sather, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Ballhorn, Dr. and Mrs. W. L. ...er, Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Reis, Van Loan, Lt. Col. and Mrs. ...mann, Mr and Mrs. Anthony Victor Nunenkamp, George M. Stramiello Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Glen A. Gillette.

Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hyde, Mr and Mrs. C. P. ... Everett, Mr. and Mrs. David ... Hollenback, Mr. and Mrs. Rich...

Hostesses for the reception will be the Mesdames Steinbock, Bergey, Cameron, Everett, William Fastabend, Robert Grossman, Bobby Helligso, Haggren, Johnson, Howard Kiger, Kingsbury, H. V. McAbee, Ira Miller, Neikes, Nuenkamp, Opdyke, Reimann, Roy Seeborg, Truesdell, Mead, Judy Lagerwey and Stramiello.

Tickets may be purchased at several downtown Astoria stores or at the concert door.

Signal
Beach, Calif.

Benefit concert set for Saturday

A benefit concert to help raise funds for construction of a chapel at Fairview home, Oregon's institution for the retarded, will be presented at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Astoria High school auditorium under sponsorship of the Clatsop County Association for Retarded Children, Tongue Point Job Corps center and the Choraleers.

Antonio De Peralta, Nicaraguan pianist who has played as a soloist in the Redlands, Calif., bowl, at the National Orange show and at the Greater Los Angeles music festival, will present a program of Chopin and Debussy.

The Choraleers, organized two years ago, have performed widely in the peninsula and north shore area.

Blaine Journal
Blaine, Wash.
(Cir. W. 1,838)
MAY 1 8 1967
MA 2-8312
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

CUSTER DISTRICT NEWS

Mrs. Glen Pettit, 366-2086

Guests with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wilson on Mother's Day were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kempinsky and children of Seattle and Miss Claudia McAuley of Lynden.

—o—

Gary Creasey arrived Sunday from Fort Lewis where he received basic Army training and will be here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Creasey, until the latter part of the month, when he will go to Fort Hood, Texas.

—o—

Miss Kathy Haynes spent the weekend here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Haynes and returned on Sunday to the Job Corps Center at Tongue Point, Astoria, Ore.

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Oregon Education
Portland, Oregon
MAY 19 1967

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oregon
(Cir. D. 20,845 - S. 22,045)
MAY 21 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

The winter conference of the Oregon Assn. of School Supervisors met in Gearhart during December to discuss supervisory activities and teaching, according to Alta Fosback of Newport. Margaret Woods, of Seattle Pacific College lectured on creativity and, following the conference, OASS members toured the Tongue Point Job Corps facilities.

Ex-Salem Reporter Works With Smith

WASHINGTON — A 23-year-old Fellow at the Washington Journalism Center who is interning for four months this spring as a Washington correspondent has earned praise from a high source for his articles.

Charles E. Beggs, formerly a reporter for the Salem (Ore.) Capital - Journal, was cited by Oregon's senior Senator, Democrat Wayne Morse, ...cle he wrote on the Senator's views on the Tongue Point, Ore., Job Corps Center.

Beggs's work was "as fine a representation of my views on the Job Corps and the War on Poverty as I have seen . . ." said Sen. Morse.

Charles E. Beggs is on an internship program in the office of correspondent A. Robert Smith while on fellowship at the Washington Journalism Center. He assists Smith in reporting stories from Capitol Hill and government agencies relative to Oregon and Washington.

Appears In Mail Tribune

His articles have appeared in the newspapers serviced by Smith, including the Mail Tribune.

Thus far, he has filed many stories through Smith, including a major series on the Tongue Point Center.

Beggs works in Smith's office afternoons. Weekday mornings he attends seminars and participates in special field trips with the Center's nine other Fellows.

"I've had a few illusions about news coverage in Washington shattered since I've been here," Beggs said of his experience in Smith's office and of the seminar sessions, where he has had access to some of the top names in journalism and government.

"For one thing, there seem to be two types of Washington correspondent, the readers and the getters. The readers seem satisfied with reading handouts, the getters go out for stories, try to look behind them.

Smith is A Getter

"I'm glad I've had a chance to work with Smith for that reason. He's a getter, and he's gotten after me to get the stuff."

Beggs worked for the Capital Journal before coming to the center in January. He is a graduate of the University of Oregon, where he worked for the student newspaper in five different positions — editor, managing editor, copy editor, reporter and editorial page editor.

The Washington Journalism Center is a non-profit, non-affiliated institution founded in 1965 by a group of educators and journalists to advance the study of national and international news reporting. Ten fellowships are awarded each spring and fall to young people in the making in the nation's ...

Observer
LaGrande, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,000)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

News digest

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

ASTORIA—The three-month old Tongue Point Job Corps Center has fallen behind by almost 50 percent in its scheduled recruitment program. The recruitment schedule set at the opening of the center in March was 650 women by June 30, ... present there are only 325 trainees. There have been 54 women drop-outs since the center opened.

Bulletin
Bend, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,423)
MAY 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Recruitment drops

ASTORIA (UPI) — The three-month old Tongue Point Job Corps Center has fallen behind by almost 50 per cent in its scheduled recruitment program.

The recruitment schedule set at the opening of the center in March was 650 women by June 30. At present there are only 325 trainees.

There have been 54 women drop out of the center since it opened.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Van Loan's Son Listed Missing In Viet Action

Dr. Wm. R. Van Loan, ... of Pleasant Hill ... Corps ... reported ... Van Loan ... Marine ... Vietnam.

Maj. Van Loan is ... Air Force ... Nam ... Van Loan ... Maj. ... Corps ... and ... Vietnam ... Tongue ... Vietnam said.

400 Corpswomen, Local Citizens Work on Friday Fashion Show

More than 400 people from Astoria and other walks of life are involved in the [illegible] the Tongue Point Job Corps [illegible] Astoria fashion show to be held Friday [illegible] at the Job Corps Center theater.

Tongue Point corpswomen and staff, Astoria merchants, members of women's organizations, business and professional men, and women and other citizens have served forces to present the community-wide event to benefit the corpswomen recreation [illegible].

The show is open to the public at no charge. Sponsors are the Job Corps Center's Community Relations council, Astoria Retail Merchants Business and Professional Women's club, Catholic Action Program Catholic Community Association for Retarded Children, Coast Guard Wives club, Pythian Sisters and Welcome Wagon hostesses.

Showing fashions will be young women from the Tongue Point Center, including Sandra Erma Virgil, Cheryl Vickey, Charlene Curtis, Mary Gutierrez, Carol Franklin, Wanda Hudson, Alice Bocook, Dian Young, Linda Faye Brown, Yolanda Delgado, Johnnie Hawkes, Olga Vega, Betty Sanders.

Janet Ange, Rebecca Reardon, Gerri DeBee, Pat Lack, Shirley Nhan, Erma Rodriguez, Patricia Munoz, Gwendolyn Harrell, Patsy Sandifer, Sandra Williams, Kelly Arden, Joyce Barge, Jewel Boult, Carolyn Weaver, Mary Mendoza, Burla Jean Riggs.

Sharon Chamber, Bette Jean Goodeau, Christine Graham, Audrey Henry, Claudia Tilden, Evelyn Miles, Rose Reyes, Antonia Prestegui, Bianca Tejeda and Mary Helen Gonzales.

Many Participate

Warren Grimsley is to be master of ceremonies. Dudley Goff and Mrs. Harry Stormock will be commentators. Music will be provided by Mr. Betty Jane Phillips, organist. Corpswomen Clemencia Pacheco and Judy Lagerway, charm school graduates, [illegible] Wickle will be [illegible] Ray Hanson will [illegible] as French waiters during the show.

Mrs. Jeanne Maddox has been [illegible] arranging the entertainment. Bill Johnson will [illegible] Debbie Lewis, Beverly Lunday, Mary Ellen Turner, Wood, Susan King, Dana Wilson [illegible] Sampson, James Scott, Carol Mostad, Sara Lucas, Ella Jacob, Mitzell, Karen Young, Jolly Benson, Kitty DeMasse, Carrie Nelkes.

March Jones, Linda Whitney, Harvey Mills, Grant Berman, Rhonda Moore, Allan Goff, Karen Sagen, Becky Simpson, Marilyn Ward, Jan Hedgecock, Lorena Sampson, Linda Berman, Becky Mrs. Vicki L. Beeler, Kristin Emond, Dudley Goff and Kathy Hendee.

Hostesses Named

Refreshments will be served following the show. Hostesses are to be the Mesdames Paul Baldwin, J. S. Elsbree, Alna Gough, Earl Johnson, Howard Johnson, Howard Kiger, Judy Lagerway, Carl Mead, George Moskowita, Robert Nelkes, Vernon Truesdell, Louis Washer and Lynn Wykoff.

Junior hostesses will be Alfreda Horton, Cheryl Mabe, Glenda Medlin and Rosie Reyes.

Assisting with other arrangements are Suzanne Anderson, Clemencia Pacheco, Madeleine Prinkki and Frances Sheeley, [illegible]; Dona Briley, Evalina Coloma, Irene Cox, Darcy Fowler, JoAnn Fraser, Beverly Joseph and Sharon Lynn Marshall, decorations; Suzanne Anderson, Mary Lee Haddix, Clemencia Pacheco and Madeleine Prinkki, [illegible]; Sonja Carstrom, Teresa Mejana and Betty Wood, art settings; and Autumn LePilio and Diana Knight, security.

Cheerettes will be Billie C. Crowe, Darcy Fowler, JoAnn Fraser, Elsa Johnson, Janet Johnson, Sherry Linson, Cheryl Mabe, Barbara McCutheon, Dianne L. Oswald, Donna Peters, Mary Ann Robertson, Gladys M. Scott and Florence Simhauser.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 1 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Guests Interest Xi Theta Chapter Of Beta Sorority

The two April meetings of Xi Theta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi were especially interesting to members.

Present at the first meeting, which was held at the Warren Samuel residence, were six members of the Miss Clatsop County contest introduced by Mrs. M Eastman who is in charge of the local contest.

The Cultural program for the evening centered around poetry, and after members read some of their own creations each guest was asked to read to the group her favorite poem or reading.

During the social hour which followed, tasty dessert with coffee and tea was served, and chapter members welcomed the opportunity to visit with their young guests.

The second meeting of the month, held at the Leroy Steinman home, centered around art, particularly ceramics and sculpture. Guest speaker Mike Youngblood, who teaches the subject both at the Job Corps center and at Clatsop college, brought with him several samples of ceramic ware made from local clay; also several books which he passed around and which he often referred. Youngblood answered questions for quite some time, during the social hour.

Following the regular business meeting the installation of officers for the coming year was held. Especially honored at this meeting was Mrs. Art Johnson, will be going into Alpha Preceptor chapter next fall.

The membership and social communities are busy working on the two May meetings, when new members from the two Ritual chapters will be guests. For the May 8 meeting at the John Warila residence, a "Hippie" party is being planned.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 3 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

May Fellowship Day to Feature Job Corps Panel

May Fellowship Day will be observed in Astoria with a luncheon at the First Lutheran church on 33rd and Grand at 12:15 p.m. Friday May 5. This special day is sponsored by Church Women United.

There is no charge for the luncheon, but the churches participating are reminded to bring the salads which were requested.

A panel of girls from the Tongue Point Job Corps with Mrs. Ann Catron of the arts and crafts division as their moderator, will give an insight into their work and plans for the future.

This is the last year of a planned theme which has included studies on People - Poverty - Family [illegible].

Everyone in the area is invited and babysitting will be provided.

Independent
Woodburn, Oregon
(Cir. W., 1,588)
MAY [illegible]
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Miss Gonzales Enrolled At Tongue Point

Francisca Gonzales of Woodburn enrolled at Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women, was a fashion model in a community wide style show designed to introduce the nearly 300 recent arrivals at the Job Corps Center to community residents.

"A French Cafe" was the theme of the style show which was held April 28 in the Center theater.

Miss Gonzales is one of 60 corpswomen who displayed fashions selected from the stocks of 14 participating Astoria firms. The young women are being coached by a Portland charm school instructor.

The program is being arranged by the Tongue Point Community relations council, an organization of Astoria residents formed to facilitate communications between the Center and the community.

The Tongue Point Center was recently converted to a women's center after serving as a men's Job Corps facility for two years.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 1 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Opens Shop

Rex Allison, formerly a barber at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has opened a unisex Beach barber shop in the basement of a home on Beach road with Highway 101.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
MAY 3 1 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Worth Repeating

The joint Astoria-Tongue Point style show Saturday seems to have been a highly successful cooperative venture. The crowd numbered some 700 people; the entertainment was good, and the Tongue Point girls handled as impressively well in addition to participating as efficient models.

This sort of thing was good for the girls and good for the community. Such cooperative activity can make it another tie relations between local Job Corps and make the Astoria point tol more like people who belong. We recommend there be more cooperative projects such as this one.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Parole, Probation People Visit Job Corps Here

Thirty-five northwest Oregon staff members of the Oregon State Board of Parole and Probation were spending Wednesday at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The group came here for a one-day workshop project in connection with a regional meeting held in Portland Tuesday.

The party met with counselors of the Job Corps Center, had lunch with corpswomen and toured the center.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Center to Get 40 More Girls

Approximately 40 more Job Corps girls are due this week at Tongue Point Center, where build-up to 650 enrollment by June 30 is progressing.

The number arriving this week is less than the scheduled 100 every two weeks required to reach the 650 quota on time, officials said. Apparently the opening of a new women's center at Moses Lake, Wash., May 15 will draw some women who would otherwise come here.

All those arriving this week are from west coast states.

To compensate for the short number of arrivals this week, the next group to arrive two weeks hence is tentatively set at 150 to 200 trainees, Tongue Point officials said.

Tongue Point officials announced Monday a conference with local civic leaders to be held Tuesday of next week at 11 a.m. for "interchange of ideas on the Job Corps-community relationship."

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

Corpswoman Earns License

Veronica M. Kalilhiwa of Waimanalo, Hawaii, has become the first Tongue Point Job Corpswoman to receive a federal driver's license. Miss Kalilhiwa, who held an Hawaiian driver's license before coming to Tongue Point, now is qualified to drive federally-owned vehicles both on base and to Astoria. She also will be a driver aide, assisting instructor Bruce Fraser (right) in teaching other corpswomen how to drive.

MAY 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Youth Day Participants Meet for Banquet, Dance

High school students of three Clatsop county high schools reported Friday night on their activities as government and business leaders for the day during Elks Youth day Friday.

The 35 young men and women told of becoming aware of the difficulties of managing offices and departments. Many expressed amazement after realizing how much work is needed to run the county and the city.

Following the youth day dinner held in the Elks club, a dance was held for all youth of the county in the club ballroom. The United Flight, a local band, played for the several hundred teenagers. Twenty-two girls from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center attended.

Miles Crawford, Exalted Ruler Jerry Sullivan and youth day chairman Fred Thander said the day's program was very successful in [illegible] to [illegible] how business and government operates.

Peoria, Ariz
Times
(Circ. W. 950)
MAY 5 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

To England

Victor Sittaro, former placement coordinator for Philco-Ford corporation at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has been named site manager for Philco-Ford's automatic digital network station in Oxford, England. He left Wednesday for Fort Washington, Pa., for an indoctrination program before going to England. Mrs. Sittaro will remain at Tongue Point until he can arrange housing in Oxford.

MAY 1 8 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

To Receive Degree

Bob Daggett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Daggett, of Quarters "D" Job CoCorps, Tongue Point, is among 212 students at Linfield college, McMinnville, who are candidates for degrees at commencement May 14.

Daggett will receive a bachelor of science degree in physical education.

Mary Gonzales In Fashion Show

Mary Gonzales of Peoria, an enrollee at Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women, will be a fashion model in a community-wide style show designed to introduce the nearly 300 recent arrivals at the Job Corps Center to community residents.

"A French Cafe" is the theme of the style show which will be held April 28 in the Center theater at Astoria, Oregon.

Mary is one of 60 corpswomen who will display fashions selected from the stocks of 14 participating Astoria firms. The young women are being coached by a Portland, Ore., charm school instructor.

The program is being arranged by the Tongue Point community relations council, an organization of Astoria residents formed to facilitate communications between the Center and the community.

The Tongue Point Center was recently converted to a women's center after serving as a men's Job Corps facility for two years.

Disadvantaged young women between the ages of 16-21 receive vocational training in health and social service programs, business and clerical occupations, electronics assembly and testing, drafting and food service occupations at the Tongue Point Center.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Developing Education Techniques, Beach Chamber Told

SEASIDE — "Exciting things in education are being developed at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center," said Russell McCollister, center assistant supervisor of basic reading at the chamber of commerce luncheon May 2. Accompanying McCollister were three Job Corps trainees, Gladys Swift, Louisiana, who is learning the skills of a nurse's aide; Ronda Blevins, Texas, enrolled in a business course, and Doris Harakii, Hawaii, also in nurse's aid training.

McCollister said center enrollees had a "variety of ranges of ability with some having graduated from high school but who could not speak English while others had yet to complete their high school education and even needed to be taught reading. However, educators would find that the center's educational findings would be applicable to all public schools."

McCollister said, "The center learned a lot with the boys which is also applicable to the girls. However, with the boys, our problem was to motivate them toward work and study but with the girls, our problem is to slow them down. They are far more eager to learn than the boys and most of them actively seek home work for night time. Also there are more high school graduates among the girls than there were among the boys."

McCollister said, "Even if the Job Corps training is more expensive than that obtained at Harvard, still it is small in comparison with the billions spent in foreign aid."

The girls answered a series of questions from chamber members which revealed that "most of the trainees were simply scared and wanted genuinely to be accepted by the community" and "we resent being stared at because we dress differently -- I bet you would look different were you in my part of the country." And still another bone of contention was the fact that many were told they could have beauty school training at the center which, as yet, is unavailable.

McCollister said the center offered a two-year maximum training period with the average a nine months period. However, unlike the 90 day minimum period set for the boys, there was no set period for a girl's stay. A $35 clut for clothing allowance is given each girl [illegible] week she is at the center which is followed at the end of six months period by another six clothing chit. At the end of six months, a paid trip home is given to the trainees.

According to McCollister the full total of 650 girls is expected to be reached in June with 300 enrolled now and 86 new enrollees arriving every two weeks.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
MAY 1 7 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Staff Seeking Civic Activities for Trainees

The Tongue Point staff wants to involve the Job Corps girls more deeply in civic enterprises, Dr. Harold McAbee, assistant director, told Warrenton, Astoria and Seaside officials at a luncheon session there Tuesday.

Dr. McAbee also reported that recruitment of corpswomen [illegible] enabled [illegible] officials have been advised that there has been difficulty recruiting enough young women to fill the roster. Reasons are not known.

He urged that leaders think about forming a community youth council involving corpswomen, students of the high schools and community college, and other youth groups.

So far 278 young women have arrived at the center since it was established in March, Dr. McAbee reported. There are still 325 on hand, and 36 or 34.2 per cent have gone home. This is a smaller dropout rate than had been expected. A dozen of the 54 departed girls left as result of the abortive march on the Astoria police station a few weeks ago.

Average Age 18.1

The present enrollment includes 29 per cent Caucasian, 35 per cent Negro, 22 per cent of Mexican and Spanish descent, 7 per cent American Indian, 6 per cent Hawaiian, 1 per cent Oriental.

Average age of corpswomen is 18.1 years, reading ability is at 8.2 grade level, and average education is through the 10th grade, Dr. McAbee reported.

Thirty-four per cent of the girls are from California, 13.5 [illegible] 12 per cent from Arizona, 7 per cent from Oregon and 7 per cent from Washington.

Thirty-five per cent are enrolled in health occupation training courses, 35 per cent in business occupation courses, 20 per cent in electronics assembly, 6 per cent in food services, and 4 per cent in drafting. Effort has been made to guide the girls into courses fitting their ability levels.

City Manager Dale Curry told the Tongue Point officials at Tuesday's conference that the girls have caused little trouble in town, other than the famous march on the city jail.

Dr. McAbee said there has been no restriction on issuance of passes to town, but that no more than 68 girls have been on pass into town at one time. As enrollment grows, some restriction on passes may become necessary, he added.

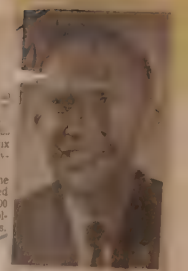
Recreation has not been as serious a problem as with men trainees, Dr. McAbee reported. Dances always draw enough male trainees from other job corps centers; there is a strong recreation program on the base and girls seem more able to amuse themselves, Mrs. Nan Fleck, Astoria, is in charge of recreation.

Girls will not wear uniforms, the Tongue Point staff reported. They will receive clothing allowances totalling $140 each at intervals through the first year they are there, and $60 more if they remain into a second year. However, [illegible] courses require only nine [illegible] to complete.

There will be 20 interns from University of Oregon school of education at the center soon, and 12 to 16 Vista volunteers will arrive in mid-June to work through the summer, assisting the present staff of 293 people. Effort is being made to have some more Vista volunteers assigned for up to [illegible] duty at the center.

Tuesday's session was one of a series of such monthly information sessions planned by Tongue Point staff for benefit of local civic officials.

The World
Coos Bay, Oregon
(Cir. D. 14,163)
MAY 9 - 1967



SYDNEY THOMPSON
Coos SWOCC Post

Thompson Quits Post At SWOCC

Thompson Quits Post At SWOCC

S. Dee D. Thompson, certain [illegible] and [illegible] Coos-Curry [illegible] director, has announced to the Tongue Point Job Corps Center [illegible] May 9 [illegible] meeting.

The board accepted with regret the resignation which will become effective at the end of this academic year. Thompson sent a letter [illegible] to accept a new position in [illegible] the Tongue Point Job Corps Center [illegible] be taking again [illegible] Dr. Wendell Lam [illegible] Lane Community College [illegible] was [illegible] SWOCC in Thompson joined the college faculty in 1962 as director of [illegible] and distributive [illegible]

[illegible] during his [illegible] Thompson and [illegible] accepted this new position because of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Superintendent Hired at S.H.

SWEET HOME Douglas V. Olds of Fairfax has been hired as school superintendent of the unified Sweet Home District 55 effective July 1.

He will replace Harold Dishaw who was given a sabbatical by the school board for the rest of his contract which is one year after one at Dishaw is in his 21st year as Sweet Home superintendent.

Olds is a graduate of Willamette University where he received a bachelor of arts degree in physical education in 1946 and a master of arts in education in 1954. He has done graduate study in administrative education at Columbia University in New York City and other graduate studies at various university workshops.

His education was interrupted when he worked for Crown Zellerbach Paper Company for two years and again when he served as a Navy pilot in the Pacific in World War II.

He won the Booth Award in athletics at Willamette.

His professional experience has covered both teaching and administration. He was superintendent of schools at Jefferson resigning to become vice principal of Lincoln High school in Portland. After three years there he was chosen superintendent of Forest Grove Union High School. And later became superintendent of schools at Astoria. After four years here he took a position as assistant superintendent of schools at Springfield with emphasis on curriculum and personnel.

In October 1964 he was hired by the University of Oregon to be director of the Tongue Point Job Training Corps for young men working in that position for two years.

He was transferred to the University of Oregon to become executive secretary for the Oregon School Study Council and to work in the Bureau of Educational Research. During this time he worked with districts in curriculum and other areas of education as well as with the research bureau.

As executive secretary of the school study council he set up visitations for member districts to schools doing outstanding work in remedial reading programs and vocational programs as well as interscholastic athletics for youngsters need these activities.

He said he will have the responsibility for the final recommendation on hiring and dismissing teachers and all other personnel. The board made the final decision.

Asked about his philosophy in education he said, "In a democracy such as ours the biggest job of the schools today is to try to educate each youngster to meet his particular needs and problems to get the youngsters to a point where each can lead a wholesome good life."

He said his experience at Tongue Point brought out "the lack of things we need to be doing stating that "50 per cent of our youngsters have the same right to a good education as the 50 per cent that go to college.

"In our junior high schools we must make a wider range of experience available.

"Youngsters have a right to get credit in an apprenticeable program for vocational work they have done in high school. New vocational fields are just starting. We must meet the needs of our young people to know about these potentials and possibilities.

He suggested that a look could be taken at a 5-3-4 program in some youngsters are becoming sophisticated earlier and there must be greater common interest between the sixth and eighth grader than between the seventh and ninth grader.

In reply to questions he said, "I look at athletics just as an advanced math or anything else. If we're going to do it we ought to do a good job." He said he would like to see a strong intramural program as well as interscholastic athletics for youngsters need these activities."

He said he will have the responsibility for the final recommendation on hiring and dismissing teachers and all other personnel. The board made the final decision.

Asked about his philosophy in education he said, "In a democracy such as ours the biggest job of the schools today is to try to educate each youngster to meet his particular needs and problems to get the youngsters to a point where each can lead a wholesome good life."

He said his experience at Tongue Point brought out "the lack of things we need to be doing stating that "50 per cent of our youngsters have the same right to a good education as the 50 per cent that go to college.

"In our junior high schools we must make a wider range of experience available.

"Youngsters have a right to get credit in an apprenticeable program for vocational work they have done in high school. New vocational fields are just starting. We must meet the needs of our young people to know about these potentials and possibilities.

DOUGLAS V. OLDS
New Superintendent

Douglas V. Olds Named District 55 Superintendent

Douglas V. Olds, former director of the Tongue Point Job Corps training center for men, was announced as the new superintendent of Sweet Home District 55 at a special meeting of the district board of directors.

Olds will take over the duties of Superintendent on July 1, starting the next fiscal year with the schools.

HE IS CURRENTLY serving the University of Oregon as executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council and works in the Bureau of Educational Research where he has had an opportunity to witness educational programs in all phases of curriculum during the past school years.

Olds holds a Masters Degree in education from Willamette University, which he obtained in 1946.

Professionally he has served as superintendent of schools in Jefferson, a position which he resigned to take a vice principal position in Portland. After three years in that position he was elected superintendent of the Forest Grove Union high school and then went to Astoria where he held a similar position.

OLDS RESIGNED to accept a position as assistant superintendent at the Springfield schools where he worked in the area of curriculum and personnel.

He resigned the position after he was named director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, a capacity in which he served for two years before being returned for his current duties when the men's center was closed.

In a press interview conducted Wednesday, Olds said he favored the 5-3-4 type educational program which the school board has adopted.

"I HAVE WORKED in just about any type of system which is in existence today, and I feel this program has the most to offer.

"However, Olds was quick to point out, "in the east, there is a growing trend to a program of 5-3-4. We seem to be discovering that it is possible that the 9th grade students have more in common with the upper grade students than they do with the junior high school age students.

"There is a growing feeling that the 6-8 grades have a greater common interest than do the 7-9 grades. This is being brought about by earlier social development in the youngsters"

OLDS ALSO discussed athletics

"They can be a very vital part of a school when [illegible] conducted. I think they should receive the same attention as do other phases of education. Intramural programs should receive the same emphasis as do the interscholastic programs. We should do just as good a job with athletics as we do with such things as English and math."

When asked about district wide kindergarten services, Olds said that he favored such programs when and if they became state supported.

"Schools do not receive funds for this age group students from

"We work at Tongue Point [illegible] a good [illegible] and [illegible] just as much right to an education as those students who will go on to college.

"We have to begin to emphasize the colleges to some degree. Or at least, we must stress the importance of those areas which have been decompressed such as custodial work, service station attendants and [illegible] collectors.

"THESE JOBS ARE just as important to our life as those of doctors and lawyers. If we can just stop and think what it would be like if we removed all the service station attendants, or all the garbage collectors and any other of the less glamorous jobs, we can see they have great importance.

"Education must continually look at the requirements of society to provide the education which society needs.

"I see our schools becoming more than educational centers. I see them, eventually as training centers."

OLDS PLEDGED to work with [illegible] as a team. "They are [illegible] settings and I am the [illegible] administrator. It will be up to [illegible] to implement the programs [illegible] and policies adopted by the [illegible]

[illegible] porters were also given an [illegible] to hear a taped interview with Olds conducted by the [illegible] board. In it, Olds outlined [illegible] philosophy of the role of [illegible]

"I think it is the role of education to meet as nearly as possible, the needs of each individual student. He must be brought to the point where he has an equal opportunity to compete for a job and a living.

"WE MUST PREPARE students to cope with a rapidly changing world, and education must also prepare itself to change with the world. We must also try to teach students their responsibilities to their school, community [illegible] and country.

DOUGLAS V. OLDS

Soroptimists Told Of Job Corps

Director of the Job Corps Training Program at Tongue Point, Dr. Lillian Vae Loan, addressed the local Soroptimist club at the regular meeting Tuesday. Dr. Vae Loan stated that he feels the Job Corps program has been successful and that the trainees who complete their training are well equipped to go out and take a useful place in society.

Some of the trainees at the center come from family situations where they have never been given full emotional support. Through the Job Corps they are encouraged

Warren Abs and Mrs. Pendra Croft will speak Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Tongue Point Center theater building. Subject will be visitors from outer space.

Pair to Speak Tonight On Outer Space Visitors

Warren Abs Woodland Wash. man named Kenneth Arnold and and Mrs. Pendra Croft Seattle, said he saw nine flying saucers who represent Northwest Coun- flying around Mt Rainier cil of World Wide Watch an The are also preparing peti- organizat on dedicated to keep- tions to the president and Con- ing track of visitors from outer gress calling for national laws space will lecture tonight at governing space travel, board 8 on the Tongue Point Center of inquiry for all space matters theater building. The lectures and a comment period to deal will be open to the public with space matters and space

Abs and Mrs. Croft are on a visits lecture tour in the interests of World Wide Watch Week when flying saucers are expected to visit the country. It is the 20th anniversary of the day when a

100 Job Corps Girls to Arrive

Approximately 100 more Job Corps girls are due Wednesday at Tongue Point Center, officials reported today.

Nine girls, all from Oregon, arrived Monday, including three from Astoria. Credentials for 117 more have been received, which will probably mean about 100 will actually arrive, officials said.

Present enrollment is 325. The new arrivals will put the total well over 400. Enrollment of 650 by June 30 is sought.

Son Of Job Corps Director Missing

ASTORIA (UPI) — Maj. Jack Van Loan, son of Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has been reported missing in action in North Vietnam.

Maj. Van Loan, an Air Force pilot, was flying over North Vietnam in combat when his plane was hit and caught fire. He was reported seen parachuting to the ground.

Dr. and Mrs. Van Loan have been informed that he is presumably a prisoner in North Vietnam, Tongue Point officials said.

Spokane, Wash. Chronicle (Cir. 71,065)

MAY 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Pilot Believed Prisoner

ASTORIA (UPI)—Maj. Jack Van Loan, son of Dr Wendell Van Loan, director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has been reported missing in action in North Vietnam.

Maj. Van Loan, an Air Force pilot, was flying over North Vietnam in combat when his plane was hit and caught fire. He was reported seen parachuting to the ground.

Dr. and Mrs. Van Loan have been informed that he is presumably a prisoner in North Vietnam, Tongue Point officials said.

Couple Here Given Word

Van Loan, an Air Force pilot, was flying over North Vietnam in combat when his plane was hit and caught fire S... He was reported seen parachuting to the ground.

... Van Loan, father of ... 2570 W. 22nd Ave., Eugene. His father, a professor of education at the University of Oregon is currently director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center and his mother serves as a counselor at the U of O and coordinator of women's programs for the Division of Continuing Education.

Bulletin Bend, Oregon (Cir. D 7,423)

MAY 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Oregon flyer missing in N. Vietnam action

ASTORIA (UPI) — Maj. Jack Van Loan, son of Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has been reported missing in action in North Vietnam.

Maj. Van Loan, an Air Force pilot, was flying over North Vietnam in combat when his plane was hit and caught fire. He was reported seen parachuting to the ground.

Dr. and Mrs. Van Loan have been informed that he is presumably a prisoner in North Vietnam, Tongue Point officials said.

Idaho Daily Statesman (Cir. D 39,602 S 48,405)

MAY 24 1967

Est 1888

Major Taken Prisoner

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — A Corvallis major, Jack Van Loan, is missing in action in Vietnam. The D...

North Vietnam and taken prisoner. He had been flying Phantom jets out of Laos. Van Loan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Van Loan, the director of Oregon's Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Pilot Missing In Vietnam

... The Pentagon announced that Maj. Jack L. Van Loan of ... vallis, Ore., is missing in ... in Vietnam.

Van Loan is the son of Wendell Van Loan, director of Oregon's Tongue Point Job Corps Center. Officials at ... said Mr. and Mrs. Van Loan were notified their son had been shot down over North Vietnam and taken prisoner.

The Air Force major attended Corvallis High School and Oregon State University.

He had been flying phantom jets out of Laos.

East Oregonian Pendleton, Oregon

MAY 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Three-day state meet slated for Pendleton

"Human Conservation — Our Mutual Challenge" will be the theme of the 18th annual Institute of the Oregon chapter of the International Association of Personnel in Employment Security in Pendleton May 25-27. The meeting is sponsored jointly with Blue Mountain Community College.

Speakers at the opening session on Thursday afternoon at the college auditorium will include Horace Armeni, Ontario, president of the Eastern Oregon IAPES subchapter; Caroline Minthorn, Umatilla Indian Agency; and Elmer Benson, Milton-Freewater, general chairman of the meeting. Welcome to Pendleton will be by Mayor Eddie O. Knopp and response by Al Westwood of Portland, IAPES president.

Other speakers will include J. N. Peet of Salem, Department of Employment commissioner; Eldon Cone of Salem, Oregon State Employment Service director; Wallace McCrae, Blue Mountain Community College president; David Baldwin, community services officer for the Umatilla Indian Agency; Robert A. Freeman, assistant superintendent of the Washington State Penitentiary at Walla Walla; and Ernest Cristler, director of special education for the Umatilla County Intermediate Education District.

Participants on the second day at the Pendleton Country Club will be J. A. Norton, area supervisor; Floyd Baxter of Salem, supervisor of the benefits section; Diana McColl, counselor in the center life program, Tongue Point Job Corps Center; David Raynalds, director of extended education for BMCC; T. M. Barber, clinical director of Eastern Oregon Hospital and Training Center; H. O. Roessler, Portland area supervisor for the Department of Employment; Joyce Gorham and Chalmers Jones, Youth Opportunity Center, Portland; and Tom Enright, executive secretary, Oregon State Employes' Association, Salem.

Klamath Falls, Oregon (Cir. D 14,170 S 14,266)

MAY 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Job Corp Recruit

Carolyn Combs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Riley Combs, 732 Spruce Street, has been sworn into the Job Corps. She is the fourth Job Corps recruit from Klamath Falls to enter the Tongue Point Center at Astoria and the first to be screened by the newly organized Women in Community Service, Inc. (WICS). Performing the swearing-in ceremony is Ron Lindh, a forester for Winema National Forest.

The World Coos Bay, Oregon (Cir. D 13,630)

MAY 24 196...

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Van Loan's Son Believed POW

ASTORIA (UPI) — Maj. Jack Van Loan, son of Dr. Wendell Van Loan, director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has been reported missing in action in North Vietnam.

Maj. Van Loan, an Air Force pilot, was flying over North Vietnam in combat when his plane was hit and caught fire. He was reported seen parachuting to the ground.

Dr. and Mrs. Van Loan have been informed that he is presumably a prisoner in North Vietnam, Tongue Point officials said.

The Tower Marylhurst, Ore. MAY 25 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Dean Says Farewell

Dear Seniors,

You will be leaving Marylhurst this year and so will I. This we have in common, but I believe that we have much more! Together we may recall at random numberless shared experiences that evoke memories of Marylhurst in action. These past events: leadership conferences; the art exhibits; snow falling at the Christmas banquet; the Gabriel Marcel and Dr. Henry Bugbee lectures; faculty-student dialogue on freedom and authority, "God is dead," and Tongue Point; Mass at O'Hara -Thompson; the Institutional Analysis; "Creation Day." These common scenes: the fountain, favorite back-drop for snapshots; the white birch lining the driveway; Marylhurst heights silouetted against the evening sky; green lawns in the rain; the trees, beautiful in all seasons; and the shrine of Our Lady of Marylhurst.

These memories and many more bind us to Marylhurst. But a tie that is even stronger than any or all of these is an attiude of life that I trust we share. Daily and continued happiness in life is achieved by using one's talents and abilities, whether they are great or small, in service of others. Strange to say, self-fulfillment is in direct proportion to forgetfulness of self. This is another way of saying that all our appreciation of truth, of beauty, and of goodness expresses itself in LOVE.

My Prayer for you at graduation is Saint Paul's: May Christ find a dwelling place through faith, in your heart; may your life be rooted in love, founded in love . . . May you be filled with all the completion God has to give.

Sister M. Eloise Anne
Dean of Studies.

The Tower Marylhurst, Ore. MAY 25 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Sister Audrey To Leave, Go To Job Corps

Sr. M. Audrey Kopp will leave Marylhurst to become associate director of center life at the University of Oregon Job Corps project at Tongue Point. She will be there for a year beginning July 1.

Her work on the administrative staff will entail the direction of 55 personnel and 600 girls. Sister's areas will be guidance and counseling and resident living. Her contract is renewable.

Sister will be known as Dr. Kopp and will be wearing secular dress. She has assumed this work in the spirit of Vatican II. As a member of the Sisters of the Holy Names, founded with the mandate to teach young people, especially the poor, Sister stated that her appointment is an example of a contemporary need met within the community's specific orientation.

Cle Elum, Wash. Northern Kittitas County Tribune (Cir. W. 2,248)

MAY 25 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

IN JOB CORPS

Miss Lois Dorning, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray S. Dorning of Cle Elum left Wednesday morning for Tongue Point, Oregon, where she has joined the Job Corps.

Miss Dorning finished her freshman year in high school and will complete her high school and prepare for the future at Tongue Point.

Daily Astorian Astoria, Oregon (Cir D ...)

MAY 25 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Trainees Arrive At Tongue Point

Eighty-six Job Corpswomen recruits have arrived this week at Tongue Point Job Corps Center and two more are due tonight, for a total of 88 for the week, officials there said Thursday.

This input of young women puts total enrollment just over the 400 mark.

The Job Corps is aiming at a total between 600 and 650 by June 30, which means that more than 100 will have to be brought in on each of the two scheduled June allotments of new corpswomen. All the week's arrivals are from the west coast.

The Oregonian Portland, Oregon (Cir D 240,362 - S 384,694)

MAY 25 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Parents Feel Pilot Still Alive

EUGENE (Special) — The parents of an Oregon flier, ... who was shot down over North Vietnam last Saturday and taken prisoner, have faith ... sometime last Saturday, offi- ... "our son will be returned to ... officials said.

... a veteran of many flying ... ed from Corvallis High S... hool ... parents of Maj. Jack L. Van Loan, 35, ... and Oregon State University. ... He took ROTC at OSU then ... action. His F-4C Phantom jet ... was shot down over Vietnam ... he became a career officer in the Air Force.

He has been ... Maj. Van Loan of Corvallis ... flights ... the son of Mr. and Mrs. ... the Pentagon said.

Wendell Van Loan of Eugene ... We have every reason to ... of Oregon's Tongue Point J... believe Jack is still alive and ... Corps Center. ... will come back all right," said ... Van Loan's mother Wednes- ...

Mail Tribune Medford, Oregon (Cir. D 20,845 - S 22,045)

MAY 21 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Tongue Point Behind In Recruitment Effort

ASTORIA (UPI) — The three-months-old Tongue Point Job Corps Center has fallen behind its planned 90 per cent in its scheduled recruitment program.

The recruitment schedule set at the opening of the center in March was 600 women by June 30. At present there are only 35 [illegible]

JOB CORPS INVITES AXE

The Johnson administration is looking around to save money anywhere to pay for the war. Sooner or later it will take seriously the complaint of Congresswoman Edith Green that the per student cost in Job Corps training is very high. When the day arrives Astoria will be confronted with trying to preserve both of its main federal establishments, the Job Corps and the Maritime Fleet.

Perhaps the time has already arrived for this community to prepare a case for the Job Corps here. Mrs. Green has made a strong case against the high cost of Job Corps training and contends public schools could provide the same education at much less cost.

This argument is obviously effective. The Job Corps adminstration however has done nothing effective to counteract it. In fact the national leadership of the Job Corps has again provided Mrs. Green with more ammunition. The per pupil cost for the Tongue Point center is rising fantastically because it has more difficulty than ever before to get students. At present the students exceed staff members, but only by 325 to 293. Some 30 or so volunteers from the University of Oregon are to increase the teaching force. Unless more recruits arrive, the count will remain at about one enrollee to one staff members. It is obvious Mrs. Green will have more to say about high costs.

Since the money saving ax will certainly be swining around the Job Corps neck with the war continuing indefinitely, the only effective defense against chopping off heads at Tongue Point will be economical administration. And that can't be realized without more enrollees. Why they aren't being sent here is a matter that should get the attention of our senators and representatives before Mrs. Green gets into action again.

FRANCES SHEELEY MODELS, ASTORIA FASHION SHOW

Frances Sheeley of Hamilton, an entrant at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, last week was a fashion model in a commentary-show style show designed to showcase the items now recently arrived at the Job Corps Center in comfortably resistant.

A Parker Cafe with the theme of the Hyde show which was held Apparel of the Center theatre.

Thanks to one of 30 companies who displayed fashions selected from the stocks of all participating Astoria firms. The young women were coached by a Portland Oregon charm school instructor.

The program was arranged by the Astoria Postal community relations concern, an organization of Astoria residents, formed to facilitate communications between the Center and the community.

The Tongue Point Center was recently converted to a women's center after serving as a male Job Corps facility for two years.

Young women between the ages of 16-21 receive vocational training in health and social service programs, business and clerical occupations, electronics assembly and testing, drafting and food service occupations at the Tongue Point Centre.

Daily Journal of Commerce
Portland, Oregon
Circ. D 4,664)

JUN 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Renovation Set At Tongue Point

Bids will be received by the Oregon State Board of Education in the Veterans Building in Salem until 2 p.m. on Friday, June 9, for the rehabilitation of buildings Q-1 and Q-2 at Tongue Point for Army Reserve use.

Plans and specifications can be seen at the Physical Plant office on the campus of Oregon College of Education in Monmouth.

The contract is more fully detailed in an advertisement on Page 7.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 1 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

White Named To Philco Post At Tongue Point

Lloyd H. White, former manager of the flight control operations department for National Aero Space Administration in Houston Tex., has been named assistant director of Philco-Ford's vocational education program at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

White was in an affiliated with NASA the last seven years. He was a flight controller for manned space flight prior to becoming manager of the department.

Flight control operations concern maintaining communications with space craft while it is in orbit. Philco-Ford holds the contract for this phase of the NASA space program.

Although White constantly worked with the first seven astronauts, became well acquainted with them and contracted several who were in flight control, he said he was "the most unglamorous part — the hard - work part.

He has worked on Mercury, Apollo and Gemini projects.

For the past 20 years he has been associated with federal aerospace programs as a teacher of engineering and instruction. A World War II veteran, he attended Kemper Military Academy at Boonville, Mo.

He replaces Bob Job Corps Counselor Jacobs.

White and his daughter Bobette are making their home at 10 Ninth Ap. 1

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

To Visit Point — Sen Wayne Morse will visit Tongue Point Job Corps Center at 11 a.m. Friday on his way into town for the Clatsop college dedication ceremonies at 2 p.m. Job Corps officials said today. Greeting Morse with Tongue Point officials will be Mayor Harry Steinbock, chamber of commerce President Charles Wood, county commissioner Chairman Hiram Johnson and other local officials.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 8 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

90 More Join Tongue Point

[illegible] of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center arrived Wednesday night, in addition to 53 enrollees who arrived earlier in the week.

The arrivals this week bring the enrollment to 390. Job Corps officials said.

The center needs 120 more enrollees to reach its 650 quota [illegible] June 1 [illegible] Wednesday's arrivals [illegible] last before the June 30 deadline.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 2 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Former NASA Manager Gets Tongue Point Job

ASTORIA (UPI) — Lloyd H. White, former manager of the flight control operations department for the National Aero-Space Administration, (NASA) in Houston, Tex., has been named assistant director of Philco-Ford's vocational education program at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 2 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

202 Trainees Assigned to Job Corps Here

Tongue Point Job Corps Center has received names of 202 new trainees assigned to arrive there next week, but officials there said they expect about 165 actually to arrive.

"We usually get about 80 per cent of those recruited and assigned," said Lynn Wykoff, community relations director.

The new trainees will include 100 from the San Francisco recruiting center, 76 from Atlanta, Ga., and 24 from Chicago.

The arrivals should bring total enrollment near 500 with 150 more needed to reach the 650 total sought by the Job Corps for July 1.

The Job Corps Center also received word this week that Sen. Wayne Morse will visit there at 11 a.m., Friday, June 9, when he comes to Astoria for the Clatsop college dedication ceremonies.

Robert Daggett, assistant director for general education, has resigned and will leave Tongue Point in July to become principal of a new high school in Petaluma, Calif. Daggett came to Tongue Point last July from [illegible] high school near Portland.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 8 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Head of Women's Job Corps Quits

Dr. Ruth B. Washington, director of Women's Job Corps Centers, is resigning to accept an appointment as professor of education at the City university of New York, announced officials at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Dr. Washington visited the Tongue Point Center and met with Astoria civic leaders last February.

In her new post, in addition to teaching and research in the City College School of Education, she will assist in establishing closer college - community ties by working with community school groups and community organizations, particularly in the Harlem area.

She also was recently appointed a member of Mayor Lindsay's Committee on Decentralization of New York City Public Schools. She is wife of Walter E. Washington, chairman of the New York City Housing Authority.

Mail-Tribune
Medford, Oregon
(Cir. D 20,034 - S 21,257)

JUN 2 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Former NASA Manager Gets Tongue Point Job

ASTORIA (UPI) — Lloyd H. White, former manager of the flight control operations department for the National Aero-Space Administration, (NASA) in Houston, Tex., has been named assistant director of Philco-Ford's vocational education program at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 2 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees Assigned to Job Corps Here

Tongue Point Job Corps Center has received names of 202 new trainees assigned to arrive there next week, but officials there said they expect about 165 actually to arrive.

"We usually get about 80 per cent of those recruited and assigned," said Lynn Wykoff, community relations director.

The new trainees will include 100 from the San Francisco recruiting center, 76 from Atlanta, Ga., and 24 from Chicago.

The arrivals should bring total enrollment near 500 with 150 more needed to reach the 650 total sought by the Job Corps for July 1.

The Job Corps Center also received word this week that Sen. Wayne Morse will visit there at 11 a.m., Friday, June 9, when he comes to Astoria for the Clatsop college dedication ceremonies.

Robert Daggett, assistant director for general education, has resigned and will leave Tongue Point in July to become principal of a new high school in Petaluma, Calif. Daggett came to Tongue Point last July from [illegible] high school near Portland.

Eett Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,138)

JUN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

ASTORIA (AP) — Robert Daggett, associate director in charge of programming at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has resigned to become principal of a new high school in Petaluma, Calif.

Washington Co. News-Times
Forest Grove, Oregon
(Cir. W 4,179)

JUN 8 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corpsman Enters College

Custer Corpsman Michael Haskew, son of Mrs. Evelyn Haskew, Route 2, Cornelius, has been accepted as a fulltime student at Kellogg Community College, Battle Creek, Mich.

He has selected courses related to science research.

Haskew, whose vocation at Custer is electrical and appliance repair, transferred to Custer Center from Tongue Point Center when it was converted to a Woman's Job Corps Center.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 6 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Clothing Stores Tally $154,540 From Job Corps

Astoria clothing stores have received $154,540 from purchases by Tongue Point Job Corpsmen and women since the center was established in 1965, according to figures released by officials at the Job Corps Center.

Of this amount, $135,284 was spent by corpsmen and $19,256 spent by the corpswomen since their arrival March 14.

All Job Corps members receive a special allowance with which to buy clothing during their stay. Each corpswoman receives a $140 allowance. Of this, $35 is distributed four times during a nine - month period.

She receives her first $135 within 10 days after she arrives at the Center, then another $35 allowance at two months, six months and nine months. An additional $60 is given a corpswoman after she has been at the center one year.

Surplus WAVE clothing also is issued the young women when they enroll at Tongue Point. They include a raincoat one white and one blue cotton blouse, blue shorts, navy blue skirt, blue polyester skirt, navy blue sweater, blue pleated skirt, navy blue slacks and a gray sweatshirt.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Gets 53 New Trainees

Fifty-three new Job Corps trainees arrived from the Atlanta, Ga., recruiting center at Tongue Point Tuesday, bringing total enrollment to 443, Job Corps officials reported.

Another 100 to 125 are expected tonight, 100 of them from the western states and 25 from the Chicago area.

There will be one more "big" push of trainee recruits (two) weeks from now, prior to the July 1 deadline when the Tongue Point Center is expected to have a total of 650 on hand to meet requirements of a new federal law. This law specifies 25 per cent of total Job Corps enrollment shall be females.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,870)

JUN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Director Quits

ASTORIA (AP)—Robert Daggett, associate director in charge of programming at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has resigned to become principal of a new high school in Petaluma, Calif.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)

JUN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Takes New Post

ASTORIA (UPI — Robert Daggett, associate director in charge of the Job Corps program at Tongue Point, is resigning to accept a job as principal at a new high school in Petaluma, Calif.

Mail-Tribune
Medford, Oregon
(Cir. D 20,034 - S 21,257)

JUN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

DIRECTOR AIDE QUITS

ASTORIA (UPI) — Robert Daggett, associate director in charge of the Job Corps program at Tongue Point, is resigning to accept a job as principal at a new high school in Petaluma, Calif.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,563 - S 384,634)

JUN 8 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Center Waits 200 Trainees

ASTORIA (Special) — The Job Corps has sent to Tongue Point Center officials the names of 202 additional trainees due to arrive next week.

Tongue Point officials said normally about 80 per cent of those assigned here usually arrive, so they expect 165 to show up. One hundred are coming from San Francisco, 74 from Atlanta, Ga., and 28 from Chicago, Tongue Point officials said.

Enrollment now stands at around 300. The Job Corps is trying to reach 650 total enrollment by the end of June.

Tongue Point officials also reported Friday that Robert Daggett, assistant director for general education, will leave in July to become principal of a new high school in Petaluma, Calif. Daggett came to Tongue Point last July from a post as principal of David Douglas High School near Portland.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,348)

JUN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

In School Post

ASTORIA (AP) — Robert Daggett, associate director in charge of the program at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has resigned to become the principal of a high school in Petaluma, Calif. Daggett formerly was principal of David Douglas High School near Portland.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,348)

JUN 13 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corps Job Filled

ASTORIA (AP) — Dr. Dorothy M. Burns of Cabrillo College, Aptos, Calif., was named Monday director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center where some 550 young women are enrolled. Her appointment is effective July 1. She will succeed Dr. Wendell Van Loan who held the position temporarily after the resignation last fall of the center's first director, Douglas V. Olds. Mrs. Burns is married and has two children.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 148,403)

JUN 13 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Chief Named

ASTORIA (UPI) — Dr. Dorothy Burns of Cabrillo College in Aptos, Calif., Monday was named director of the Tongue Point Woman's Job Corps Center here. The appointment is effective July 1.

Dr. Burns will succeed Dr. Wendell Van Loan, who has held the post since the middle of last year. He will return to his duties as professor of education at the University of Oregon and executive secretary of the Oregon School Student Council.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Gets 53 New Trainees

Fifty-three new Job Corps trainees arrived from the Atlanta, Ga., recruiting center at Tongue Point Tuesday, bringing total enrollment to 443, Job Corps officials reported.

Another 100 to 125 are expected tonight, 100 of them from the western states and 25 from the Chicago area.

There will be one more "big" push of trainee recruits (two) weeks from now, prior to the July 1 deadline when the Tongue Point Center is expected to have a total of 650 on hand to meet requirements of a new federal law. This law specifies 25 per cent of total Job Corps enrollment shall be females.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon

JUN 8 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

DIRECTOR RESIGNS

ASTORIA (AP)—Robert Daggett, associate director in charge of programming at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has resigned to become principal of a new high school in Petaluma, Calif.

Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,582 - S 384,634)

JUN 13 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Girls Arrive

ASTORIA (AP) — The arrival of 88 girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps center this week brought the total enrollment to 400 women.

Officials at the center said they want to have 650 girls by the end of June.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon

NAY

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Grows

ASTORIA (AP) — The Job Corps center at Tongue Point hopes to have 650 girls by the end of June. The arrival of 88 girls this week boosted the enrollment to 400 women.

Rolls Increase At Job Center

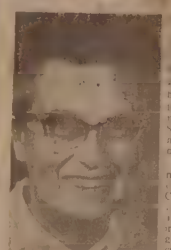
ASTORIA (Special) — Eighty - eight new corpswomen arrived this week at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, bringing total enrollment above 400, official said Thursday.

Job Corps officials are aiming at a total enrollment of around 650 by June 30, when a new federal law will require that 25 per cent of total Job Corps enrollment be women.

Tongue Point was converted from a men's to a women's center last February.

Officials said recruiting of corpswomen has been slower than had been anticipated.

Tongue Point Center Gets Woman Director



DR. DOROTHY M. BURNS

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene (Special) — Dr. Dorothy M. Burns of Cabrillo College in Aptos, Calif., has been named director of the Tongue Point Job Corps center, Office of Economic Opportunity officials and the University of Oregon announced Monday.

Dr. Burns will succeed Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan as center director on July 1, the an[illegible]

[illegible] Junior College, a bachelor of science degree from the University of [illegible] received her master of arts at San Diego State College, and her doctorate at the University of Oregon.

She has held teaching or administrative positions at the University of Oregon, an at Chula Vista, La Mesa and [illegible] Calif., her [illegible] at Cabrillo College have been in the areas of counseling and guidance, as a scholastic committee chairman, development fund administrator, and English instructor.

Dr. Burns is married and has two children. Her husba[illegible]

OREGON [illegible]

[illegible] of the Oregon [illegible] Council.

Dr. Burns will be the th[illegible] educator to head the [illegible] Point administration [illegible] first dirtctor, from Decem[illegible] 1964 to Se[illegible] former brought reminded the conferees ...

Teaching Panels Save Class Time

Picture on Page 1)

... Any ... assistance ... panel when he needs help in working a student."

... He told the teachers that his ... program applies to about any ... subject ... grade ... I tried the program at first in ... and is a ... success today ... control system ... Other guests have included ... Law Lucas, director of VISTA ... training in the University of ... the ... Vincent, head of ... at Oregon ... State University and Hal Mc... Irving, a variety of ideas and ... materials and making them ... Tongue Point Job Corps Center, ... available to students in the ... classroom."

... Thursday session will be at ... Wauna Lower Hall and Fri... day's will be at Wauna.

A teacher for 11 years, Al ...

The conference is sponsored ... State Department of Education, the Salem, Astoria District and the University of Oregon.

DOROTHY M. BURNS

Woman Gets Tongue Point Post on July 1

The Tongue Point Job ... a woman ...

The Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) and Univer... sity of Oregon, which operates the center on the Tongue Point ... of Astoria, announced ... to the ... Burns ... education at the U of O and executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council.

The Tongue Point Center at Astoria ... opened to a women's center this March, after two years as a men's center. It offers basic education courses and vocational classes to "disadvantaged" young women in the 16-21 bracket.

The new director was an instructor in English, administrator of the development fund, chairman of the scholarship committee, and did work in counseling and guidance at Cabrillo College. She holds a doctorate in education from the University of Oregon.

Mrs. Burns has two children. Her husband is an insurance broker.

She will be Tongue Point's third director.

JUN 14 1967

Allen's P.C.B.

Job Corps Center Liked By Astorians

ASTORIA (UPI) — Almost drew favorable response from 70 per cent of Astorians likely 69 per cent of these respondents the Job Corps and the Tongue Point Center will continue to oppose the project, 5 per cent opposed the project, an Oregon, operated by University of Oregon under a contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity.

About 5 per cent of Astoria's approximately 10,000 residents were mailed questionnaires. About half of those receiving the questionnaire replied. They expressed gratification at this evidence of local approval.

The question "Do you favor the location of the Job Corps Center in Point Job Corps Center?" was answered Monday by Dr. Burns who will succeed Dr. Wendell Van Loan as center director July 1, the announcement said.

Dr. Burns has a wide background in work with disadvantaged persons. She holds a BA degree from Indiana State college and a BS from University of Illinois, received her MA at San Diego State college, and doctrate at University of Oregon.

She has held teaching or administrative positions at the University of Oregon and at Chula Vista, La Mesa, and Long Beach, Calif. Duties at Cabrillo college have been in counseling and guidance as scholarship committee chairman, development fund administrator and English instructor.

Dr. Burns is married, with two children. Her husband is an insurance broker.

Dr. Van Loan, who has served as director at Tongue Point since mid-1966, will return to duties as professor of education at the University of Oregon and executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council.

Dr. Burns becomes the third director to head the Tongue Point administration. First director from December, 1964, to September, 1966, was Douglas Y. Olds, former Astoria superintendent of schools, who now is superintendent of schools at Sweet Home, Ore.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
Cir. D 13,241

JUN 13 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

JOB CORP DIRECTOR

ASTORIA (AP)—The new director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for women will be Dorothy M. Burns of Cabrille College, Aptos, Calif. Her appointment was announced Monday and will be effective July 1. She succeeds Wendell Van Loan who held the position temporarily after the resignation last fall of the center's first director Douglas V. Olds.

FROM WASHINGTON

Herald & News
Klamath Falls, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B.

Job Corps Post Gets New Chief

ASTORIA (UPI) — Dr. Dorothy Burns of Cabrillo College in Aptos, Calif., has been named director of the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center near here.

The appointment is effective July 1.

Dr. Burns will succeed Dr. Wendell Van Loan, who has held the post since the middle of last year. He will return to his duties as professor of education at the University of Oregon and executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council.

Dr. Burns' duties at Cabrillo College have been in the areas of counseling and guidance.

Meanwhile, a recent survey showed that almost 70 per cent of Astorians like the Job Corps center here. About 5 per cent of the approximately 10,000 residents were mailed questionnaires. About half of these replied with 69 per cent favoring the center and 31 per cent opposed.

Medford, Oregon
(Cir. D 20,034 - S 21,257)

Tongue Point Job Corps Head Named

ASTORIA (UPI) — Dr. Dorothy Burns of Cabrillo College in Aptos, Calif., has been named director of the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center near here.

The appointment is effective July 1.

Dr. Burns will succeed Dr. Wendell Van Loan, who has held the post since the middle of last year. He will return to his duties as professor of education at the University of Oregon and executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council.

Dr. Burns' duties at Cabrillo College have been in the areas of counseling and guidance.

Meanwhile, a recent survey showed that almost 70 per cent of Astorians like the Job Corps center here. About 5 per cent of the approximately 10,000 residents were mailed questionnaires. About half of these replied with 69 per cent favoring the center and 31 per cent opposed.

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,138)

JUN 13 1967

ASTORIA (AP)—The new director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for women will be Dorothy M. Burns of Cabrillo College, Aptos, Calif. Her appointment was announced Mon...

JUN 13 1967

Job Center Chief Named

ASTORIA — New director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center is Dr. Dorothy M. Burns of Cabrillo College at Aptos, Calif. She will succeed Dr. Wendell Van Loan as director of the women's center July 1.

Dr. Burns has held teaching or administrative positions at University of Oregon and at Chula Vista, La Mesa and Long Beach, Calif. She serves as scholarship committee chairman, development fund administrator and English instructor at Cabrillo College.

Dr. Van Loan ... will return to University of Oregon as professor of education.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon

JUN 14 1967

Republicans Put It On The Line

First with the Quie bill for federal aid to public schools, and now with their "Opportunity Crusade," Republicans in the U.S. House of Representatives are showing activist tendencies which should prove to be good for the party and good for the nation.

In both instances, GOP House members countered administration bills to continue and expand major phases of President Johnson's domestic program with measures of their own embracing the same objectives. Their way, say the Republicans, would get the same results more effectively, or at less cost, or both.

There is no better way, probably, for an opposition party to buck an activist administration backed by a consensus. And some of President Johnson's antipoverty programs are particularly vulnerable to this form of attack, being crash programs plowing new ground in the field of federal operations. Thus a certain amount of waste has been inevitable and the initial results in some instances open to question — enough so at least to make any alternative blueprint for achieving the desired results worth a close look.

A parade of administration officials is appearing before Congress this week to defend the Economic Opportunity Amendments ... and with outright opposition ... with the Republican anti-poverty measure. The attack is aimed not at the antipoverty objectives but at what appear to be the most vulnerable points. The GOP plan would do away with Sargent Shriver's Office of Economic Opportunity, and distribute antipoverty administration among other agencies, coordinated through a Council of Economic Opportunity Advisers to the President.

The Republicans also would replace the controversial Job Corps with an Industry Youth Corps operated through vocational schools with the help of private industry. The more popular Head Start program and Neighborhood Youth Corps would be retained.

The difference in the cost of the two programs is not large by current fiscal standards: $2.06 billion plus $300 million in state and local matching funds for the administration amendments, against $1.7 billion in federal money and $700,000 in matching funds for the Republican plan.

Thus, in effect, House Republicans are documenting the ancient contention that "we can do it better" by laying their own program on the line.

Administration tactics so far have been to meet the attack head on. If the GOP can sell its blueprint, the political victory will be as complete as if the antipoverty war itself—rather than its conduct, had been at issue.

Win or lose, it's a positive approach, and a type of competition for results that the two-party system calls for but doesn't always bring forth.

JUN 13 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Getting Used to Them

Results —of a recent survey indicating widespread public approval of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center were naturally gratifying to center officials.

The survey, in which questionnaires were mailed to about 500 Astorians whose names were selected from the telephone directory, was taken in May, nearly three months after Tongue Point was adapted from a men's to a women's center. This timing may have had some effect on results.

Women at the Job Corps center blend into the community so well that it is difficult to pick them out of the crowd on downtown streets. Apparently few of them wear any uniform type of clothing for their trips to town, while men trainees were readily identifiable by Job Corps blazers, focusing much public attention on them.

Recent announcement that women at Tongue Point would not be issued any uniform clothing perhaps was aimed at making them less obtrusive.

With the change to a women's center whose trainees are carefully screened and generally well behaved, Tongue Point has faded somewhat from public awareness. Girls at the center have said they have received little friendliness from Astorians; also they have received little condemnation.

Results of the survey indicate that Tongue Point Job Corps center is settling into a niche in the minds of Astorians. The often-critical public eye has shifted elsewhere.

WASHINGTON
Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
SEATTLE
Portland
San Francisco - Los Angeles

Ilwaco Tribune
Ilwaco, Wash.
(Cir. 996)

MORE TRAINEES ARRIVE

Latest assignment of girls to the Tongue Point Job Corps Center boosts the total enrollment to nearly 500, with another 150 needed to reach the 650 goal set for July 1st. The latest trainees are from San Francisco, Atlanta and Chicago.

Survey Indicates Astorians Like Job Corps Center Here

A ... survey ... 70 per cent — ... dents like the ... hope the Tongue ... will continue to ... or corpswomen in their ... a survey indicates.

A scientifically - conducted ... polling of a five per cent ... ment of Astoria's approximate... cent of ...

... Names were selected at random from the Astoria telephone ... and officials of the ... terested that the ... a negative ... By ... questionnaires ... Monday ... plans. All in all, it appears ... to have ... poverty ...

... Job Corps Appreciative

A program ... city on the results of the ... an expressive ... for Astoria's warm ... the Tongue Point Center was ... Monday ... Hare ... Wauna ... director of the Job Corps.

Congratulations ... city of Astoria ... approval of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center and expression of interest and participation in our program through the recent ... Keyes' message ... We hope this ... will continue for a long time."

A flat 5 per cent of Astorians ... location of a Job Corps Center at Tongue Point, benefit. Only ... 23 per cent ... 69 per cent ... while only ... cent ... cent ...

(Continued on Page 8)

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)

JUN 12 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

California Woman Educator Named To Head Tongue Pt.

Dr. Dorothy M. Burns of Cabrillo college, Aptos, Calif., has been named director of Tongue Point Job Corps Center, Office of Economic Opportunity officials and the University of Oregon announced Monday. Dr Burns will succeed Dr. Wendell Van Loan as center director July 1, the announcement said.

DR. DOROTHY BURNS

Dr. Burns has a wide background in work with disadvantaged persons. She holds a BA degree from Indiana State college and a BS from University of Illinois, received her MA at San Diego State college, and doctrate at University of Oregon.

She has held teaching or administrative positions at the University of Oregon and at Chula Vista, La Mesa, and Long Beach, Calif. Duties at Cabrillo college have been in counseling and guidance as scholarship committee chairman, development fund administrator and English instructor.

Dr. Burns is married, with two children. Her husband is an insurance broker.

Dr. Van Loan, who has served as director at Tongue Point since mid-1966, will return to duties as professor of education at the University of Oregon and executive secretary of the Oregon School Study Council.

Dr. Burns becomes the third director to head the Tongue Point administration. First director from December, 1964, to September, 1966, was Douglas Y. Olds, former Astoria superintendent of schools, who now is superintendent of schools at Sweet Home, Ore.

WOMEN'S JOB CORP VISITED

Lorna Schoeneman of the Office of Economic Opportunity recently returned from the Tongue Point Job Corp Center for Women located east of Astoria, Oregon on the Columbia River. Slightly more than 400 hundred women with over 200 more expected are receiving vocational training at the center. They come from every state in the union including Hawaii and Alaska. The Olympic Peninsula is represented by 5 young women living and training at the center.

The center resembles a little city with classrooms and library, auditoriums, hospital, beauty shop, post office, radio station administration buildings as well as dormitories. Girls who have residence for designated period and who have made honorable strides in the program reside in 8 story boarding which consists of a complex of apartments.

"I was most impressed by the medical facilities offered at the center," Mrs. Schoeneman said. "The medical building houses a ten bed hospital, a doctor in residence, two registered nurses and two psychiatric social workers. Twice weekly a psychiatrist visits the center. The dental department, a fully equipped unit, three rooms with a qualified dentist and two dental assistants are in attendance," she added.

The program offers a basic education to girls who may have an inadequate background, enabling them to secure employment. Some of the girls having come from an adverse home environment are given family life education. The communication skills (reading, spelling, writing, speaking, language arts) and general education (citizenship, home and family living, health education, physical education, science, art, crafts, music and drama) are offered in conjunction with occupational training in five major areas: business and clerical, health and social service programs, drafting, food services and electronics assembly and testing.

A work program is provided giving the trainees an opportunity to earn an allowance.

Mrs. Schoeneman said, "I got the impression that the instructors and the counselors had a personal interest in every girl at the center, constantly striving to instill in each one of them a feeling of worthiness and importance. An atmosphere of friendliness seems to prevail everywhere and without the restrictive institutional feeling. I honestly believe it is a wonderful opportunity for any young woman and I would not hesitate in recommending Job Corp for Women."

Young women 16 through 21 who are out of school and without a job may volunteer for the Job Corps. Enrollees must be physically and mentally able to participate fully in the program. The average enrollment is about one year. The maximum is two years.

The Employment Security Office will refer those interested in becoming members of the Women's Job Corp to the proper agency. Girls from the Port Townsend area may apply at the Office of Economic Opportunity in Port Townsend.

Brad Ross Picked for College Coordinator Post

Survey Indicates Astorians Want Job Corps Here

Page 1

Job Corps program wake 76 per cent favor the national program should be kept, the poll [illegible]

Of those responding 38 per cent had been [illegible] previously by some type of communication from the center, then had heard a center representative speak had visited the center, or had read brochures about it. More than 3 per cent have participated in some form of community activity in which corpsmen or corps men were involved. A similar [illegible] center activities on a volunteer basis was offered by 29 per cent.

A small number of those polled – four per cent – although approving of the Job Corps as a national institution did not like the center's location at Astoria, on the other hand a similar number disapproved of the Job Corps [illegible] nationally, but indicated that Congress did right [illegible] Astoria center. Seven per cent disapproved of the corpsmen in Astoria even though they received it favorably, also favorable to Clatsop county.

Seventeen per cent of those answering were in favorable comment on [illegible] questionnaires while 6 per cent commented adversely.

And as might [illegible] be expected [illegible] taxpayer reveal 2 per cent [illegible] bracketed [illegible] spectators.

Indicating [illegible] knowledge 18 per cent [illegible] those disapproving the center said the had never [illegible] while only 10 per cent of those who had inspected it felt disapproved. Only 3 per cent of those who had participated in [illegible] center actively resented negative opinions.

Retail Merchants Ask Cooperation Of Job Corps

Retail merchants committee Wednesday morning called for closer cooperation with Tongue Point officials concerning corpsmen coming in to Astoria with clothing issue funds.

It was agreed that Tongue Point officials will notify the chamber of commerce office when a large influx of girls could be expected to be purchasing clothing in town. Chamber in turn will alert merchants concerned.

Loan Wykoff of the Job Corps said about 180 girls would receive their first clothing allowance Friday. The following Friday about 80 girls would receive their second clothing allotment. The girls will be assisted by local women in their shopping during the day.

Evening opening of stores was vetoed aside from those merchants who [illegible] remain open Friday nights.

There had been discussion of closing stores Monday, July 3 day before the Fourth of July. This was left up to individual stores and indications were that many would take advantage of a four day holiday with closed doors.

Merchants were told that the [illegible] parking committee has been talking with property owners in the downtown [illegible] area on an educational program prior to [illegible] positions on the [illegible] area.

It was pointed out by Richard Paulsen, chairman of the parking committee that land assessed at $10,000 adjacent to the proposed parking area would cost approximately $20 per month to the property owner. Real property assessed at the same amount but one and one half blocks away would be taxed about $9 per month. Levy would be based on the present assessed valuation over a 20-year period.

It is anticipated the parking would be free for a period of two or three years. After that time a small charge would be made.

Ross Gets Appointment

Brad Ross, recently appointed community relations coordinator and administrative assistant to the [illegible] of Southwestern Oregon [illegible] Colleg, [illegible] Coquille.

Ross' appointment was announced by Jack [illegible] director of the [illegible] Development [illegible] Ross' appointment was on Brookins' recommendation.

Ross, a former editor of The Sentinel, will leave the paper June 23. His appointment at SWOCC is effective July 1.

At SWOCC, Ross will direct publications of the school's catalogue and brochures, report to public affairs department of the college, and act as advisor to the journalism department of the college newspaper, the Southwester.

He will succeed Sydney Thompson, who is leaving to accept a position at the Women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point. Thompson was at SWOCC for 5 years.

Ross' initial contract is for 12 months, but after next year, he will [illegible] during the summer to continue his education. He plans to work summers towards his Master's degree in journalism at the University of Oregon.

He came to The Sentinel after receiving his B.A. degree in journalism at Pacific University in 1962. Ross, 29, grew up in this area and was graduated from Myrtle Point High School in 1956.

Prior to joining The Sentinel

Continued on Page 5-A

Brad Ross

Vancouver, Wash.
Columbian
(Cir. D. 26,332)

To SWOCC

(Continued from page 1- A)

staff, [illegible] had worked during his senior year at Pacific as sports editor of the weekly Forest Grove News-Times, and during vacations from college, he worked in the advertising department of The World.

Ross, his wife, Terri, and two small children, reside at 868 N. Gould. In Coquille, he is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Lions Club, Boost Coquille, Inc., and the First Christian Church.

Speaking of his 5 years at The Sentinel, Ross commented Tuesday, "I've enjoyed my association with The Sentinel and the people I've worked with in Coquille."

Sentinel Publisher Fred Haas added, "During his 5 years here, Brad has been a real asset to the paper and to Coquille. We are happy that he has decided to continue living here, and wish him the best of luck in his new position at SWOCC. I have no doubt that he can do a tremendous job there."

Allen's P.C.S. Est 1888

Beauties To Be At Event

Adding luster to the breakfast to be given Tuesday at Olney's Restaurant by the Christian Women's Club will be a [illegible] the 27 contestants entered in the Miss Washington Pageant. Each of the young hopefuls will be presented a gift as she is introduced to the guests. Serving is scheduled for 9 a.m.

Guest speaker for the occasion will be Virgil Skaggs from the Tongue Point Job Corps at Astoria. Music has been arranged for and a [illegible] prize will be awarded. Verna Kay Wann [illegible] will be Miss Mirror.

The public is invited to attend the breakfast. Reservations should be made with Mrs. Pat Keenan.

Evaluation Team Visits Job Corps

A team of evaluators was visiting Tongue Point Job Corps Center Thursday and Friday, first time since conversion to a women's center.

Group will offer their critical evaluation some time in the future, pointing out both strong and weak points in the program. There was some talk that committee chairmen would return to the center with results, to hold discussion with departments.

Co-chairmen of the evaluator's committee are Ray Osborn and Ray Speulda, both of the state department of education. Tongue Point staff assistants to the men are Ruth Bertilson and Dean McQueen.

Evaluating administration and supervision have been Dr. Fred J. Seibert and Dr. Ray Hawk from University of Oregon. Instructional personnel evaluators are Barry J. Argento, Office of Economic Opportunity, and Dr. Ray Wolf, Portland State college.

Physical facilities came under Dr. Selma Lippeatt, Office of Economic Opportunity, and Les Buell, Hayden Isle, Inc. Lenard J. Calvert, U. of O., evaluated community relations.

Center life inspections were by Lois Hart, Clinton Job Corps Center, and Dr. Harold Abel, U. of O.

Basic education evaluators included Helen Schaper and Ruth Dove, Portland school district; Alfonso Zawadski, Keystone Job Corps Center; Robert Emmits, OEO.

Henry Norling, instructor at Clatsop Community college, and Mrs. Shirley Majchrzak, Los Angeles Job Corps, jointly evaluated the center's vocational education department.

Outcomes will be given the committee by Speulda; evaluation by the co-chairmen; graphic and statistical by Osborn; and summary of evaluation byb Speulda.

Most of the party flew in to Astoria and will depart this evening. There was no indication when evaluation report would be made.

Schools Must Look Ahead

Building programs by local school districts generally reflect the attitudes of communities concerning progress. Some attitudes, of course, go sour from time to time and this expression comes forth during school budget time.

The city of Astoria, which comprises school district No. 1, has not soured recently over building programs. Witness to this is the bond election passed overwhelmingly by voters here last October when they balloted for a new $1.5 junior high school.

By the time this new school plant is ready for occupancy — September of 1968—the district will be strained by pupil expansion, according to best projection figures available to Superintendent Roy Seeborg.

The Astoria school system will be at capacity strength and then some when the next school year begins. Adequately housing students at the high school will be No. 1 problem to cope with by September of 1967. Some anticipated overcrowding at various schools was eased by the change at the Tongue Point Job Corps center during the school year which just ended. However, Tongue Point is a minor problem in comparison to one that will exist here when and if the new aluminum plant locates in the Warrenton area.

With this big plant in mind, directors of the Astoria school board plan to take a long, hard look at the immediate years ahead. All facets of community life will be examined by a steering committee of lay people the board and superintendent plan to appoint. Availability of housing for an influx of people will get close attention by the committee.

No more new schools are planned immediately, but by the end of this decade the moment of decision could be at hand.

1st Corpswomen Of Month Named

First outstanding corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps Center were named this week when center officials selected five Job Corps trainees as "Corpswomen of the Month." To receive this honor corpswomen must excel in attendance, in the center, leadership and cooperation. Five are named each month in accordance with a practice adopted when young men were trained at Tongue Point in 1966.

Each "Corpswomen of the Month" receives a certificate of commendation from the center director and a $10 merchandise certificate at an Astoria retail store.

Receiving the award for May were Gloria Stark, Dallas, Ore.; Rose Cardenas, Pasco, Wash.; Mary Lou Tennant, Tenino, Wash.; Jane Hanks, Grants Pass, Ore.; and Leona Vasquez, Los Angeles.

Runners-up were Paulette Keanini, Fayola Piert, Teresa Rubio, Doris Wells, Mary Helen Gonzales, Guadalupe Sanchez, Delia Lopez and LaNora Vasquez.

Reporter Completes Washington Internship

'Reporters Must Dig'

Capital ... that may be more important ... to news ... Every ... newspapers ex... ... and ... ...

Shriver Takes on Congress to Save Existence of OEO

[illegible] Congress authorizes in spending [illegible] appropriates can spell the life or [illegible] says Shriver.

[illegible] instance, that Congress [illegible]

And with [illegible] says

[illegible] defeated and the OEO [illegible] force. They said there is a [illegible] mantling OEO.

In the past two weeks, Shriver [illegible] sures with the House Education and Labor Committee, attending seven hearings to fight for his program. And he found time for two days of testimony before the Senate poverty subcommittee, which also is considering the OEO budget.

As one congressman put it: "Like the poor, we have Shriver always with us."

[illegible] reading 'GOP heads [illegible] and so forth and people how they keep the programs intact. They [illegible] their cake and eat it.

Shriver says he doubts Democrats would vote to pass the GOP bill.

The antipoverty chief estimates however, [illegible] 25 to 30 Republican votes [illegible] pass the administration [illegible] 250 Democrats support it.

Shriver says the key question is whether Republicans strengthened by their capture of 47 more House votes in the last election, will make a party issue of voting against the President's bill. Quie says the GOP probably will make it a party issue.

Quie believes Democrats will amend the President's bill to conform more closely to the Republican measure in order to get it passed. Shriver agrees that might happen.

"The Democrats might bargain away Upward Bound, or give Head Start to the Office of Education in order to get the bill through," he said.

H 7138 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE June 13, 1967

[illegible] flag was carried on ships [illegible] colonial fleet [illegible] and a smaller flag was issued by General George Washington as Commander in the standard of the Continental Army. [illegible] Americans and other nations recognized the 13 colonies with a blue field in the upper left [illegible] and another flag [illegible] and 13 stripes [illegible] Union Flag [illegible] Jack [illegible] tained a white background with the green pine tree of Liberty often [illegible] Appeal to Heaven." General [illegible] [illegible] pine tree under which the Sons of Liberty met in Boston and down Thereafter [illegible] personal [illegible] on official flags. The Massachusetts Council adopted the flag in April of 1776.

26 Massachusetts Navy Ensign 1775. Voted [illegible] this flag but [illegible] from the Continental Congress and Commander-in-Chief [illegible] Ensign had a white field with a green pine tree and [illegible] carried a white flag with the motto, "Don't Tread on Me."

27 American Manifesto and Privateers, 1776. Entered into British [illegible] to the Continental Congress. Approved [illegible] and commissioned to [illegible] with 9 red and 6 white stripes [illegible] Union. To prevent their seizure [illegible] Union Jack [illegible] flag became the symbol of [illegible] seas.

28. Fort Moultrie, South Carolina, 1776. The first distinctive American flag displayed in the South. The flag [illegible] Fort on Sullivan's Island, near Charleston, South Carolina, when Britain [illegible] June 28, 1776. The garrison under Colonel William Moultrie withheld the British threat during the 8-hr. bombardment [illegible] after [illegible] Union Jack [illegible] 1777.

29 Betsy Flag, New York, 1777. Carried by armed ships of New York [illegible] Appeal to Heaven." New Netherlands the Dutch colony to which New York had formerly belonged.

30 Olive Branch Peace, 1811. Peace Flag was [illegible] of the Battle of Lake Erie, September of 1813. It is [illegible] inscription, "Don't Give Up the Ship."

31 Fifteen Stars and Stripes 1794-1818. Adopted by resolution in 1794. After the admission of Kentucky and Vermont, this remained the flag until 1818. It was the inspiration for Francis Scott Key's "Star Spangled Banner" in the War of 1812. The Banner Company fought at the battle of North Point near Baltimore bearing this flag.

32 Stars and Bars Confederate States of America, 1861. Confederate flag especially [illegible] with the States of Virginia.

33 Southern Cross Confederate States of America, 1861. Confederate flag especially [illegible] with the State of Virginia.

34 Washington, 1861. Used after the admission of Arizona and New Mexico, 1912.

35 World War II, 1941-45. Such flags were [illegible] casket flags [illegible] in the First and Second World Wars. This would [illegible] United States Code, which we sent to Congress, 1941. This same [illegible] Personal Property to Congressmen Yates and [illegible] Bass [illegible] and [illegible] congressmen as well as [illegible] United Nations passing to Senator Thurmond [illegible].

36 Present flag of [illegible] the 50 stars of Alaska as the 49th State in 1959 and Hawaii as the 50th State in 1960.

37 Red Dragon, 1967. Red Chinese Union Jack. Used on ships that brought settlers to American soldiers.

38 Hanover, Pennsylvania, Associators 1775.

39 Easton, Pennsylvania, 1775: Prepared in advance of Revolutionary War. Blue flag, 13 stars in body of flag. Canton 13 red and white stripes.

1. Pennsylvania Longrifleman: Regiment recruited from western counties of Pennsylvania [illegible] and [illegible] part of [illegible] Regiment [illegible] Northwest [illegible] Appeal to Heaven." [illegible] Continental Army [illegible] Navy [illegible] Ensign [illegible] Pine Tree [illegible] Jack

Job Corps Experience Called 'Great'

By JIM SITTERS
of the Register-Guard

[illegible] Dean Buck, 17, a native [illegible] Eugene, and Glen Logan, 18, Portland, were in Eugene [illegible] help the State Employment Service recruit new corpsmen.

They told a story of good living conditions, community acceptance and the fine recreation facilities [illegible].

At the California [illegible] Buck said, corpsmen have access to a swimming pool, bowling lanes, pool tables and a roller skating rink, as well as [illegible] boating in competitive [illegible].

[illegible] But I got used to it after a week [illegible] Buck [illegible]

Dean Buck

[illegible] opportunities in the Job Corps.

But "we don't try to pull them out of anything else"—such as family obligations or plans to return to school, said Buck.

[illegible] many opportunities to visit [illegible] buses for tr[illegible] burg. Logan said, the corpsmen had junketed to the coast and the Redwoods. From the Parks Center, Buck said they made weekly trips into San Francisco on a shuttlebus.

It was pointed out that the relative isolation of the Job Corps centers must mean a lack of feminine companionship.

"That's why we go to town," responded Buck.

Logan added that the corpsmen in Roseburg had invited girls from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center to a dance this weekend.

Not to be outdone, Buck pointed out that the Parks Center often [illegible] socials with girls' centers from [illegible] Los Angeles.

[illegible] have proved to be [illegible] men especially when schools let [illegible] drop-outs under 18 [illegible]

Glen Logan
Likes Outdoors

Goal Achieved—at What Cost?

The Job Corps has achieved its purpose of installing 650 young women at Tongue Point Center by July 1—the big reason why Tongue Point was made a women's center in the first place. The Job Corps had to achieve 23 per cent female enrollment by July 1—tomorrow, Congress had so ordered.

To do this, the Job Corps had to make some drastic and expensive changes in its operation, including conversion of the Tongue Point Center from a men's to a women's establishment.

We have not seen and probably never will see any figures summarizing the total cost of converting Tongue Point, but it plainly has amounted to several tens of thousands of dollars.

This, of course, was petty cash compared to some of the monstrous wastes and boondoggles that go on in the federal government, but it was a good object lesson to us in Clatsop county as to how inefficiently the federal government can function and what contempt it can show at times for the taxpayers who have to pay for such nonsense.

The Job Corps could of course evade the blame by pointing out that Congress issued an edict that could not otherwise be obeyed. Congress could respond that the Job Corps should never have become so lopsided in male students in the first place. One could never pin down the blame.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon

[illegible] 1967

Allen's P.C.B.

[illegible] SMARLEY

[illegible] health service nurse [illegible] public school teacher and [illegible] Miss Irma Wood is [illegible] Tongue Point Job Corps Center. Miss Wood has been [illegible] teaching elementary [illegible] Grove since 1961. Prior [illegible] to come to Tongue Point she was [illegible] in Klamath [illegible] has been [illegible] at Lake [illegible] High School for two years.

[illegible] for KGW-TV has been award-

Daily Journal of Commerce
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 4,[illegible])

Allen's P.C.B.

Tongue Point Center Broadcast Planned

[illegible] Point Job Corps [illegible] facility [illegible] them to [illegible] one serving women will be [illegible] certified in a special program this [illegible] evening, June 27 [illegible] 7:0[illegible] over KOAC, [illegible] FM Portland.

Two members of the KOAC staff, Howard and John Macdonald, [illegible] interviews for this program, [illegible] trainees, supervisors, [illegible] teachers, [illegible] students. Under [illegible] women [illegible] men, as students, [illegible] months ago.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon

JUN 27 1967

Allen's P.C.B.

Center to Top Trainee Quota

The number of girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center is expected to exceed the 650 quota when approximately 150 to 160 girls arrive Wednesday night the center announced today.

The quota of 650 was set when the center was changed from a men's training program to one for women earlier this year.

The center has credentials for 227 girls, but fewer is expected to arrive. Some of the girls change their minds after enlisting in the training program. There are presently about 500 girls at the Astoria site.

Ninety-five girls are expected from the San Francisco region 20 from the Austin Tex. region and 12 from near Atlanta, Ga. a center spokesman said.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon

JUN 28 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Center To Exceed Quota

ASTORIA [illegible] The number of girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps [illegible] is expected to exceed the [illegible] quota tonight when about 160 girls arrive.

The quota of 650 was set earlier this year when the center was changed from a men's to a women's training center. About 500 girls are at the center now.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 S 32,348

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

More Join Corps

ASTORIA (AP) — About 160 girls arrived Wednesday night at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, swelling enrollment to 660. A quota of 650 was set when the center changed earlier this year from a men's to a women's training center.

Contract [illegible]

Washington Co. News-Times
Forest Grove, Oregon
(Cir. W 4,179)

Dilley Teacher Named Corps Supervisor

Mrs. Irma Wood, former public health nurse and public school teacher, has been hired by Philco-Ford to supervise the health occupations vocational training program at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Mrs. Wood began her 20-year nursing career in Los Angeles as receiving nurse at one of the first juvenile detention centers in the United States. She later worked at several hospitals and as a public health nurse, also in California.

In 1955 she went to Klamath Falls where she was a school librarian for five years. From 1962-67 she taught at Dilley Elementary school. She also has taught a course in health education at Stephens College, Columbus, Mo.

The new supervisor holds a diploma from Stanford University School of Nursing and a bachelor of arts degree from Immaculate Heart College in Los Angeles. She has attended summer school sessions at several universities including University of Oregon and University of Southern California.

Mrs. Wood has three children: Cliff, who is working on a master's degree in library science at University of Oregon; Gaye, a June graduate from Pacific University; and Jack, a UO sophomore in political science.

Democrat-Herald
Albany, Oregon
(Cir. D. 12,879)

JUN 28 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

160 To Arrive At Tongue Point

ASTORIA (AP)—The number of girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps training center is expected to exceed the 650 quota tonight when about 160 girls arrive.

The quota of 650 was set earlier this year

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

JUN 29 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Exceeds Quota

The number of trainees at Tongue Point Job Corps center has exceeded the 650 quota the center was to reach by June 30, end of the current fiscal year.

Arriving [illegible] Wednesday night by bus were 177 new trainees from San Francisco regions, bringing the total to 664 girls.

Congress established the end of the fiscal year June 30 as the time when 23 per cent of the Job Corps trainees had to be women. The corps then established its own means of achieving the required ratio, assigning girls to various centers.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 50,823 S 50,378)

JUL 6 - 1967

Job Corps Director Begins Astoria Duties

ASTORIA (AP) — Dorothy M. Burns has assumed her duties as director of the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center.

Miss Burns, formerly of Cabrillo College, Aptos, Calif., replaces Wendell Van Loan. Van Loan came to the center a year ago on a temporary basis and is returning to the University of Oregon in Eugene.

Mrs. Wood started her ten-year nursing career in Los Angeles as a receiving nurse. She later worked at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Hollywood and Alta Bates Hospital in Berkeley.

She was a school librarian in Klamath Falls from 1955-60 and an elementary school teacher in Forest Grove from 1962-67.

Mrs. Wood has a B.A. degree from Immaculate Heart College, in Los Angeles, and a diploma from Stanford University School of Nursing.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Center Gets Director

Tongue Point Leader Arrives

ASTORIA (Special) — Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, formerly of Cabrillo College, Aptos, Calif., reported for duty as director of Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center Wednesday.

She replaces Dr. Wendell Van Loan, who came from the University of Oregon a year ago on temporary assignment and is returning to his duties on the university staff.

Dr. Burns said she was no stranger to Oregon as she spent two years at the UO working for a doctorate in Education.

Also reporting Wednesday was Dr. Lillian Kopp, Portland, who will serve as assistant director responsible for guidance counseling and living activities of the center's 650 corpswomen.

Dr. Kopp is sister Mary Andrey professor of anthropology and sociology at Marylhurst College, and is here on leave from that post. She retains her membership in the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary, but will use her civilian name and wear civilian clothes while at Tongue Point.

Oregon Journal

Job Center Staff Shifts

ASTORIA—Dr. Dorothy M. Burns took over duties Wednesday as new director of Tongue Point Job Corps Center, succeeding Dr. Wendell Van Loan.

Also beginning [illegible] duties Wednesday was Dr. Lillian Kopp, [illegible] director for [illegible] who will be in charge of [illegible] arrangements [illegible] guidance counseling for [illegible] 650 trainees at the center.

Dr. Kopp came here from Cabrillo College, Aptos, Calif.

Dr. Kopp is on leave from Marylhurst College where she is Sister Mary Andrey of the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary. She is professor of anthropology and sociology.

Thousands Gather at Beaches

Visitors came to the Clatsop beaches by the thousands during the first half of the four-day Fourth of July holiday, enjoying finest weather of the year so far.

Temperatures were in the 90's at Cannon Beach, Seaside, Gearhart and in the Astoria area.

Many tourists complained of the sand being too hot for barefeet and cooled them in the surf.

Only one tragic note marred the holiday. Veronica Kalihiwa, 18, a Tongue Point Job Corps trainee, drowned at Coffenbury lake in Fort Stevens state park Sunday afternoon.

Miss Kalihiwa was with companions at the lake. She was dead on arrival at Astoria's St. Mary hospital.

A woman spectator told Clatsop sheriff reserve deputy Jerry Fletcher that she saw the girl bobbing up and down in the water at the north end of the lake and called for help when she noticed the girl was in trouble a few minutes later. The woman said the girl was only a few feet from an 8- to 10-year-old boy who was on [illegible].

Memorial Service Held

Fletcher praised the efforts of Carol Hickey of Portland and Charles Hastings of 245 West Exchange, who attempted to revive Miss Kalihiwa with mouth to mouth resuscitation.

A memorial service was held in front of the Job Corps center administration [illegible] at 11 a.m. Monday. Virgil Savage, religious coordinator for TPJCC, will accompany the body to the family home at Waimanalo, Hawaii.

State, county and city police reported a remarkably quiet holiday weekend. Incidents requiring attention of law enforcement officers were at a minimum, they said.

"Not bad at all so far," was the comment from state police.

(Continued on Page 5)

Capital Journal

Corps Girls Due

ASTORIA (AP) — The number of girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps training center is expected to exceed the 650 quota tonight when about 160 girls arrive.

The quota of 650 was set earlier this year when the center was changed from a men's to a women's training center. About 500 girls are at the center now.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 140,403)

JUN 29 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Mrs. Irma Wood, a former nurse and public school teacher, has been named to supervise the health occupations vocation training program at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria.

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,[illegible])

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Women Above Quota

ASTORIA (AP) — There are [illegible] women at the Tongue Point Job Corps [illegible] center [illegible] in the area.

Michael S. Youngblood, Tongue Point Job Corps center art instructor, is shown at his studio with some of his work which will be exhibited at the University of Oregon Student Union gallery beginning Sunday, July 9. Show will continue through July 29. (Job Corps Photo)

Art Work by Job Corps Dept. Chairman to Be Shown at UO

Paintings, prints and sculpture by Michael S. Youngblood, chairman of the art department at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, will be exhibited in a one-man show at the University of Oregon Student Union gallery beginning Sunday, July 9.

The show will continue through July 29.

Youngblood [illegible] symbols and shapes to [illegible] his thoughts regarding [illegible] development, sex and the [illegible].

Much of his work reveals a biological tone where [illegible] tration is given splitting and multiplying of cells. This "cellular" approach also is carried through in his prints and wood [illegible].

His paintings [illegible]

materials suitable for classroom work in [illegible] schools.

Youngblood [illegible] his training in art at the Job Corps Center since 1965. Earlier he [illegible] the art education [illegible] at the University of [illegible] New Mexico. He holds [illegible] degrees in art education from [illegible] of Oregon and a master of [illegible] University of New [illegible].

He [illegible] exhibited in Oregon and New Mexico.

Old Cannon Drummed Back Into Service

Since our city doesn't have a down town park and any bus seats on the main street, the girls taking Job Corps training at Tongue Point have made use of seats that seldom if ever were used by Astorians. The girls like anyone else come to [illegible] to get away from life on the base. But even this has its uneasy moments. One girl asked, "Can you tell me why we get such mean looks from many people?"

De'Herera, Jackie Grant and Priscilla Thomas from Oakland find the steps of the office building across from the Courthouse a place to sit in the sun and watch the traffic roll by. They are all studying electronicsassembly at Tounge Point Job Corps Station.

Woman Heads Corps

ASTORIA (AP) — Dorothy Thorns has begun her new job as director of the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center near Astoria. She came from Cabrillo College, Aptos, Calif., where she was [illegible] and administrator.

Placement Chief For Corpswomen N

Corinne C Hamilton, who has been involved in college placement for several years in Washington, Oregon and Iowa has been named placement manager for Tongue Point Job Corps women by Philco-Ford.

Philco-Ford holds the subcontract for vocational training at the center.

Miss Hamilton came to Tongue Point from Bellingham Wash., where she was director of placement for arts and sciences at Western Washington State college. Prior to that she spent three years with the University of Oregon placement office and about five years in placement at the University of Iowa.

She holds a bachelor of art

Daily Astorian

Mobile Education Project to Bring Students Here

A group of 23 ninth grade students enrolled in the Mobile Education Project of Gig Harbor, Wash., was due here Wednesday to remain through Thursday on a learn-by-seeing, learn-by-doing project.

A. N. Thorndike of the chamber of commerce hospitality committee will act as guide.

The party is due to arrive at 5 p.m. Wednesday at Clatsop college, where they will stay overnight at Harbey hall.

Thursday the group will visit Fort Clatsop, the Maritime Museum, the Clatsop Historical museum, Bumble Bee's Elmoere cannery and Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The party will have lunch Thursday at Tongue Point, under arrangements by the Business and Professional Women's club. Job Corpswomen enrolled in food service classes will serve the meal. Local merchants have contributed the food.

The Mobile Education project is in its sixth year. William J. Stocklin, a science teacher at Gig Harbor, is director. The party travels by bus.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
Cir. D 340,662 - S 394,604)

1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Artist At Tongue Point To Display Paintings

Paintings, prints and sculpture by Michael S. Youngblood, chairman of the art department at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, will be exhibited in a one-man show at the University of Oregon Student Union gallery beginning Sunday, July 9.

The show will continue through July 20.

Much of his work reveals a biological [illegible] concentration is given to [illegible] and multiplying of [illegible]. This "cellular" approach also is carried through in his prints and wood sculpture.

His paintings are essentially produced by spraying acrylics on masonite and adding three-dimensional components ranging from found objects such as old shoes and earphones to fine [illegible].

His printing technique includes [illegible] ordinary crayon [illegible] the [illegible] two years as [illegible] experimenting with [illegible] materials suitable for cl[illegible] room work in public schools.

Youngblood has been teaching art at the Job Corps Center since 1965. Prior to that he taught in the art education department [illegible] University of [illegible]. He received his bachelor's degree in art education from the University of Oregon and master of arts degree from the University of New Mexico.

He has exhibited both in Oregon and New Mexico.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

JUL 7 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Thompson Joins Job Corps Staff

Sydney D Thompson, former coordinator of community services and special programs at Southwestern Oregon Community college, has joined Tongue Point Job Corps Center's community relations department as assistant director.

For the past five years at SWOCC Thompson was responsible for public information services of the college and arranged special programs on the campus. In his first three years at the college he taught a variety of business-related subjects as well as a communications class.

Recently he wrote "The Growing Look—Oregon's Community Colleges," a booklet published by the Oregon Community College association.

He is a graduate of Babson Institute of Business Administration, Babson Park, Mass., and has done graduate work at American university in Washington, D. C., University of Oregon and Oregon State university.

Drowning of Job Corps Trainee Mars Holiday Weeken

Signal
[illegible]side, Oregon
[illegible] W 2,470)

JUL 6 - 1967

Seaside has busy, quiet weekend; 25,000 watch fireworks display

[illegible] stores were h[illegible] throughout the weekend. Only one tragedy was reported in Clatsop County. Veronica [illegible] Tongue [illegible] the [illegible] revive her by mouth-to-[illegible] were futile. Memorial services were held Monday at the center and the body was to be taken to her home.

Despite the heavy traffic, state police, the sheriff's office and [illegible]

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,479 - S 32,348)

Allen's P.C.B.

Center Nears 700

ASTORIA (AP) — Enrollment at the Women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point near Astoria soon will climb near 700. Fifty more recruits are due this week, mostly from Texas and Georgia.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)

JUL 13 1967

Teacher Joins Center's Staff

ASTORIA — Sydney D Thompson, former coordinator of community services and special programs at Southwestern Oregon Community College, has joined Tongue Point Job Corps Center's Community Relations Department as assistant director.

For the past five years at SWOCC Thompson was responsible for public information services of the college and arranged special programs on the campus. As a teacher in his first three years at the college, he taught a variety of business-related subjects as well as a communications class.

Drowning of Job Corps Trainee Mars Weekend

(Continued from Page 1)

at Astoria

Springfield Boy Victim

Oregon Weekend Drownings Claim 7

RONALD JENNINGS

Twelve persons, including a Springfield boy, are dead in Oregon as a result of weekend accidents off of the highways. Most of the accidents happened Saturday.

Funeral services for Ronald [illegible] 15 of [illegible] N 51st St., Springfield, will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday at [illegible] Funeral Home [illegible] He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Jennings.

Young Jennings drowned Saturday about 7:30 p.m. in the McKenzie River 100 below Leaburg Dam. State police reports said he and a friend were pushing a log into the middle of the river.

When they were about 40 feet from shore, the Jennings boy started to swim back, but was unable to reach the river bank, reports said.

He was a student at Thurston Junior High School, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the Boy Scouts.

The incident was one of seven Oregon drownings over the weekend. Three other fatal non-highway accidents were also reported that claimed five lives.

Sutherlin, died Saturday when he fell into Calapooya Creek near his home, where he was playing with other boys.

● George Lee, 20, of Portland, drowned Saturday while swimming at Cape Kiwanda, near Pacific City.

● Two Tillamook men, Chester Thomas, 57, and Walter McKeen, 52, drowned Saturday when their 14-foot skiff capsized in heavy surf near Yaquina Bay, Newport.

● Christina Fetkenhauer, 16, of Klamath Falls, drowned Saturday in a log pond near her home.

In addition, Peter Harimus, 39, a librarian at Tillamook Junior High School, is missing and presumed drowned. His small boat was [illegible] found near the beach at Bandon Saturday.

The U.S. Coast Guard called off the search for Harimus Monday but further developments [illegible]

A Saturday plane crash near Redmond claimed the lives of Wayne Dale Pierce, 35, Redmond, and Kelly Andrew, 22, [illegible]

George Drew, 73, Portland, died Saturday when he fell from a tree he was pruning at his home.

Timothy Byrd, 2, Portland, died in a late Saturday night house fire [illegible]

A Portland longshoreman Allen D. Lonie, 45, died Saturday when struck by a rolling log in the hold of a ship in Portland where he was working.

Holiday Death Toll Up to 28

[illegible] A drowning accident [illegible] the life of Rocky [illegible] Calapooya River [illegible] plumbus, [illegible] crash on [illegible]

[illegible] Fetkenhauer, [illegible] drowned in a small [illegible] her home. Ronald [illegible] girl, [illegible] killed [illegible] state [illegible]

[illegible] near Eugene. Howard Church, 61, Enterprise, was killed late Saturday when a car in which he was riding crashed at Wallowa Lake State Park south of Enterprise. David Murry Croshaw, 14, [illegible]

George Lee, 20, Portland, drowned Saturday while swimming at Cape Kiwanda near Pacific City. His body was not recovered.

Veronica Kalihiwa, 18, Waimanalo, Hawaii, drowned Sunday afternoon in Coffenbury Lake at Fort Stevens Park south of Astoria. She was a Job Corps trainee at Tongue [illegible]

Timothy Byrd, 2, died in a house fire late Saturday.

An industrial accident Saturday [illegible] of a Portland [illegible] Vista [illegible] Lake [illegible] was [illegible] rolling log [illegible] in the hold of a ship [illegible]

George Drew, 73, Portland, was killed when he fell from a tree he was pruning at his home Saturday.

A plane crash in the Deschutes River Canyon west of Redmond Saturday took two lives. The victims were Wayne Dale Pierce, 35, Redmond, and Kelly Andrew, 22, Corvallis.

[illegible] Stanley [illegible] Saturday [illegible] Hard [illegible] crews north [illegible] the 500-foot [illegible] Dave Parrish, Albany, were [illegible] at Wallowa Lake.

The Marion County Parkway [illegible] toll now stands at 28 for the year and 61 on the freeways [illegible]

[illegible] Sunday, [illegible] Tom McCall issued a proclamation [illegible] one hour of respect [illegible] and [illegible]

Most traffic deaths occurred on Saturday, [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible]

Three [illegible] [illegible] truck [illegible] at 11:30 [illegible] 126 east of Vaughn. [illegible] They were Eldred Vincent Sill, 57, and Dolly Palmer Sill, 61, both of Eugene, and Nancy Bokich, 14, Boise, Idaho.

[illegible] Sunday [illegible] [illegible] Lonnie [illegible] Margaret Schively, 49, Los Gatos, Calif. Charles Kevin Maloney, 22, Portland, died in a one-car accident on U.S. Highway 26 about [illegible]

Idaho Daily Statesman
Boise, Idaho
Cir. D 30,002 S 40,405
JUL 3 - 1967
[illegible] Est. 1888

Job Corps Girl Dies In Oregon

Drowning Occurs In State Park; Identity Withheld

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — A Tongue Point Job Corps trainee drowned Sunday afternoon in Coffenbury Lake in Fort Stevens State Park, just south of [illegible]

[illegible] pronounced dead on [illegible] at St. Marys Hospital [illegible]

[illegible] Clatsop County sheriff's [illegible] she is from Hawaii, [illegible] he will not release further details [illegible] investigation [illegible]

[illegible] of persons who have died in Oregon this Fourth of July holiday.

Cir. D 3
JUL 3 - 196[illegible]
[illegible] Est. 1888

Associated Press Monday morning gave the following list of other drownings:

● Veronica Kalikima, 18, a Job Corps trainee, of Waimanalo, Hawaii, drowned Sunday while swimming in Coffenbury Lake in Fort Stevens State Park on the northern Oregon Coast.

● Rickie Lee Stutzman, 8,

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)
JUN [illegible] 67
[illegible]

Job Corps Center Benefits Local Economy

Editor's Note: This is the 11th in a series of 15 articles in an industrial survey of Astoria and Clatsop county, brought to you by progressive Astoria merchants. One of these merchants has an interesting message for you in this issue of The Daily Astorian.

By J. ARTHUR TURNER

The job training activity at Tongue Pointp rovides Astoria a substantial payroll that is of tremendous value to the businesses of Astoria and Clatsop county.

Tongue Point Job Corps Center, on the site of the former naval base east of Astoria, is operated by the University of Oregon under a contract with the federal Office of Economic Opportunity, with Philco-Ford Corporation's TechRep division as sub-contractor for vocational training.

The center was opened as a training center for disadvantaged young men in February, 1965, and by January 20, 1967, when the center was converted to a women's program because of a congressional requirement that more women be trained by Job Corps, 2,370 youths had been assigned there. Listed as graduates" were 793, while significant achievements in education and job skill gains were attained by many of those who left before graduating. Corpsmen were trained in automotive repair, appliance repair, electronics and small boat skills.

Present contract provides for training of a maximum of 650 young women at one time and extends through June, 1968.

Seek Many Goals

The Tongue Point enrollee typically is seeking a happy family life, economic security, responsible citizenship, pleasurable use of leisure time. Many of these young women have become alienated from conventional education methods or do not have the cultural background to benefit from them. Many have experienced unhappy home conditions. Few have enjoyed any measure of vocational success. Some have developed unsatisfactory patterns for use of leisure.

Attainment of Job Corps objectives requires vocational training plus civic and family life education; but these are ineffective without basic literacy and attitudinal competency. Hence the program of the center must encompass many aspects.

The center's educational task extends throughout the waking hours and is not related only to the classroom. A resident hall environment offers opportunity to learn to move [illegible] toward normal and [illegible]

— [illegible] on Page 2 —

Tongue Point Transition To Be Radio Feature

"Transition at Tongue Point," the changeover of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center from a facility serving young men to one serving women, will be described in a special program Tuesday at 7 p.m. over KOAC-AM, Corvallis, and KOAP-FM, Portland.

Two members of the KOAC staff, Shirley Howard and John MacDonald, journeyed to Tongue Point earlier this month to record interviews for this program with administrators, supervisors, counselors, teachers and students of the center, where women replaced men as students several months ago.

Lynn Wykoff, public relations director for the Women Job Corps Center, O. H. Gentry, employed by Philco Corporation, subcontractors under University of Oregon supervision for vocational education as director of vocational education: Lloyd White, a former NASA employee, who serves as coordinator of special activities and Gentry's assistant, and others describe the center's training program in such areas as health service occupations, drafting occupations, food service occupations and driver education. Some observations will be made regarding the adjustment of the trainees to the program and to their new location. Administrators and counselors will also contrast current operations and conditions of the center with the previous one.

One of the most successful "morale-builders" [illegible] in the short life of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women was a series how presented at the base with cooperation of a number of Astoria merchants and other townspeople. Adelaine Sather, one of the Astoria merchants who cooperated in the project, describes the experience during the program.

Miss Howard and MacDonald also interviewed a number of the trainees learning why they enrolled in the Job Corps, what they expect to derive from the training program and how they react to the training and to their environment. These interviews will be included in the hour-long presentation.

Statesman, Salem, Ore., June 22, '67 (Sec. 1)—15

Five Youths Released from Rape Charges

GRANTS PASS (AP) — Five members of the Fort Vannoy Job Corps Center near here were released from charges of rape Wednesday.

Their case was remanded [illegible] Circuit Court to Josephine County District Court, where Judge Lawrence Cushing dismissed it for lack of evidence.

The boys, four 16 and one 17, were accused of attacking two girls in a city park last week and of raping a 19-year-old [illegible] 18-year-old with her [illegible] raped.

The 19-year-old testified that the boys, four from California and one from South Carolina, [illegible] Witnesses [illegible] the girls [illegible]

People Want Job Corps To Stay

Without doing any politicking, the Job Corps women at Tongue Point have the people of Astoria voting 69 per cent in favor of continuing the center here.

A scientifically-conducted polling of a five per cent segment of Astoria's approximately 10,000 population was accomplished during May of this year, and results compiled from the resulting statistics were released this week.

The girls probably lost a few points by a rally to picket the city jail where one of their sisters was being held for alleged violation of one or more of the city's many ordinances. This spontaneous action, which the center's command did not approve, was the first and last of such incidents.

The good will that has been earned here by the local center has been commended by national headquarters and spoken well of locally.

[illegible] Forty percent of persons [illegible] a mailed questionnaire responded to the survey, providing an across-the-board sampling of two and a half per cent of the total population. Names were [illegible] lected at random from the Astoria telephone directory. Responding to the question "Do you favor continuation of Tongue Point Job Corps Center?" 69% of those polled answered in the affirmative, while 31% expressed disfavor of the project, which is operated by the University of Oregon under a contract with the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

Tongue Point Transition To Be Radio Feature

"Transition at Tongue Point," the change-over of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center from a facility serving young men to one serving women, will be described in a special program Tuesday at 7 p.m. over KOAC-AM, Corvallis, and KOAP-FM, Portland.

Two members of the KOAC staff, Shirley Howard and John MacDonald, journeyed to Tongue Point earlier this month to record interviews for this program with administrators, supervisors, counselors, teachers and students of the center, where women replaced men as students several months ago.

Lynn Wykoff, public relations director for the Women's Job Corps Center; O. H. Gentry, employed by Philco Corporation, subcontractors under University of Oregon supervision for vocational education as director of vocational education: Lloyd White, a former NASA employee, who serves as coordinator of special activities and Gentry's assistant, and others describe the center's training program in such areas as health service occupations, drafting occupations, food service occupations and driver education. Some observations will be made regarding the adjustment of the trainees to the program and to their new location. Administrators and counselors will also contrast current operations and conditions of the center with the previous ones.

One of the most successful "morale-builders" [illegible] in the short life of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women was a series how presented at the base with cooperation of a number of Astoria merchants and other townspeople. Adelaine Sather, one of the Astoria merchants who cooperated in the project, describes the experience during the program.

Miss Howard and MacDonald also interviewed a number of the trainees learning why they enrolled in the Job Corps, what they expect to derive from the training program and how they react to the training and to their environment. These interviews will be included in the hour-long presentation.

Instructor John Spears With Social Problems Class

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON
Job Corps
ASTORIA, OREGON

YOUR JOB CORPS OATH

Knowing that education and training are vital to my growth and to the future of our country, I accept appointment to the Job Corps and will participate to the best of my ability in all phases of the Job Corps program and will comply with all rules and regulations of the Job Corps.

Register-Guard Photos by Wayne Eastburn

Drafting Instructor Adolph Diebel Gives Some Advice

Tongue Point Combines No Nonsense and Praise

By DON BISHOFF
Of the Register-Guard

ASTORIA—The dormitory residents' lounge conversation had taken a turn toward gripes about getting out of bed early in the morning, going to class when they didn't feel well and pulling KP duty in the cafeteria.

Then the woman at one edge of the circle spoke up and everyone suddenly grew quiet.

"You are here training for a job," she told them in blunt tones. "Most of you came here because you could not hold down a job.

"You're trying to get into the habit of going to work every day. When you're on a job you won't be able to go home because you've got a headache or cramps.

"They'll expect you not only to be there, but to be there on time."

But a few minutes later, the same woman was praising the girls for a recent weekend dorm cleanup effort, and telling them:

"I think you've got a good floor group here. You're working well together."

Perhaps more than anything else, this combination of no-nonsense talk coupled with positive praise typifies the atmosphere these days at the former naval air station known as Tongue Point.

Where Navy amphibian planes once taxied up out of the Columbia for servicing and repairs in the giant hangars that still stand near the docks, more than 500 girls and young women are involved in a different type of servicing and repair. They're trying to do some refurbishing of their own lives.

The Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center has been in operation for about three months now, following its conversion from a men's center. In just a few weeks it will graduate its first classes.

Most of those first graduates, ranging in age from 16 to 22, won't go on to college. They'll go back to their home towns —or perhaps another city—for jobs as waitresses or nurses' aides.

Those who follow them in the months to come will—hopefully—find work on electronics plant assembly lines, in giant aircraft company drafting rooms, and in business offices.

While Tongue Point is a training center, it is a "soft sell" training center.

"You stick these kids' noses into a textbook and it's school all over again, and they're not going to stick around," said Harold McAbee, the center's acting director.

So instructors steer as much as possible away from books. They use movies and film strips, lots of practical demonstrations and practice, and plenty of individual attention.

"I say I don't push 'em, but I do," said Adolph Diebel, a Texas-drawling drafting instructor. "It's a matter of sayin', 'How you doin' here?' To me this is more practical than sayin', 'I want this—now!'"

John Spears, sociology instructor, said, "This is a social problems class, and we mainly talk about what the girls want to talk about—the dorm, downtown, the rules and regulations, or the Middle East crisis. I see it mainly as a class where each individual gets out of it the things they want."

Tongue Point's approach is dictated by more than just the idea of making education palatable to a school dropout. New girls are entering the classrooms every two weeks, so the classes have to be set up where a newcomer can fit right in.

This means lots of individualized instruction.

Tongue Point's main job is to help the girls find work. Toward this end, they spend about half of each day in their job training classes.

But there's a lot more than that going on.

Those who don't have a high school diploma—and more than 400 of the 531 girls there don't—spend another two or three hours a day working toward this. There are also classes in family life—teaching them to cook, sew and be good wives and mothers.

There is also a charm course, taught by former Eugene and Portland modeling instructor Doris Jean Alexander.

"No matter what they learn in the classroom, if they go into work looking like slobs, they're not going to get a job," she said.

There are also art and music classes, where the emphasis is more on learning to do something for the enjoyment of it rather than learning because it's going to get you a job.

One day a week a girl is assigned to a "work experience," helping out with some phase of the job of running the center. This serves the dual purpose of giving them the feel of a regular job and helping cut the high costs of running the big center.

The girls live in dorm-type rooms in the former bachelor officer quarters, the old enlisted men's barracks and in former apartment buildings moved down from Navy Heights, where married servicemen and their families used to live.

Acting center director McAbee, who'll go back to being deputy director when the new boss, Dorothy Burns, arrives July 1, calls the girl's dorm life at the center "the real guts of this thing."

"This is the seat of self-government, this is the base of counseling action," he said. Most of the [illegible]

"[illegible] problems the girls have is their inexperience in group living," McAbee said. "Many of them have lived in a family of five or six in two rooms, but at least they were all members of the same family. Here they're not."

"The emphasis right now [illegible] learning themselves right in the girls' laps. [illegible] a few too many rules on them, and now we're trying to make the change-over," said RA Diana McColl, whose blunt talk about getting to work regularly and on time were quoted earlier.

Some of the staff, McAbee said, at first resisted this move toward democratization, and some of the girls who talked with a reporter this past week spoke of friction with their RAs. But McAbee thinks things are getting better.

Many of the girls say they enjoy dorm life. Some don't.

"It is just too many girls here," said one Negro girl from Oakland, a gal with purple-tinted hair. "I think they should take half these girls and send them to the Washington Job Corps."

But Burla Jean Baggs, a cute, waifish-looking 18-year-old from Las Vegas, thinks just the opposite.

"It (dorm living) is just like life itself, really," she said. "I never really cared for people when I first came here. I was a loner. But I've learned how to get along with people."

What the girls of Tongue Point apparently haven't learned is how to get along with the people of Astoria—or it might be the reverse of that. If one complaint stood out in conversations with a dozen or more girls, it was their unhappiness with the local folk.

"Seems to me like the people in Astoria, they don't like us," said Beverly "Dickie" Joseph, a quiet 18-year-old Negro girl from Beaumont, Tex. "The people in the stores don't treat you like other customers.

"Any every time you go into town, the people just look at you. The way they treat us makes me feel like they're pre judiced."

Some center staff members say that Astoria's reaction is predictible in a community that has few of any Negroes or other minority groups. (Tongue Point's population includes 38 per cent Negroes, 20 per cent Spanish-Americans, and six per cent Indians).

Deskin Bergey, an Astoria businessman and chairman of a council set up to try to provide good relations between the Tongue Point residents and Astoria citizens, thinks things aren't as bad as the girls says. He cites a recent Job Corps-conducted survey of a sampling of Astoria citizens that showed 69 per cent favored continuation of the center.

"A lot of local people have put forth an effort to be friendly," he said. But a Tongue Point staffer who didn't want to be quoted said, "Let's face it, Astoria is a damned unfriendly town."

As with the boys who preceded them, the Tongue Point girls find little to do when they do go into Astoria. With the arrival of summer, most of them head for Seaside or Cannon Beach, where there's more action. The center provides a bus on weekends.

The girls are allowed off the center until 10 p.m. on Sunday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights, and until midnight — an hour they consider too early—on Friday and Saturdays. Many of them date—local boys—Coast Guardsmen or Job Corps men from the Tillamook JC Camp.

The girls at the center come from 22 different states, as far away as Florida and South Carolina. The biggest portion of them—185—are from California. Promises by Office of Economic Opportunity officials that the Tongue Point Center would have 50 per cent of its girls from the Northwest have proved to be bureaucratic pie-in-the-sky—there are only 25 from Oregon, 35 from Washington, and none from Idaho or Montana.

The girls are about equally divided between rural or small town backgrounds or big cities. Most went no farther than the ninth grade in public schools and most have only ninth grade or lower reading ability.

There's no typical girl at the center. They run the gamut from pleasant to obnoxious, from neat to sloppy, from pretty to ugly.

But the majority seem to have a pretty good idea why they are at the center, and most of them say they like it.

For example, there's Sonia Mejia, a pretty Spanish-American girl from Los Angeles, who said, "I wanted to get away from home, someplace where I could study. At home, there's too many things happening.

"I'm in electronics assembly and I like it. And I'm working for my GED (TP parlance for high school diploma). I'm doing good. I've been getting above-average or average grades."

Sonia's one of six children, the daughter of a steel worker. When she finishes, she plans to go back to LA and get a job.

There seems generally to be a more settled air around Tongue Point than during the two years it was a somewhat turbulent men's center. Instructors say the gals are easier to teach and cause fewer problems—on or off the center.

"The biggest problem with the girls is that they aren't as emotionally stable," said McAbee. "They flare up easily, they get excited quickly.

"Another major problem is retaining them after they get here."

But Tongue Point's dropout rate thus far—95 out of 626 arrivals or 18 per cent—is lower than the 20 per cent national Women's Job Corps rate.

Under the University of Oregon's contract with OEO to operate the center, it costs about $7,500 per girl per year to run the place, McAbee said. (The federal General Accounting Office, using some highly loaded figures, had said it cost $15,000 a year per man for the men's center.)

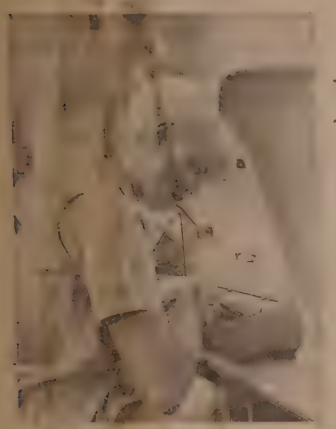
"Hopefully, if we could enlarge the center, we could get this down to about $5,500 a year," McAbee said. "We want to enlarge to 670, and we think OEO wants us to.

The center now has 293 employes for the 650 girl maximum enrollment, McAbee said. But to the critics who say the number of employes is too high, he replies that the center is really short staffed for its instruction program.

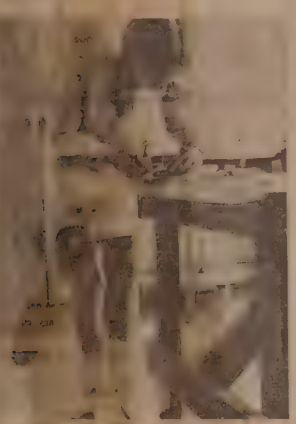
A good number of those employes are people required to run the sprawling center itself, he said.

McAbee is optimistic about Tongue Point's chances for success.

"We were able to start with a lot of experience, and with a philosophy," he said. "And we've learned what kind of program is needed."



Nadine Oxford Struggles with Typing



Burla Jean Baggs in Art Class

Sonia Mejia Practices Soldering

Doris Alexander Gives Makeup Tips

Pottery Class Is One of Most Popular

Beverly Joseph (Foreground) Takes a Letter

Center to Get 50 Corpswomen

due tonight at Tongue Point Job Corps Center. [illegible] arrived for [illegible] along with 37 from Texas and [illegible] Atlanta Job Corps [illegible] whom make [illegible] three corps.

Enrollment which had climbed [illegible] 650 by June 30 to [illegible] arrivals [illegible] late June has fallen [illegible] 640 because of the [illegible] group decided [illegible] go home, officials said.

In about two weeks another 50 or so are due to arrive from the San Francisco recruitment center.

Small groups are expected to continue to arrive [illegible] losses from various causes including [illegible]

First graduation at the women's center is expected [illegible] two weeks as one of the first groups of girls who entered March 15 when the center opened [illegible] training courses [illegible] their training courses will be from the food service courses [illegible] said.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon

New Job Corps Director Receives Bouquet

Anne Washter (left), Welcome Wagon hostess, presents bouquet of roses to Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, new director of Tongue Point Job Corps center, at staff assembly in Tongue Point theater building. Dr. Burns was introduced to center staff by former director Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan. (Job Corps Photo)

Job Corps Girls Due Recreation Center in Astoria

Federal approval has been received for a downtown recreational center for Tongue Point Job Corps Center girls it was announced at the community relations council meeting Tuesday night. The center will be located at 14th and Duane in the building formerly occupied by Bjorklund's Furniture on the Duane street side. Lynn Wykoff, community relations director at the Job Corps, said the center would be operated similar to a USO. It will be staffed by local people.

First graduation exercises will be held at the center in about two weeks, Wykoff said. There will be 20 to 30 girls in the first graduating group. Exercises will be held every two weeks in the future. The public will be invited.

A Miss Oregon type pageant will be held to select Miss Tongue Point, to represent the center in the Regatta.

A nominating committee will be appointed by Deskin Bergey, chairman of the community relations council.

Mental Health Clinic Slates Evening Hours

Clatsop county Mental Health clinic will remain open evenings four days a month, from 9 a.m.-9 p.m., in addition to the five days a week daily routine they have previously followed, with appointment of a new psychiatrist.

Services of Administrator Director Donald Winans, psychiatric, social worker; Dr. Tom Waters, psychologist, and Dr. G. Gordon Essert, phychiarist, will be available.

Dr Essert, Portland, replaces Dr. Louis Wolf, who terminated his services with the clinic July 1 and is now working at Tongue Point.

Dr. Essert will be at the clinic on a consultant basis for two 12-hour days, Mondays and Tuesdays, each second and fourth week of the month.

He has a private practice in Portland, which he set up four years ago, and also serves as consultant to other community mental health clinics in the state.

Dr. Essert came from Latvia to Canada after World War II, where he began training. He received his PhD in psychology and MD in phychiatry in Detroit.

He is married and has three daughters.

The evening openings of the clinic will enable the staff to better serve the needs of the community. Personnel offer child guidance, marital counseling and conciliation services, alcoholic rehabilitation, adult phychiatric treatment and family counseling.

Clinic offices are on the fourth floor of Columbia hospital.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JUL 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Oregon a review

OREGON SET A RECORD for fatalities over the long 4th of July weekend with a total of 42 deaths. It was bloodiest in Lane County, where 10 persons died in highway accidents.

WIDER EXPERIMENTATION with the drug dimethyl sulfoxide (DMSO) will be allowed by the Food and Drug Administration, Washington Correspondent A Robert Smith reported last week. Smith said FDA officials are working on an order to lift some of the restrictions on the drug. Smith said pressures from Rep. Wendell Wyatt, R-Ore., are in part responsible for the change in attitude. DMSO was developed by the UO Medical School and Crown Zellerbach Corp. It is a by - product of paper manufacturing.

DR. DOROTHY M. BURNS took over the reins at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center last week. She comes from Cabrillo College, Aptos, Calif. The center is home for 650 girl corps members.

Trainees Model Clothing Made In Sewing Class

Apparel made by Corpswomen at Tongue Point will be modeled in a free fashion show Thursday July 20, at the Tongue Point theater.

The public is invited to the show, scheduled for 8 p.m. Approximately 50 corpswomen will model garments they made in sewing classes at the center, according to chairman Louella Francis.

Assisting with arrangements are Josephine Hall, co-chairman; Phyllis Mays, publicity; Luella Seaborn, decorations; and Katie Thompson, hostess.

Also assisting are Irene Cox, Becky Torres, Searsy Allen, Dorothy Grady, Janie Spears, Mildred Lee, Martha Lester, Bonnie Paulson, Ermine Higgs, Lillie Powell, Rudy Holden, Deborah Cornelius, Eva Mitchell, Shirley Grady, Barbara Cobbs, Rita Moore, Mamie Pope, Eva McGhee, Leatha Wess, Mary Quinonez and Wylie N Robinson.

The Tongue Point drill team will perform. Their uniforms were made in the sewing class. Refreshments will be served by the Corpswomen.

Oregon Journal
JUL 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Girls' Center OKd

Hayward, California
Daily Review
(Cir. D. 35,348 - S. 35,416)
JUL 6 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Art Career Unfolds

He Changes Tire Iron For Chisel

By DICK THOMPSON

[illegible] Alfonso Cabrera to lay down his [illegible] and pick up a chisel [illegible] Hayward sculptor of [illegible]

He found the transition from auto mechanic to artist surprisingly easy.

"CABRERA WAS going to high school in San Lorenzo in 1950 when his mother died. He left school and knocked around trying to get work. He found a couple of jobs, but nothing permanent.

Then he saw an ad for the Job Corps in the window of the Youth Opportunity Center. He thought he might as well "give it a try."

Cabrera worked during the mornings on his trade. In the afternoons he worked on other subjects, including art. If he wasn't impressed with his artistic ability, his instructor was.

"ONE MORNING I was working in the shop and these two men came and talked with me and asked me if I would like to go to the University of Oregon," said Cabrera. "I told them [illegible] accept the scholarship the university was offering. Now he's [illegible]

Cabrera is back in Hayward for the summer looking for [illegible] Youth Opportunity Center.

HE PLANS to do sculpturing for stores, restaurants and [illegible] He also hopes to teach [illegible]

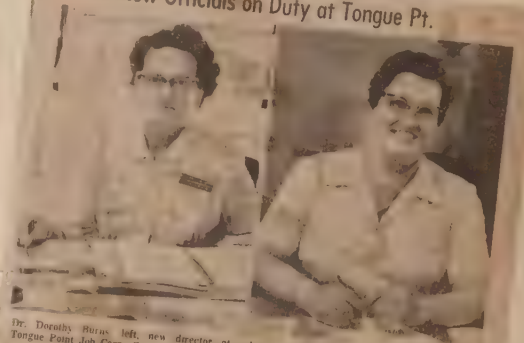
ALFONSO CABERA OF HAYWARD WITH ART WORK
Sculpturing Career Began With Oregon Job Corps

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

More Recruits Due

ASTORIA (AP) 27[illegible] [illegible] Center [illegible] from Texas and [illegible] The girls push the [illegible] enrollment close to [illegible]

New Officials on Duty at Tongue Pt.



Dr. Dorothy Burns left, new director at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, and Dr. Lillanna Kopp, new assistant director for center life, began their duties Wednesday morning.

Aptos, Calif.
Central County News
(Cir. W. 12,200)
JUN 21 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

TO HEAD OREGON JOB CORPS CENTER -- Dr. Dorothy Burns, Cabrillo college counselor and English instructor, has been named director of Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center in Oregon. Tongue Point is located four miles outside Astoria, Oregon. She is [illegible] women in the United States to hold [illegible] The Tongue Point center, a training unit under the Office of Economic Opportunities, is designed to teach job skills to disadvantaged young women from 16-21. Mrs. Burns has been granted a year's leave of absence from Cabrillo.

She is married to Robert Burns, insurance broker. They have [illegible] children, a daughter, Mariana Burns, 20, and Robert Burns, [illegible] reside at 31 Pine Hill rd., Corralitos.

She received her doctorate from the University of Oregon, her ME from San Diego State, her BS from the University of Illinois, and her BA from Indiana State University. -- News Photo.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est

1st Corpswomen Get Driver Permits

These Tongue Point Job Corpswomen were first from the center to receive driver instruction permits. After driving practice with instructor Bruce Fraser (center) the corpswomen will be eligible to take the test for an Oregon driver license. From left are Ruby Link, Frances Sheeley, Gladys Swift and Betty Lewis. (Job Corps Photo)

New Director, Associate Start Work at Job Corps Center

Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, new director of Tongue Point Job Corps center, is no stranger to Oregon although coming from California.

She spent two years at University of Oregon for her doctorate studies and says she likes the state.

Dr. Burns and family have arrived at Tongue Point, have spent a couple days unpacking at their home in Quarters A, and Wednesday she began her duties.

Also arriving to begin duties Wednesday was Dr. Lillanna Kopp, associate director for center life, who will be head of living arrangements and guidance counselling for the 650 trainees at Tongue Point center.

Dr. Kopp is here on leave from Marylhurst college where, [illegible] also includes Robbie, 9, a fourth grade student and Burns' mother, Mrs. Merman Burns.

Kopp noted that she is still a member of this order—the same order that runs Star of the Sea school here.

Dr. Kopp, although born in Montana and spending most of her life in Portland, is a granddaughter of John Kopp, long time Astoria resident and former sheriff of Clatsop county. He founded and operated the North Pacific Brewery, in the red brick building that now houses the East End branch fire station.

Dr. Burns, the new director, comes from Cabrillo college, Aptos, Calif., a community south of San Francisco. She has worked many years in teaching, counselling and administrative work among disadvantaged children in high schools and junior highs in Los Angeles and in Chula Vista, near San Diego.

At Cabrillo college she was a counsellor and administrator working in a community program that administered funds set for scholarship work. There she worked with students, staff and members of citizen organizations.

She said she is looking forward to advice and consultation with Dr Wendell Van Loan, retiring director who returns to duties at University of Oregon where he will be available for advice. She also looks forward to working with Dr. Harold McAbee, deputy director, whom she knew at University of Oregon.

Dr Burns' husband, Robert Burns, is an insurance broker and will conduct his business from Astoria and [illegible] insurance

Oregon Briefs

Recruits Expected

Michael S. Youngblood, Tongue Point Job Corps center art instructor is shown at his studio with some of his work which will be exhibited at the University of Oregon Student Union gallery beginning Sunday, July 9. Show will continue through July 29. (Job Corps Photo)

Art Work by Job Corps Dept. Chairman to Be Shown at UO

Paintings, prints and sculptures by Michael S. Youngblood, chairman of the art department at Tongue Point Job Corps Center will be exhibited in a one-man show at the University of Oregon Student Union gallery beginning Sunday, July 9.

The show will continue through July 29.

Youngblood concentrates on portraits and babies to represent his thoughts regarding human development, sex and the universe.

Much of his work reveals a bio-social tone where concentration is given spalting and multiplying of cells. This "cellular" approach also is carried through in his prints and wood sculpture.

His paintings are essentially produced by drawing outlines on a flat surface and adding three-dimensional components ranging from found object such as old screws and earphones to fine gravel.

His printing techniques involves ordinary crayon applied to a new transfer to the print. The technique was developed by Youngblood two years ago while experimenting with graphic materials suitable for classroom work in public schools.

Youngblood has been teaching art at the Job Corps Center since 1965. Earlier he taught in the art education department at the University of New Mexico and the University of Oregon and a master of arts degree from University of New Mexico.

He has exhibited in Oregon and New Mexico.

Man Sentenced, 2nd Convicted In Two Cases

Two criminal cases were disposed of Friday in Clatsop circuit court during a packed trial docket presided over by Multnomah Judge Phillip J. Roth.

The court sentenced Lloyd O'Neal, 28, of Warrenton, to 18 months in the Oregon Correctional Institute, Salem, on the defendant's guilty plea to a charge of taking and using an automobile without authority. Hall, represented by court-appointed attorney Jo[illegible] McCalister, entered a plea to the charge June 5 at his arraignment and a pre-sentence investigation was ordered by the court.

Michael McConnell, 25, of Warrenton, was found guilty in a trial before the court on the district attorney's waiver of indictment to the charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Witnesses called included arresting state police officers, a runaway Portland juvenile girl and the defendant.

McConnel pleaded not guilty to the charge at his arraignment June 21. He was represented by court-appointed attorney Larry Dean.

One of the witnesses Friday is currently serving a county jail sentence after pleading guilty in district court to lewd and lascivious cohabitation. The witness, Larry Nelson of Seaside, was arrested at McConnell's residence in the company of an AWOL Tongue Point Job Corps girl, Patricia Mullins.

The Portland girl, Nancy Osborn, was sheltered by McConnell for a four-five week period, according to witnesses. She posed as his sister, but denied on the stand that their relationship was other than "brother-sister" conduct. She was listed in police files as a "missing person" prior to her [illegible] at the McConnell re[illegible] local authorities.

Other wit[illegible] the trial were state policeme[illegible] Harry Brunnell and Harold Kottre, Mrs. Bonnie McGrew of Portland, mother of the runaway girl, and James Younger, a friend of the defendant.

District Attorney Frank J. Coumont represented the state at both criminal matters. A pre-sentence investigation has been ordered for McConnell.

Peter Cosovich Named Regatta Grand Marshall

Peter G. Cosovich, mayor of Astoria for eight years, has been named grand marshall of the 47th annual Regatta parade. It was announced late Tuesday.

Cosovich was one of the original sponsors to revive the Regatta celebration after it was discontinued during World War I. It was primarily through his efforts that the Regatta came back to life.

He explained that he and a group of prominent citizens gathered aboard Capt. Elfing's ferry, while crossing the river formulated a new Regatta association.

Cosovich recalled another early Regatta where the Pirates Den was staged in a mammouth basketball pavillion, then located at the foot of 17th Street. The pavillion was later destroyed by fire.

Cosovich is a native Astorian, born on Scow Bay, now Gyro field, on 18th street. He is a graduate of Astoria high school and Oregon State university.

Under his administration as mayor from 1950-58 he was instrumental in organization of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He also started the United Fund here, and was one of the sponsors of the Japanese-American mayor's conference.

In his tenure as mayor, the first Japanese training ship, a sailing vessel, called at Astoria in 1955. This was the Nippon Maru. The ship was followed in 1958 by the Kauwo Maru.

In 1916, Cosovich helped organize the first Boy Scout troop in Astoria, and served as assistant scoutmaster.

He is a past president of the Astoria chamber of commerce—four terms over a period of mayor—and is past president of the Kiwanis club. He has also devoted time as Republican precinct committeeman for several years.

In former years, when the American Legion presented musical comedies Cosovich was quite active.

PETER G. COSOVICH

He is presently program chairman of the Astoria chamber of the Community Relations council, Tongue Point Job Corps center, and a member of the National Geographic society.

For years, the grand marshall owned and operated Astoria Stationery company, a firm he sold in 1956. For 10 years he has been representative of Waistrom and Company, a brokerage investment firm. In the formative years of Clatsop community college Cosovich was an instructor of money management.

Pete and Carla Cosovich are parents of three sons. Peter Larry, manager of the Pan Am office in Rome; Jon, in Saudi Arabia, and Alan, with Northwest Natural Gas company in Salem. They have two grandchildren in Palo Alto.

Regatta Has Job Corps —

Tongue Point Job Corps center's Majorette and Drill team will participate in the Astoria Regatta parade. Other appearances made or scheduled by the group this summer and fall are the Miss Oregon Pageant, Vernonia Friendship Jamboree, West Linn Community Fair parade, Clackamas County Fair parade, and the Albany Linn Community Fair parade. They are also planning on half-time appearances at University of Oregon and Oregon State university basketball games, according to Roland Harris, director.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
AUG 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

CAP Officers Promoted — Dudley Miller, fireman, has been promoted from operations officer to deputy commander of the Tongue Point Job Corps center's Civil Air Patrol. He is a first lieutenant. Lyle Rake, also a fireman, has been promoted from 2nd Lt., maintenance officer, to military training officer. Both promotions were effective August 1.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,590)
AUG 9 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corps Staff in Astoria — Approximately one-third of the staff employed at Tongue Point Job Corps center now reside in and around Astoria, with the remainder living on the base and at Navy Heights, center officials said Monday. Total employed at the center now about 300 persons, they said.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,590)
AUG 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

IN FEBRUARY, 1965, Kenneth Charles of Port Angeles, Wash., became the first youth to enroll in an urban Job Corps center when he arrived at the Tongue Point Center, Astoria. Subsequently, he entered the Army, served two years, including a year in Vietnam, and now plans to resume his schooling under the G. I. Bill. Recently, Charles was present to watch his sister, Pat Charles, be graduated from Job Corps training — also at Tongue Point, since converted to a women's training center.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,590)
AUG 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corpswoman safety assistant Alice Williams records entry in book at main gate of Tongue Point Job Corps center while patrolman Kenneth Carlstrom watches. Twenty Corpswomen assist the Center's safety division.

Blue Berets Help Protect Astoria Training Center

Twenty young women, wearing blue berets and the Job Corps uniform, assist Tongue Point Job Corps Center security division several nights a week on a voluntary basis.

These young women form the Corps safety division, are carefully screened and work directly with the center's security staff.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 7,270)
AUG 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Economies First 776

To the Editor: Sen. Morse has repeatedly told us of the wasteful and dangerous spending in our foreign aid program. Sen. Hatfield favors cutting back the space program and stressed the unwarranted costs and inequities in the draft. Both speak of the economic and human tragedy of the [illegible] war in Vietnam.

Rep. Edith Green has been extremely [illegible] expenses of the [illegible] other federal [illegible] tion programs. Both Roy Wilkins and Dr. Martin Luther King have [illegible] to cut the [illegible] budget.

What [illegible] other operating costs upward by out-bidding school districts, cities, counties and states for personnel, materials and services? Federal agencies. How many "do nothing" $26,000 jobs such as the Subversive Board exists in Washington? And what about reports of federally - supported poverty workers leading riots in Newark and elsewhere?

There are ways of reducing the tax burden at the federal level. We should let our representatives in Congress know that we expect they demand substantial reduction in the federal budget before another tax increase is approved.

ROBERT M. SHEPHERD,
1528 Larch St.,
Lake Oswego.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,590)
AUG 10 1967

African Coeds Here for Tour Of US; Astoria

Two young coeds, one whose home is in Ghana, the other from Nigeria, will be guests in Astoria Thursday and Friday while on a 1½ month tour of the United States.

The tour is part of the Educational Travel Program of the Bureau of Education and Cultural Affairs of the US Department of State, under sponsorship of the African-American Institute, Washington, D. C.

Stella Njoku, attending the University of Leeds, Yorkshire, England, is an electrical engineering student. Her home is in Enugu, Nigeria.

Eleanor Darkwa is a third year student at the honor school of St. High's college, Oxford, England, where she is studying history. Her home is in Kumasi, Ghana.

A third young lady, from Kenya and studying at the University of Wales, Zainul Abdulmohamed Premji Dhanji, was slated to come also. However, she has relatives in the San Diego area, so from Denver, she was routed to that area.

Bill Seeborg, official host, will greet the girls at the bus depot at noon Thursday when they arrive from Portland. Seeborg is World Affairs Council of Oregon foreign visitors program representative, an entirely voluntary organization.

Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Seeborg will be Mrs. Herbert Berreth, president of the American Association of University Women program; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Axtell hosts, who will open their home to the young women; Mr. and Mrs. Deskin Bergey, hosts to state department escort, Mrs. Rose Marie Selaya.

Thursday the girls will be guest at an informal lunch at the Fiesta club and at 2:30 p.m. will be greeted by Mayor Harry Steinbeck, City Manager Dale Curry and other city officials at city hall.

[illegible]ficials at city hall, Mrs. Harold McAbee will assist in the tour of the county Friday.

The busy agenda calls for a tour of Tongue Point Job Corps center from 4-5 p.m. Dinner will be in home of the hosts and hostesses.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 7,270)
AUG 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Director's Son Saved

Robbie Burns, nine-year-old son of Tongue Point Job Corps Center director Dr. Dorothy Burns, was saved from possible drowning Tuesday when he fell into the Columbia river while walking to crew members of the dredge Biddle which was docked at a Tongue Point pier.

George Ricker, operator of the John Miser launch for the US Corps of Engineers, saw the youngster fall and jumped in after him. He was returned to the pier unhurt.

The boy's father, Robert Burns, said his son was not a swimmer and that he could have drowned had it not been for Ricker's quick rescue.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 7,270)
AUG 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Receive Certificate — Michael McCowan, operations and maintenance, Tongue Point Job Corps center, has been awarded a certificate by the Sewage Work Operators Certification committee of Oregon for his efforts in the field of water pollution control. This is a voluntary program conducted by the operators, Oregon State University and the Oregon State Board of Health in conjunction with the short school program at OSU. These programs make it possible to train people whose responsibility it is to help protect the water resource.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,590)
AUG 9 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Huntley-Brinkley—No, not the noted television commentary team. In this case it's Mavis Huntley, Lynnwood, Wash., and Mary Annette Brinkley, Santa Rosa, Calif., both enrolled as corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps center. Neither one claims relationship to their famous namesake.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 7,270)
AUG 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Philco [illegible] visits [illegible] tour — Dr. J [illegible] of Philco-Ford's education systems management operations, and Joseph F. O'Donnell, marketing representative for education and training programs, will visit the Tongue Point Job Corps center Friday, August 11. Their purpose is to obtain a firsthand view of operation and to meet staff members, according to Howard Gentry, associate director, vocational educati[illegible]

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 7,270)
AUG 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Secretary to Leave — Sue Patlee, secretary [illegible] center life, will leave Tongue Point Job Corps center the first week in September to enroll at Brigham Young university, Provo, Utah, where she will study either journalism or creative writing.

Job Corps Youth Held

NEWPORT—A student at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center is being held in [illegible] here on two charges.

William Eugene Grifel was arrested by city police Thursday night and charged with being a minor in possession of liquor. He was later served with a District Court warrant charging him with taking and using an automobile without the owner's permission.

Bail on the liquor charge was set at $100. The bail on the automobile charge is $2,000.

BPW Reception to Honor 'Status of Women' Group

...ing breakfast with corpswomen and a tour of the campus. Dr. Dorothy N. Burns, center director, is scheduled to speak to the group that day.

...Portland. Vern Truesdell, Mrs. Carl Monsen, Miss Adelaine Sather and Mrs. Michael Youngblood.

...Mrs. Patricia Perry, Portland ... Loan coordinator of continuing ... Corpswomen enrolled in ... Corpswomen of the Month ... Dr. Lillian Van Loan and ... who will rep... Saturday the committee ... at the Job Corps ... ses.

...The local BPW organization ... give a brief talk. She is the wife ... will hold its business meeting ... was primarily responsible for ... of former Tongue Point Job ... at the Job Corps Center, follow-

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D. 146,674)
JUL 29 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Flemming Due At Job Center

ASTORIA — Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, University of Oregon president, will pay his first visit Aug. 3 to the women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point.

He last visited the center about a year ago, prior to its conversion from a men's Job Corps establishment.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
JUL 25 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

First Graduation For Corpswomen Slated Friday

First graduation ceremony for corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps Center will be held at the center theatre building at 1:30 p.m. Friday, according to center officials. The public is invited. Graduation will be followed by [illegible] approximately monthly intervals, they said.

This represents a change in policy from the operation of the center as boys' training facility, it was pointed out, since formal exercises were not held for corpsmen who completed job skill courses.

Friday's program, in addition to presentation of completion certificates to graduating young women, will feature organ and vocal music and an address by Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, center director. Dr. H. V. McAbee, deputy director, will preside, and Mayor Harry Steinbock will speak briefly, extending congratulations to the graduate on behalf of the community.

Explaining the decision to hold formal graduation ceremonies, center officials said completion of their Job Corps program represents a major achievement for the corpswomen, and should be recognized in a memorable program similar to that of a public school.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
JUL 27 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Swedish Cadets To View Rescue Work by CG

A demonstration of air-sea rescue operations in the river east of Tongue Point by a Coast Guard helicopter will be a feature of the visit here Monday of six Swedish cadets. The demonstration is scheduled for 11:30 a.m., and during the afternoon the visiting group will tour the Coast Guard air station at the airport.

The Swedish youths will be in Astoria during a two-week exchange visit in Oregon as guests of various Civil Air Patrol squadrons. The Tongue Point CAP squadron will be host here.

Program for the visitors, who will be accompanied by a Swedish Air Force officer, includes a tour of Tongue Point Job Corps Center, an official welcome at city hall, and visits to the Maritime Museum, Astoria Column and Fort Clatsop. The cadets will be hosted by selected members of the Tongue Point CAP and will have lunch and dinner at Tongue Point. They will be overnight guests of CAP staff members.

Also accompanying the cadets will be Lt. Al Larsen, CAP project officer, and Lt. Charles Gordon, also a CAP staff officer.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
JUL 17 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Receive GED Certificates

Five corpswomen from Tongue Point to earn GED certificates, equivalent to a high school diploma, are (from left) Ethel Williams, Phoenix, Ariz.; Rhonda Blevins, Gainesville, Tex., and Judy Lamb, Grand Prairie, Tex. All three dropped out of school after completing the 11th grade. (Job Corps Photo)

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oreg.
D 29,034 - S 32
JUL 21
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Dr. Dunlop At Meeting

ASHLAND — Dr. Betty Lou Dunlop of Southern Oregon College, is one of the members of the Governor's committee on the Status of Women, attending a meeting this weekend at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center near Astoria.

The group will be honored this evening at a reception given by the Astoria Business and Professional Women's Club.

The BPW organization was primarily responsible for the formation of the committee by pointing out the urgent need to then — Gov. Mark O. Hatfield, who made the appointments. All BPW club members in the state have been invited to the reception.

Dr. Lillian VanLoan, coordinator of continuing education for women, Division of Continuing Education, will be banquet speaker. She is the wife of former Tongue Point Job Corps Center Director Wendell VanLoan. Dr. Dorothy N. Burns, center director, is scheduled to speak to the group Saturday [illegible] the center is on the program.

New Job Corps Openigs Available For Women-See Mrs. dna Hayda

The Western Region of the Office of Economic Opportunity, with headquarters in San Francisco, headquarters in Washington, D. C., that the quota for women to be accepted for training in the Job Corps has been greatly increased. The quota for the Western Region is 876 throughout the United States is now 11,500.

Mrs. A. V. Hayda, area [illegible] man for the WICS (Women in Community Service) which is the national organization designated to do the screening of all girls volunteered to carry out this program are ready and anxious to assist any women who are interested in taking advantage of this opportunity.

The Job Corps is a voluntary national residential training program for young women between the ages of 16 and 22 who are out of school, out of work, financially unable to continue their further training to enable them to obtain and hold an adequate job.

Job Corps Women's centers offer an enrollee intensive and specialized vocational training for jobs for which there are demands for workers.

In addition to basic education, occupational training and work experience, the program includes training in home and family responsibilities.

The center enrollments vary from 250 to 700 and are located in what were foremerly hotels, college dormitories and veterans administration hospitals.

Job Corps Women's centers are operated under contract between OEO and industrial corporations, universities and some by the YWCA.

Two new centers were recently opened at Tongue Point, Oregon, and Moses Lake, Washington. Each center has developed its own vocational program. Some of the courses offered are business and clerical occupations, switchboard operator, typist, secretary, office machines and bookkeeper, beautician, nurses' aides, dental assistant, library aides, recreation assistant, and many occupations in food and service.

In addition to receiving basic education and vocational training, the women receive their room, board, clothing, medical care plus $30 per month spending money and $50 per month saved for them for each month of satisfactory

A young woman may spend from six months to two years in her training. Guidance and counseling services are available at all centers.

One local girl, Sharon Ware, from Fieldbrook, has been in training at Poland Springs, Maine, since last October. She has finished a course as nurses aide and is now training as a psychiatric aide. She was flown home for a visit with her family after six months in training. Sharon writes that she is happy at Poland Springs and feels that the Job Corps is a really wonderful opportunity for girls to help herself, who was unable to work rather than babysitting for her at home. She and a friend are hoping to get work in the hospital where they are now training.

For information regarding the Job Corps go to the employment office in Eureka or call Mrs. Roy Stewart of Arcata, Mrs. Frank Jager of Eureka or Mrs. A. V. Hayda of Fortuna.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
JUL 26 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corpswomen Elect Officers

Student government officers recently elected by Tongue Point Job Corpswomen include Patricia Sidney, Galveston, Tex., general director; Fayola Pierl, Beaumont, Tex., deputy director; Bernice Thomas, Beaumont, secretary, and Jewel Boult, Houston, Tex., business manager. General director is same as president. The new officers will serve for four months.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D. 7,270)
JUL 17 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Nigerian Slates Tongue Pt. Visit

In Astoria Friday to visit Tongue Point Job Corps Center will be Onofiok Andrew Ufot, senior assistant registrar and head of the data processing section of the West African Examinations Council, Yaba, Nigeria.

He will come here from the University of Oregon where he discussed the university's adult education programs and visited lumber operations in the area. His trip is part of a nationwide tour as a participant in the international visitor program of the U.S. state department's bureau of educational and cultural affairs.

The visitor is a graduate of University college, London, and has a varied background as a high school teacher and headmaster in secondary schools and training colleges of his own nation.

Suspended Term For Probation Violation Given

Roger Lee Moore, 22-year-old former Tongue Point corpsman, received a suspended state prison term of seven years for violation of his probation in Clatsop circuit court Monday. He was ordered to serve six months in the county jail and was put on a new period of probation for five years.

Moore, a West Virginian, appeared before Judge James M. Burns of Portland to show cause why his probation should not be revoked as recommended by Victor Burger, state parole officer. State's case was prosecuted by Frank J. Coumont, district attorney, and the defendant's court-appointed attorney was Patrick Lavis.

Burger, called as a witness by the state, charged Moore violated his parole on several counts, including furnishing liquor to minors for which he was arrested and pleaded guilty.

Lavis, called Clatsop Sheriff Carl Bondietti as a witness. The sheriff said Moore had been a cooperative prisoner when serving out his first six-month sentence and that he was one of several jail inmates put on a work-release program. Bondietti said the program generally did not work well for others but Moore responded favorably to it.

The court posed the same question to both the defendant and the sheriff by asking what they would do if the situation were reversed and each sitting in judgment of the case. Moore offered no solution but Bondietti recommended a sentence of some type with work-release type supervision.

In passing sentence, Judge Burns detailed to Moore the cost of his education in the Job Corps, his ability as an auto mechanic and the expense already incurred to the taxpayers of the county in society's attempt to rehabilitate him as a useful and law abiding citizen. "We're all here to help you, but you have to cooperate," Moore was told.

Other conditions meted out by the court were that Moore must pay for the pending court costs of an earlier trial, his attorney's services must be reimbursed and the sheriff could work out another work-release program for the defendant if he saw fit.

Empire Builder
Coos Bay, Oregon
(Cir. [illegible],880)
JUL 27 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Poverty Programs

Are most Oregonians accepting with any degree of enthusiasm the handouts of the federal government through the Office of Economic Opportunity?

We believe not. Many people of our historically conservative state are really questioning if this present situation is a "status builder" and a true economic necessity. Oregon, in reverse, not only contributes heavily in federal taxes, but also over 51 per cent of the land in the state is owned and or managed by the federal government.

Any pittance of funds, in turn, sent back here from Washington, D.C., under rules about how the money is to be spent, is galling to many, including state and city officials. OEO since its beginning, has been criticized for authoring general programs for the War on Poverty instead of allowing local Community Action groups to plan what they feel might possibly be needed.

Oregon doesn't have a monthly, or even a weekly, report of poverty programs. However, OEO headquarters evidently does have that kind of money to spend, as newspapers have been receiving copies. Here is a report of statistics as of July 7:

WEEKLY SUMMARY OF POVERTY PROGRAMS

COMMUNITY ACTION — Total during Fiscal 1967 $820,740,368 in Federal funds for 6,543 grants. Project Upward Bound new funding for 1967-68 school year 248 projects, 22,286 students at a Federal cost of $26,942,163. The Foster Grandparents program for fiscal 1967 includes 54 projects financed by $5,327,540 in Federal funds.

Under project Head Start in Fiscal 1967, 240,500 children have been enrolled in the year-round program, financed by $198,572,480 in Federal funds. For the summer of '66 program 573,000 children were enrolled at a cost of $97,000,000.

There are 250

LEGAL SERVICES programs at a Federal cost of $24,217,422 for Fiscal year 1967. The Migrant projects are financed by $33,117,656 in Federal funds for Fiscal year 1967. There are 191 Indian programs at a Federal cost of $23,289,042 in Fiscal years 1966 and 1967.

JOB CORPS — 42,583 youth (32,942 males, 9,641 females) are enrolled in 122 center including 92 conservation centers, ten urban centers for men, eighteen for women and [illegible] special centers. The program, including capital outlays [illegible] other costs, is financed by $303,400,861 in obligated Federal funds in Fiscal 1966-$205,037,270 in Fiscal 1967.

VISTA — There are now 6,174 Volunteers in Service to America, including 2,063 in training, at a Federal cost of $15,976,713 in Fiscal 1966 and $26,000,000 to date in Fiscal 1967. More than 7,800 have already completed their service or are now serving as VISTA Volunteers.

NEIGHBORHOOD YOUTH CORPS (Dept. of Labor) — In FY '67 1,419 projects have been approved for 483,471 at a Federal cost of $362,603,480.

WORK EXPERIENCE (H.E.W.) — In Fiscal 1967, 31 projects have been approved for 6,173 participants at a Federal cost of $7,835,300. Approved are 244 renewals of the Fiscal 1966 projects for 69,557 participants at a Federal cost of $85,485,061. Approved under amendments are projects for 1,476 participants at a Federal cost of $5,329,527.

LOANS — Rural loans (Dept. of Agri) Total $31,692,457 for Fiscal 1967.

Job Corps CAP To Help Form Tillamook Group

Corpswomen and staff members of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center Civil Air patrol squadron are going to Tillamook Wednesday night to assist in organizing a new CAP squadron there, according to Warrant Officer Doris Alexander of the Tongue Point squadron. The local group will represent the Oregon CAP Wing at the organization ceremony.

Last week 20 corpswomen and six staff members of the squadron were guests of the Astoria Flight Service and the U.S. Weather Bureau at Astoria airport for a demonstration and weather information procurement.

Oregon Journal
[illegible]
JUL [illegible] 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Astoria Meeting Planned

[illegible] Corpswomen [illegible] Forest [illegible] Tongue Point [illegible] Center [illegible] Wednesday [illegible] Astoria [illegible] Business and Professional Women [illegible] Mrs. Adelaine Sather [illegible] president of the [illegible] will speak on "What the Women in the Community Can Do to Improve the Status of Women at the Job Corps Center and How Can Women in the Community Work with These Girls Most Effectively?" Dr. Van Loan is the wife of former Job Corps Center director, Wendell Van Loan. Currently she is coordinator of Continuing Education for Women, at Eugene.

At 10 a.m. Saturday the committee will tour the Job Corps Center, led by JoAnn Youngblood, assistant in corps community relations department.

In June Mrs. Fariss was asked by Gov. Tom McCall to continue as chairman of the committee. At the swearing in ceremony at the Capitol Building Ed Westerdahl gave the obligation to the 20 members who were present.

The committee is [illegible] Western Regional [illegible] of Committees on the Status of Women to be held in Oregon, possibly in November.

Morse Details His Record In Congress, Cites Election Issues

[illegible] that he has "no intention of letting the executive branch tell me, as a member of the Congress, what is good and what is not good for the state [illegible]

Other projects me[illegible] which he has worked [illegible] include the [illegible] Reclamation Project west of Portland, the field of education, the Public Northwest Water Laboratory in Corvallis, the Tongue Point Job Corps [illegible], the Boardman School [illegible] case, (where the Senator objected to the proposed dike near the school due to the construction of the John Day Dam), and several research projects.

[illegible] on we have."

Commenting on his July 13 appointment by President Johnson as chairman of the mediation board to seek settlement of the railroad labor dispute, Sen. Morse noted that he mediated his first case 32 years ago in Eugene.

[illegible]

never chosen the "easy way out," because "popularity becomes of no significance when the interests of my state or the people I represent in the Senate are in the balance."

Mentioning that he is contin[illegible]

(See Story on P[illegible]

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
JUL [illegible] 1967
Allen's P.C.S. Est. 1888

Local Army Reservist Wins World Pistol Championship

[illegible] Sgt. Lafayette F. Keaton of Astoria's Army Reserve [illegible] company who is presently [illegible] for at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, has [illegible] championship [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Symbols and Shapes

PAINTINGS, PRINTS and sculpture by Michael Youngblood, chairman of the Tongue Point Job Corps art department, will continue through July 29 on exhibit at the University of Oregon student union gallery.

The artist concentrates on symbols and shapes to represent his thoughts regarding human development, sex and the universe. Much of his work reveals a biological theme with concentration on the splitting and multiplying of cells. Shown here are "Gestation," left, an acrylic with gravel and padding added for a three-dimensional effect, and "Earth," below, an acrylic which demonstrates the molecular composition of the earth's materials.

Youngblood's painting technique involves crayon melted to allow transfer to the print. This technique was developed two years ago when the artist was experimenting with inexpensive materials for public school classrooms.

He holds a bachelor's degree in art education from the U of O and a master of arts degree from the University of New Mexico, where he taught in the art education department before joining the Job Corps staff in 1965.

Boy Rescued From Columbia

the launch John S[illegible] ran to the spot, pumped in, and helped the boy until others threw life preservers and a heaving line to tow them to shore. Ricker lost his wrist watch and other items.

Big Red Transferred For Job Corps

Big Red, the be horse which was left at the Tongue Point Jobs Corps Center after it was changed from a young men's to a young women's institution, has been transferred to the men's Job Corps Center in Tillamook.

This horse was found missing by auditors who checked the government's property after the change over to the women's institution. Big Red was purchased two years ago with the center's recreation funds. But the critter was stabled on John Day River where corpsmen earned its feed by doing odd jobs.

When the sex of the center was changed, the young men enrollees assumed that they were free to sell the $45 horse. They held a lottery and Big Red was won by a corpsman who disposed of it in another lottery. This time the winner sold the horse to a Lewis and Clark farmer.

The government auditors asked the overseer of the recreation fund to bring around the government's $45 horse. He purchased it for $27.50 and in a rented trailer delivered the animal to the center. It has been given serial number 18,546.

Big Red was provided a trough as well and water, but people began complaining that the government's horse wasn't being fed. How to tap the national treasury to take care of Big Red wasn't a simple matter because no horse was authorized for the center. Eventually, however, Big Red got a bale of hay and once the precedent was established, the hay kept coming.

But taxpayers still protested that the government wasn't looking properly after Big Red because he continued to look lean. Oats did no good.

Instead of getting a public relations expert to make the lean horse appear fleshy, someone with veterinary knowledge appears to have decided that Big Red never would pick up weight because of internal injuries he had suffered before he had been purchased with $45 from the recreation fund.

It is presumed that the horse was declared surplus and transferred to Tillamook as a $45 government property, serial number 18,546.

Flemming Sees Committee Okeh For OEO Funds

Dr Arthur S Flemming president of the University of Oregon which operates Tongue Point Job Corps Center, is optimistic that the Office of Economic Opportunity will receive generous treatment from the house education and labor committee he and persons attending a luncheon at the center Thursday.

Dr Flemming said he testified before the committee which is holding hearings on amendments to the economic opportunity act in Washington last week. He said he appeared in his capacity as president of the National Council of Churches which has voiced strong endorsement of the OEO and its war on poverty projects including Job Corps.

He believes the committee has been impressed by the wide area of support on poverty projects have received from many groups, Flemming said. He predicted that increased funds may be authorized.

The luncheon, attended by a group of Clatsop civic and community leaders, was in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Flemming. Dean and Mr. Paul F Jacobsen of the University school of education and Dr. Mrs. Ray Hoos. Dr. Hoos is a special assistant to the president in charge of the university's federal programs.

The luncheon was prepared and served by corpswomen in the center's food services occupations classes, under direction of Glynn Price, supervisor of that department. The "Soul Sisters," a group of six corpswomen, provided musical entertainment.

Thursday afternoon a reception and tea honoring the university visitors was held in the center library, with center officials headed by Director Dorothy M Burns as hosts.

Albuquerque, N.M.
Journal
(Circ. D 57,909 D 60,341 S)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1885

Roberta I. Cox

Miss Cox Wins Award

Journal Special

ASTORIA — Ore... women Roberta I. Cox da... ter Mr. and Mrs. La... bun Cox ... 516 San Pa... SE Albuquerque, was ... co... the Corps... an... of the Month award for July at the ... Job Corps Center here.

Miss Cox, 17, has been at the center since May... she ... eight weeks in a ... pro... gram ... preparation ... center, as a junior ...

Women at the center are ... to ... exp... per... in ... an ... vocational ... skills ... most demon... Miss Cox is doing ... of ... for ... In addition to a ... she received a gift certificate for ... and ...

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Circ. D 7,270)
AUG 3 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

29 Receive Graduation Certificates at Job Corps Center

Awaiting presentation of graduation certificates at Friday's exercises in Tongue Point theater building were 29 corpswomen (top photo) who have completed training and will be leaving Tongue Point Job Corps center for on-the-job training or to seek employment. Seated on theater stage (lower photo) as center director Dr. Dorothy Burns presented graduation address were (from left) Deskin Bergey, chairman of the center's community relations committee; Virgil Savage, religious coordinator (partly hidden); Mayor Harry Steinbock, who brought congratulations from the community; Mrs. Irma Wood, supervisor, health services occupations; Deputy Director H. V. McAbee; Dr. Lillianna Kopp, director of center life; Howard Gentry, director of vocational education. (Job Corps center photos)

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Circ. D 6,880)
AUG 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

BPW Entertains Governor's Committee

Members of Gov. McCall's Committee on the status of Women were honored at a reception recently by the Astoria Business and Professional Women's club. Mrs. Gertrude Houk Farris, at left, chairman of the committee, chats with BPW president Adelaine Nathe... center and Mrs. Harry Steinbock, ... members of the governor's committee are in foreground and in back, Corpswomen at the reception held in the Tongue Point libra...

Trainees Work In Other Fields

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Circ. D 7,270)
AUG 3 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

McCall to Hear County Problems at 'Town Hall'

Gov. Tom McCall will meet with a select group of ... ...ty-wide people interested in pre... ...ting problems at two pro... ...ns here today, August 18 in ... ...ne of town ...

Attend... the invi... to meeting ... ...ed to 24 ... the county and ... ...ed four speakers with ... allotted five minutes.

The county intergovernmental committee and chamber of commerce are working jointly on the no-host invitational meeting ... ...ons from ... ...ion interest in the coun...

Those attending will attempt to relate to McCall the industrial and economic climate of the county and needs apparent from the state standpoint. What must be done to increase industrial development potential and problems from the standpoint of livability as related to industry will be presented to McCall.

Conference with local speakers will run from 5-6:30 p.m., after which there will be a half hour adjournment. This will give McCall an opportunity to confer with his staff.

At 7 p.m., an additional 25 guests will gather for a no-host dinner. At completion, the governor will spend approximately 30 minutes summarizing his results of the discussion. McCall's remarks will be broadcast by local radio stations.

He will inform those in attendance of his administration's plans to advance Clatsop's economy.

At approximately 8:30 p.m., the public will be invited to meet the governor.

Earlier in the day, from 3-4 p.m., McCall will visit Tongue Point Job Corps center. This tour will be televised. He will come here by plane directly from Newport, and will depart early Friday.

GOV. TOM McCALL

Interests to be represented will be forestry, fishing, tourism and conventions, agriculture, retail business, utilities, transportation, exports and foreign trade, education, government planning and zoning and labor.

Twelve will be traveling in the governor's party, including Andrew V. Smith, vice president of Pacific Northwest Bell and chairman of the governor's advisory committee on economic development, Oregon State Department of Commerce; and Paul R. Nordstrom, administrator, economic development division, State Department of Commerce.

In addition, there will be newsmen with the governor representing UPI, AP, the Oregonian and the Journal. There is a possibility of television coverage of the meeting.

The series of meetings are sponsored by the economic development division of the Department of Commerce, who in turn requested assistance in local planning from the Astoria chamber of commerce.

Charles Wood, chamber of commerce president, will be master of ceremonies. Official hosts will be Mayor Harry Steinbock, Jean Ballaux, chamber of commerce manager, and Wood.

Official guests are state Sen. Dan Thiel and Rep. William Holmstrom.

One member each from the five local news media, the Daily Astorian, KVAS, KAST, the Seaside Signal and Columbia Press, will be invited to report on the meeting.

Chamber commerce members planning the conference with the governor include Ray Dreeszen, Erling Orwick, Ed Opdycke, Richard Nelson, Robert Chopping and Arnold Swanson.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Circ. D 6,880)
AUG 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

UO President Visits Job Corps Center

Bill Van Dusen (center) chats with Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, Tongue Point Job Corps center director, and Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, University of Oregon president, at luncheon at the center Thursday. It was Dr. Flemming's first visit to Tongue Point since its conversion to a girls' training center. (Job Corps Photo)

Job Corps Trainee Hiring Wins Firm Award

HENRY BARRA, LEFT, IS CONGRATULATED for the quality of his workmanship at Webster-Wollard, Oregon City, by Gerald Webster, owner of the firm. Barra was hired by the firm after spending 10 months at the Tongue Point Job Corps center. Webster-Wollard received a certificate of appreciation from President Lyndon Johnson and a letter of appreciation from Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey.

President Thanks Firm For Roll in Program

Webster - Wollard and, Oregon City, has received a certificate of appreciation from President Lyndon Johnson and Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey for the firm's participation in the Youth Opportunity Campaign by hiring a young Tongue Point Job Corps trainee.

Henry Barra, 21, a California, is the youth who found new opportunity through the program and Webster-Wollard's role in it.

Barra said he was unhappy with his employment in California and discovered the Job Corps as a means to better his station in life by improving his skills. He signed up for training and was sent to Tongue Point where he spent 10 months training to become an automobile mechanic.

After Barra had finished his training, he was hired by Webster-Wollard as an apprentice mechanic. That was last December, and Barra has been continuing his training at the Oregon City firm. He is pleased with his new position and has more than lived up to the expectations of Webster-Wollard.

"I am grateful for your support of the President's Youth Opportunity Campaign," Vice-President Humphrey wrote in a letter sent with the certificate of award.

"You have opened new opportunities to these young Americans, which, I am sure, will help to prepare them for a brighter future. The Nation is stronger for your contribution.

"I know I speak for the president when I say that you have our deep appreciation," Humphrey concluded.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
AUG 7 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

The Daily Astorian, Astoria, Oregon, Monday, August 7, 1967

Convivial Conversation at Tea Party

Dr. Arthur S. Fleming, president of the University of Oregon, who was guest of honor at the reception Thursday afternoon given by Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, center director, chats with groups of corpswomen during the event, held in center's spacious and modern library.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
AUG 7 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

New Plant Diverts Astorians' Sights

By PHIL HUNT
Journal Business Editor

ASTORIA — Astoria business [illegible] ticipants in McCall's second [illegible] of the Columbia River — though the meeting was held in the shadow of the bridge provided by Oregon citizens as a boon to the community's tourist industry.

It wasn't that the Astorians were unmindful of the state's contribution to their economic welfare. The fact is they have new "fish to fry" in an area which has historically been dependent on lumber and fish. Now they are turning to other economic developments to pull this "once distressed area" into the "boom category."

If all goes well with North-[illegible] ed $142 million project here, the Astoria area will experience a 1,000-job increase in aluminum plant workers, with a total estimated population jump of 3,200 by 1970, expected date of the plant's completion.

WHILE SOME mention was made at the meeting of the new $85 million Crown Zellerbach paper mill at Wauna on the Columbia River, which has added considerably to the Astoria economy, almost no attention was given to the fed-[illegible]eral Job Corps training center for [illegible] Point, a facility that McCall [illegible]

SCHEDULED [illegible] most of the Oregon coast from Newport to Astoria, including controversial Pacific City where highway relocation problems have plagued the governor, McCall was forced by heavy fog at Newport to drive past the Pacific City junction to Tillamook Thursday afternoon, putting him nearly two hours behind schedule when he flew the remaining 70 miles from Tillamook to Astoria.

At the Astoria meeting, local leaders also raised questions about the need for highway improvements, and asked for information concerning the Highway Commission's plans for relocation of U.S. 30 through Astoria, the need for property tax relief and the possibility of state assistance on various local problems when the Northwest Aluminum plant comes into being.

The governor's party of 12 was scheduled to visit Tillamook Friday as the final call on the current town hall tour.

IN FEBRUARY, 1965, Kenneth Charles of Port Angeles, Wash., became the first youth to enroll in an urban Job Corps center when he arrived at the Tongue Point Center, Astoria. Subsequently, he entered the Army, served two years, including a year in Vietnam, and now plans to resume his schooling under the G. I. Bill. Recently, Charles was present to watch his sister, Pat Charles, be graduated from Job Corps training — also at Tongue Point, since converted to a women's training center.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
AUG 7 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Sees Sister Graduate

In February, 1965, Kenneth Charles, Port Angeles, Wash., became the first youth to enroll in an urban Job Corps center when he arrived at the Tongue Point center at Astoria. Subsequently he entered the Army, served two years, including a year in Vietnam, and now plans to resume his education under the GI Bill. Last week Charles was present to watch his sister, Pat Charles, graduate from Job Corps training—also at Tongue Point, since converted to a women's center.

Education Board In Astoria

(Continued from Page 1)

amounted to only one-half of one per cent.

Gertrula has been involved in construction of seven schools and colleges, and said that Clatsops was the smoothest project he had seen.

At an informal discussion period following the tour, Dan Donham, dean of students, explained the college has been approached by Tongue Point officials, who have said there are girls at the center who would profit by the college's liberal arts course.

They sign guests in and out, answer the telephone, type, file record data, answer the two-way radio and perform other duties previously handled by the regular security personnel. Duty hours are 5 p.m. to mid-night Wednesday through Sunday.

On Wednesday nights the girls attend a class conducted by the security staff and which includes discussion of law enforcement narcotics and police qualifications.

"The Corpswomen are expected to set an example for other girls," said A. G. Dunn, safety and security director at the Center. "Their help to us is invaluable."

Alice Williams of Madison, Fla., is acting chairman of the organization.

The girls will meet Gov. Tom McCall in his tour of the Tongue Job Corpes Center Thursday afternoon.

Friday calls for sightseeing in Clatsop county, kicked off by a 10 a.m. tour of Bumble Bee Seafoods cannery. From there, hosts plan to take the girls on a junket that will cover the Astoria Column, Fort Stevens state park, Seaside, Cannon Beach and Neahkahnie mountain, eating lunch en route.

At 6:30 Friday evening, the two will again be honored at a no-host dinner at the Sea [illegible] restaurant, and will spend the remainder of the evening and Saturday morning with their hosts. They will leave Astoria Saturday at 9:30 a.m.

Their US tour began July 15, will end August 29.

Astoria BPW To Honor Governor's Committee On Status Of Women At Tea

Mrs. Don Denning, Bend, is a member of the Oregon State Governor's Committee on the Status of Women who will be meeting this weekend at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center. The group will be honored by the Astoria Business and Professional Women's Club at a reception Friday night.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,428 - S 32,948)
JUL 20 1967

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290)
JUL 19 1967

Bulletin
Bend, Oregon
(Cir. D 7,123)
JUL 19 1967

Upward Bound Student Charged

Statesman News Service

MOUNT ANGEL — Arec L. Jones 21, assigned to the Upward Bound program at Mount Angel College was charged in Marion County District Court at Salem Wednesday with receiving and concealing stolen property. The case was continued.

Mount Angel police said the arrest was made after about $320 worth of tools, trailer equipment, books and athletic supplies was found in a dormitory room Jones is from Ohio and came here from the Job Corps at Tongue Point, Ore.

OSEA Wins At University

The Oregon State Employes Association has won a bargaining right for some 400 employees at the University of Oregon and all state employes at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

In an election the OSEA received 26 votes from custodians of the University of Oregon, compared with 14 for the Building Service Employes International Union and 2 for no union.

The OSEA also became bargaining agent for 11 state employes in an uncontested election Tuesday at the Job Corps Center.

Argus
Hillsboro, Oregon
(Cir. W 7,519)
JUL 20 1967

Gazette-Times
Corvallis, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,910)
JUL 19 1967

OSEA To Bargain For UO Employes

SALEM (AP) — The Oregon State Employes Association has won bargaining rights for some state employes at the University of Oregon and all state employes at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

In an election, the OSEA received 26 votes from custodians at the University of Oregon, compared with 14 for the Building Service Employes International Union and 2 for no union.

The OSEA also became bargaining agent for 111 state employes in an uncontested election Tuesday at the Job Corps Center.

Late Oswego, Oregon
(Cir. W 4,904)
JUL 13 1967

State Employes Vote For Union

Judge Glen Hieber To Attend Meeting

Circuit Court Judge for Washington County, Glen Hieber, member of governor's committee on Status of Women, will attend meeting of committee this weekend at Tongue Point Job Corps center.

Friday evening committee members will be honored by Astoria Business and Professional Women's club at a reception held at the Center Library.

Over 1000 productive workers found jobs in Oregon as a result of vocational rehabilitation programs last year.

Haugen's new position will demand considerable time in Salem. He plans to commute and to continue his home here for his wife, June, and daughters, Kathleen, 12; Karen, 11, and Nancy, 9.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
JUL 10 1967

Argus-Observer
Ontario, Oregon
(Cir. W 3,603)
JUL 17 1967

Clatskanie Chief
Clatskanie, Oregon
(Cir. W, 1,655)
JUL 20 1967

Dwight Haugen Heads Department

Dwight T. Haugen, Lake Oswego, was sworn in Tuesday in Salem ceremonies as director of the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation for Oregon.

He is the first appointee to head the newly formed department which was created by the last Legislature. The department of Vocational Rehabilitation is an independent agency directly responsible to the governor. The department has 30 million dollars in federal funds for the department.

Haugen is a graduate of Washington State University with a master's degree in business administration from Harvard University. He is a graduate of Master degree in Business Administration from Harvard University. He is a graduate of Master degree in Business Administration from Harvard University. He is a graduate of Master degree in Business

July 1, 1967 July 1, 1967

CENTERS MAKE NEWS

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR—U.S. Senator Wayne Morse (far right) recently visited Corpswomen at Tongue Point (Oregon). His pretty guides are (from left) Corpswomen Fayola Ptert, Santina Ladrido and Jo Ann Fraser. Also pictured are Charles Wood (background), President of the Chamber of Commerce of Astoria, Oregon; Mrs. Katherine Beckham, a county supervisor; and Howard Gentry, a staff member.

Job Corps Center Training Wins Job For Judy Lamb

Attractive, hazel-eyed, auburn-haired, 18-year old Judy Ann Lamb wasn't able to attend the graduation program at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women But it didn't upset her very much, even though the graduation ceremony was to be the first one for the girls at the Astoria Job Corps Center, and she was listed among the graduates.

The mayor was to speak, and the platform was to be filled with officials of the center and community leaders Judy Lamb, from Grand Prairie, Tex., had a more important engagement She was to begin work that same day as a clerk at the Portland office of Montgomery Ward.

But Judy was officially graduated and her name was read during the ceremony.

Her record at Tongue Point was impressive. She arrived from Grand Prairie on March 28. Her ambition was to complete a general education development program and to get some business training so she could get the kind of job which she felt would be right for her. Her experiences before Job Corps had been limited mostly to part-time work, and avenues of promotion seemed cut off because she had only an 11th grade education.

On July 14 Judy came to Portland where she took the Oregon Civil Service Examination for clerk-secretary. Her scores on three examinations were almost perfect. She is the first Tongue Point student to take and pass the exam. Her typing speed was rated at 63 words per minute.

Judy was born in Mamars, Iowa, but lived for six years in Portland with her parents Mr and Mrs William Lamb She attended Franklin High School for one year. In 1962 the family moved to Texas. Judy continued high school in Texas, but dropped out after completing the eleventh grade and early this year decided to join Job Corps.

At Tongue Point, Judy successfully completed the high school equivalency program and received a G.E.D. Certificate. She enrolled in the business-clerical vocational training program.

Coming up for Judy Ann Lamb she thinks will be marriage, although no steady boyfriend is in sight at the moment; then there's a possibility of evening classes at Portland Community College and, someday, work as a private secretary.

CHURCH SPONSORS CHOIR

Seaside Community Methodist church will feature the Tongue Point girls' choir at the morning service Sunday, August 13, at 11 a.m. group of 2

Education Board Rates Schools; Astoria Included

ASTORIA (AP)— More than 150 school districts in Oregon do not meet state standards, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Dr. Leon P. Minear said Tuesday.

Members of the State Board of Education were told that 152 school districts were listed as "not fully standard." Minear said [illegible] districts fell short of state standards in at least one area. The state has 346 districts.

Dr. Minear delivered the information in a report on school budget estimates for next year and the outlook up to 1973 of districts' financial needs.

The board heard a request from Gov. Tom McCall to be prepared to cut about $50,000 from a budget after the special legislative session in October.

Minear indicated he would be made [illegible]

All state agencies have been notified that they may have to cut back their budgets due to possibility that state revenue for the coming two years may be $50 to $60 less than predicted by the legislature during regular session.

[illegible] said standard [illegible] the most difficult in [illegible] program and [illegible] buildings and [illegible]

[illegible] said the district in the state [illegible] Portland has [illegible] budget according to [illegible] Floyd S. Nash Dr. [illegible] Grant [illegible] Astoria.

Dr. Minear told the board that [illegible] were [illegible] were [illegible] were occupied by [illegible] and [illegible] were reported [illegible]

[illegible] enrollment [illegible] of the state [illegible] education must be "toward being more resourceful in the use of our available assets."

Schools [illegible] are available for [illegible] faced with constantly expanding needs for programs and than promised by the 1967 legislature [illegible] tax programs.

According to Swanson there should be an increasing emphasis toward being more selective, indicated only $3 million would, in the use of our available [illegible] assets."

The board voted to seek the sale of $3.6 million in state [illegible] bonds to help finance community college construction after [illegible] the state general fund [illegible] $10 million for this purpose.

Robert Hatton, director of community college activities for the State Department of Education, indicated only $3 million would be available for community college construction from the state general fund [illegible]

The reason, according to Hatton, was the "tight" financial picture in the state with anticipated revenues less than estimated when state budgets were approved.

He said priority probably would be given to Lane Community College, in Eugene, Mt. Hood Community College in Gresham and Portland Community College.

Lane has been allocated $4 million for construction for the 1967-69 biennium. Mt. Hood $2.2 million and Portland $1.5 million

Hatton said allocations promised to six other community colleges for construction during the biennium might be deferred [illegible]

The other schools are Southwestern Oregon Community College, Coos Bay, $500,000; Treasure Valley Community College, Ontario, $500,000; Umpqua Community College, Roseburg, $[illegible],000; Clatsop [illegible] College, Astoria, $300,000; Salem Technical - Vocational Community College, $300,000, and Blue Mountain Community College, Pendleton, $250,000

Astoria school district, named among less than standard districts in the state by Leon Minear, state superintendent of public instruction, is rated as conditionally standard, Superintendent Roy Seeborg said Wednesday.

"The district will remain conditionally standard as long as we use Central school," Seeborg said. "We meet other requirements pretty fully."

Seeborg said Central school has an inadequate site by state standards and the building is also deficient.

Class sizes in the elementary schools have been too large in the past two years, Seeborg also noted, but construction of the new junior high school will correct this problem.

Seeborg said the state education department is aware of the problem and "so long as the district attempts to do something, they don't pressure us."

Minear's report was made to the state board of education, meeting at Astoria high school Tuesday.

The subject of Tongue Point Job Corpswomen attending Clatsop Community college and other matters were posed to college officials Tuesday afternoon by the state board of education and department of education personnel.

Education members were winding up a two-day meeting agenda in Clatsop county at the college. They were guided on a tour of the newly-remodelled and constructed facilities by Phil Bainer, dean of instruction, acting as president in the absence of Dr. Stewart McClellon.

Richard Gerttula, college board member, noted that in the construction project there were a scant three change orders involving some 14 items, both plus and minus. The plus

(Continued on Page 8)

4-H Fair Continues in Full Swing with County-wide Show

FOUR-H FAIR PROGRAM
Tuesday, August 15

8 p.m.—Dance, sponsored by 4-H Empire Builders club.

Wednesday, August 16

8 a.m. — Bread Baking Contest, all day; Intermediate Luncheon Contest, all day.

8:30 a.m. — Swine Showmanship; Home Economics Demonstrations, all day.

9 a.m.—Poultry Judging Contest.

10 a.m.—Junior Foods Judging Contest; Swine Judging; Poultry Judging.

11 a.m.—Poultry Showmanship

12:30 p.m. — Sheep and Goat Judging.

1 p.m.—Dairy Showmanship; Rabbit Judging Contest; Senior Foods Judging Contest.

2 p.m.—Judging Rabbits.

3 p.m.—Rabbit Showmanship.

7:30 p.m.—Kiwanis Pet Parade.

The annual 4-H Club fair was [illegible] will swing Tuesday, with all exhibits in place, judging well advanced, and competition in progress.

Substantial numbers of citizens were visiting the fair on Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning.

In addition to livestock, garden, home economics and other exhibits by 475 club members, totalling more than 1,000 exhibits, there are some excellent displays by granges, garden clubs, Tongue Point girls and various commercial [illegible]

Tonight, [illegible] will be seen intermediate Linda Norton [illegible] Kathleen Knapp, [illegible] the junior [illegible] potted plants [illegible] Flower arrangements [illegible] 4-H club [illegible] Kwan junior Gary Fausett, intermediate [illegible] is president The United [illegible] who was also listed as [illegible] Petra, a vocal [illegible] grand champion, and Susan [illegible] Kong soloist.

Tomorrow night's main event will be the annual Kiwanis pet parade Pet parade entries [illegible] by David Crawford, chairman [illegible] of the pet and youngsters. [illegible] the pet parade to assemble [illegible] pavilion on the day [illegible] Tuesday.

The parade will start at 7:30 Dr. Crawford said. All entrants will receive prizes. All youngsters are invited to take part. [illegible] 2-H club to elect [illegible]

Many competitive events [illegible] Monday afternoon were flower [illegible] and flower judging contests.

Champions named in flower judging included Nancy Ogg, junior division; Karen Magnuson [illegible] intermediate Linda Norton second; Kathleen Knapp, [illegible] the junior [illegible] potted plants [illegible] Flower arrangements champion [illegible] 4-H club [illegible] Kwan junior Gary Fausett, intermediate [illegible] is president The United [illegible] who was also listed as [illegible] Petra, a vocal [illegible] grand champion, and Susan [illegible] Kong soloist.

The fair will continue through Friday evening with the public invited to all events or to [illegible] on the exhibits [illegible] the pet parade to assemble [illegible] pavilion on the day [illegible] Tuesday.

Job Corps Timber Fete At Estacada

ESTACADA — A Lumberjack Timber Carnival similar to the Albany Timber Carnival, will be sponsored by the Timber Lake Job Corps Conservation Center starting Thursday.

Job Corps centers from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and California will participate in the carnival. Events planned are ax chopping, hand bucking, power saw bucking, match splitting, ax throwing, log burling and canoe jousting.

A special feature will be selection of a carnival queen. There will be entrants for the title from the ranger districts making up the Mt. Hood National Forest and Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women.

All events are free to the public.

The Timber Lake Job Corps Center is east of Estacada.

Telephone Firm to Seek Trainees For Employment

Four officials of the Pacific Northwest Bell Telephone company will be at Tongue Point Job Corps center Monday to discuss employment possibilities with corpswomen receiving business-clerical training and to confer with center officials regarding on-the-job training possibilities, according to Howard Gentry, associate director of vocational-education [illegible]

Expected [illegible] for the session [illegible] Seaver, [illegible] Marsh, Miss Kleist, employment [illegible] personnel [illegible] Corporation [illegible] Grant. [illegible] Several [illegible] serving [illegible] Astoria [illegible] Vicinity.

Tongue Point Hires Four Personnel

[illegible] Point Job Corps center officials have announced hiring four additional personnel.

Frances [illegible] joined the staff [illegible] counselor. Nettie [illegible] secretary. [illegible] and [illegible] group [illegible] Miss [illegible] resident [illegible] center.

Ken [illegible] appointed [illegible] counselor [illegible] Miss [illegible] a graduate [illegible] assume that [illegible] September.

New Trainees Arrive At Astoria Job Corps

[illegible] bring the [illegible] 651. Several [illegible] out of the [illegible] program [illegible] and others have been sent home for various [illegible]

Tongue Point Pageant to Name Queen to Ride in Regatta Parade

Not to be outdone by events like the Miss Oregon and Miss America pageants, corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps center will name a Miss Tongue Point at a "Miss Tongue Point Pageant" this Friday night in the center theater building, officers of the student government announced.

The public is invited to attend, the [illegible] said. No admission will be charged. The program will be patterned after the Miss America competition, and [illegible] will compete for title [illegible] a panel of judges at 7:30 p.m. [illegible]

Sharing the [illegible] will be [illegible] Court Miss [illegible] Court from [illegible] Court from Warrenton Navy [illegible] Miss Rodeo queen and Miss [illegible] Scramble and court from [illegible]

Fifteen corpswomen chosen in preliminary sessions will compete in the Friday night program. They include Clemencia Pacheco, Catherine Smith, Francisco Gonzales, Patricia [illegible] Ethel Jones, Billie Wood, Betsy Torres, Barbara Cobbs, Katie Thomas, Sandra Jones, LaVerne K[illegible] Smith, Mary Frank, Deloris Hopkins and Rosi[illegible]

The pageant [illegible] a part of the [illegible] program according to [illegible] Anderson [illegible] Miss [illegible] court [illegible] appear in the [illegible] Parade. A [illegible] the [illegible] Miss [illegible] and [illegible] court [illegible] Warrenton [illegible] Miss [illegible] queen [illegible] Miss [illegible] Scramble [illegible]

Youths Told To Bridge Nation's Cultural Gap

Welfare Revision Needed

Youth Inherit Problems

AUG 27 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Dr. Vanloan To Head Roseb[illegible] SRCE Office

One of the state's leading women educators, Dr. Lillian Van Loan of Eugene and formerly of Coos County, has been named head of the Southern Regional Continuing Education Office in Roseburg, it was announced here by Dr. James W. Sherburne, Vice Chancellor for Continuing Education.

Dr. Van Loan replaces Dr. Ernest J. DeRocher, who recently was appointed director of the Northwest Trail Action Center for Community Action Programs in Portland, a new Division of Continuing Education program funded by a federal grant.

The Regional Office in Roseburg was opened a year ago to offer increased education opportunities to Coos, Curry, Douglas, Jackson, Josephine, Klamath, Lake and Lane.

With the Division of Continuing Education for the past two years, and coordinator of women's programs, Dr. Van Loan directed the very successful "Campus Days for Women" and "Career Day for Women" programs last year. The Campus Day programs attracted more than 3,000 women for a day's visit to 15 of the state's public [illegible] and community colleges.

Dr. Van Loan said preliminary plans for the 1967 Campus Days, to begin Sept. 21 at Pacific University, were nearing completion and the program would continue under area DCE direction.

A native of Portland, Dr. Van Loan earned degrees at Oregon College of Education and Oregon State University. Her major field is psychology. She taught in Salem, Medford and Eugene public schools and was director of the Eugene Vocational School 1938-1943.

She taught at Southwestern Oregon Community College in North Bend from 1961-1965. Her husband, Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan, a professor of education at University of Oregon, was president of the community college and later dean [illegible]

Southern and Southwestern Oregon in addition to those offered by cooperative extension, the community colleges and the public school adult education programs.

Dr. Van Loan will serve as a professional representative of academic programs and consulting services of the state's seven campus colleges for eight counties;

Astoria, Oregon
Columbia Press

AUG 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Miss Tongue Point Named at Pageant

Becky Torres, 18, was named Miss Tongue Point at ceremonies Friday evening at the Pageant at the TP Theater.

Miss Torres competed with 15 girls to win her crown, and will represent Tongue Point in the Regatta parade Saturday when she will also be celebrating her 19th birthday.

Runners-up for the title were Laverne Kalakuni, Pat Sidney, Ethel Jones and Katherine Smith. Katie Thompson was named Miss Congeniality.

A reception was held Friday afternoon at the library with Corpswomen serving refreshments and members of the St. Mary's Catholic church pouring.

Job Corps Center Training Wins Wards Job For Judy Lamb

Attractive, hazel eyed auburn haired, 18-year old Judy Ann Lamb wasn't able to attend the graduation program at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women. But it didn't upset her very much, even though the graduation ceremony was to be the first one for the girls at the Astoria Job Corps Center, and she was listed among the graduates.

The mayor was to speak, and the platform was to be filled with officials of the center and community leaders. Judy Lamb, from Grand Prairie, Tex., had a more important engagement. She was to begin work that same day as a clerk at the Portland office of Montgomery Ward.

But Judy was officially graduated and her name was read during the ceremony.

Her record at Tongue Point was impressive. She arrived from Grand Prairie on March 28. Her ambition was to complete a general education development program and to get some business training so she could get the kind of job which she felt would be right for her. Her experiences before Job Corps had been limited mostly to part-time work, and avenues of promotion seemed cut off because she had only an 11th grade education.

On July 14 Judy came to Portland where she took the Oregon Civil Service Examination for clerk-secretary. Her scores on three examinations were almost perfect. She is the first Tongue Point student to take and pass the exam. Her typing speed was rated at 63 words per minute.

Judy was born in Mamaro, Iowa, but lived for six years in Portland with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lamb. She attended Franklin High School for one year. In 1962 the family moved to Texas. Judy continued high school in Texas, but dropped out after completing the eleventh grade and early this year decided to join Job Corps.

At Tongue Point, Judy successfully completed the high school equivalency program and received a G.E.D. Certificate. She enrolled in the business-clerical vocational training program.

Coming up for Judy Ann Lamb, she thinks, will be marriage, although no steady boyfriend is in sight at the moment, then there is a possibility of evening classes at Portland Community College and, someday, work as a private secretary.

Tongue Point Job Corps Center

DCE offers credit and non-credit courses, lecture series for the general public, [illegible] for professional groups or laymen. When a sufficient number of persons in any area indicates interest in a class or program, DCE officials locate and contract with the appropriate university or college faculty member and make all other necessary arrangements.

The Roseburg Center offices are located in the Douglas County Courthouse.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)

AUG 28 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

QUOTES LETTER

To the Editor: My husband is an instructor at the Tongue Point Job Corps for Women. A good friend of his, TFC Pat J. Parks, a 1966 graduate of Knappa high school, is in the 1st Marine Division, 11th Marines, currently serving in Vietnam. One of my husband's students, a discouraged young woman who could have a distorted view on the greatness of the United States, wrote this letter to a serviceman she doesn't know.

"Hi! Mr. Ball told me about you and so I decided that I would write and introduce myself. My name is Sandi LeBarron. I'm 17 years old, five feet five and have long brown hair.

"I have just completed my nurse's aide course and I'm now studying for my G.E.D with Mr. Ball as my instructor.

"I bet you do a lot of meditating and thinking what life is all about when you're out in the jungle getting shot at and seeing your buddies and friends killed or maimed all around you. I can imagine how hard it is for you to get used to death all around you, now knowing if the next casuilty will be you or not.

"Pat, never give up faith in your country, because if you and all the men like you do, America will be lost. Well, that's about all I have to say, except God bless you and it was a privilege to write to you.

"Your new friend

SANDI LeBARRON

"P.S. Be sure to keep your head down when the bullets start coming. I'd like to hear from you if possible."

The publishing of this girl's thoughts may give the people in this community a better understanding of the Tongue Point Job Corps.

MRS. DONALD BALL
Route 4, Box 213

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 304,694)

AUG 22 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Girl Wins Honor

ASTORIA (Special) — Rebecca Torres, 18, Tucson, Ariz., has been chosen Miss Tongue Point at a pageant held at the Women's Job Corps Center.

Miss Torres will represent the center in Astoria Regatta festivities Thursday night through Sunday.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
(Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,34[illegible])

AUG 22 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps 'Miss'

ASTORIA (AP) — Rebecca Torres, 18, Tucson, Ariz., has been named Miss Tongue Point Job Corps.

Miss Torres is studying business and clerical work at the Job Corps Center near here.

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Job Corps Training Quota Is Increased

FORTUNA — Mrs. A. V. [illegible]keeper, [illegible]clan, [illegible]ses Hayda, Area Chairman for the aides, dental [illegible]sistant aides, Wilcox [illegible]n Community aides, recreati[illegible]ssistant aides and Service [illegible] recently [illegible] other occupations in need and [illegible] to be services.

In addition to receiving basic [illegible] training, [illegible] medical [illegible] per month spend [illegible] and $50 for [illegible] the Western Region [illegible] and throughout the United States it has been [illegible] this to two years in her [illegible] training. Guidance and counseling services are available at all centers.

Job Corps centers, located throughout the United States, offer an enrollee intensive and specialized vocational training for jobs in the labor market for which there is a demand. On the West Coast, two new centers were recently opened as nurse's aide at Tongue Point, Ore., and Nimrod Lake, [illegible]. Mrs. Hayda [illegible] and has also flown home for a visit with her [illegible] after [illegible] noted.

One local girl [illegible] Ware [illegible] training at [illegible] October, and [illegible] she recently finished a course [illegible] as a psychiatric aide [illegible] and training as a [illegible] or a [illegible] ment of [illegible] Eureka.

Own Program

Each center, such [illegible] two new ones on the [illegible] Coast, has developed its own [illegible] vocational program. Some of the courses offered are business and clerical; switchboard operator, typist, secretary, office machine operator, book [illegible]

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon

AUG 27 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Girl Wins Fete Crown

ASTORIA (Special) — Taune Ryge, 17, of Astoria was chosen queen of the Astoria Regatta Thursday night at opening ceremonies of the annual festivities.

A [illegible] of judges selected [illegible] from among [illegible] was crowned by [illegible] Monte) Montgomery, speaker of the House, and a Regatta Admiral, [illegible] guests.

[illegible] relinquished her [illegible] title the 1966 queen.

Mrs. Rygg, who came from Alaska two years ago, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wil[illegible]

Corps Center.

She is a 1967 graduate of Astoria High School, and plans to [illegible] her education at Clatsop Community College and the University of Oregon.

The regatta will continue through Sunday.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

2nd Graduation Slated Tuesday At Tongue Point

A graduating class of 20 corps[illegible]tronic assembly and business [illegible]nates from the city of Astoria women will receive completion and clerical occupations. Those [illegible]and Eugene Koch will be a plat[illegible] certificates at Tongue Point Job [illegible]who have completed courses [illegible]orm guest as a representative [illegible] of the center's community rela[illegible] girls who have completed pro[illegible] assembly [illegible] the colors by the Tongue Point [illegible]grams but are [illegible] [illegible] Patrol squadron and [illegible] more study will be given [illegible]uation ceremony, at the pledge to the flag will be led [illegible]tificates but will not be gradua[illegible] [illegible] in the center theater by Pat Sidney, director general [illegible]ed. [illegible]g Dr. Dorothy Burns, [illegible] the center student govern[illegible]

Girl, who will be leaving the center director, will preside at the center student govern[illegible] center include 12 finishing trade and [illegible]ker will be Mrs. Robert [illegible] ment [illegible] ing as nurses aides, six in food [illegible]Service and Von Dusen will coo[illegible]. A graduation banquet will pre[illegible] ces, and one each in elec[illegible] very congratulations to the grad[illegible]cede the event.

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

21 Girls Arrive

Gazette Times
Corvallis, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Ex-Corvallis Educator Heads Continuing E[illegible]

One of the state's leading women educators, Dr. Lillian Van Loan of Eugene and formerly of Coos County, has been named head of the Southern Regional Continuing Education Office in Roseburg, it was announced here by Dr. James W. Sherburne, Vice Chancellor for Continuing Education.

Dr. Van Loan replaces Dr. Ernest J. DeRocher, who recently was appointed director of the Northwest Trail Action Center for Community Action Programs in Portland, a new Division of Continuing Education program funded by a federal grant.

The Regional Office in Roseburg was opened a year ago to offer increased education opportunities to Coos, Curry, Douglas, Jackson, Josephine, Klamath, Lake and Lane.

With the Division of Continuing Education for the past two years, and coordinator of women's programs, Dr. Van Loan directed the very successful "Campus Days for Women" and "Career Day for Women" programs last year. The Campus Day programs attracted more than 3,000 women for a day's visit to 15 of the state's public [illegible] and community colleges.

Dr. Van Loan said preliminary plans for the 1967 Campus Days, to begin Sept. 21 at Pacific University, were nearing completion and the program would continue under area DCE direction.

A native of Portland, Dr. Van Loan earned degrees at Oregon College of Education and Oregon State University. Her major field is psychology. She taught in Salem, Medford and Eugene public schools and was director of the Eugene Vocational School 1938-1943.

She taught at Southwestern Oregon Community College in North Bend from 1961-1965. Her husband, Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan, a professor of education at University of Oregon, was president of the community college and later dean [illegible]

Southern and Southwestern Oregon in addition to those offered by cooperative extension, the community colleges and the public school adult education programs.

Dr. Van Loan will serve as a professional representative of academic programs and consulting services of the state's seven campus colleges for eight counties;

Miss Tongue Point Named in Ceremony At Astoria Job Corps

47th Regatta Reported 'Fine Show'

Continued from Page One

Regatta Rated "Fine Show"

"It was a fine show," seemed to be the concensus locally about the 47th annual Astoria Regatta, which ended Sunday afternoon.

"Every event was well attended and apparently successful," said Regatta general chairman Jay Puffinburger. "We haven't yet had time to add up the accounts, but it appears every event made money or at least broke even. I'm sure that we will come out successful from the financial standpoint."

The highlight of the final weekend was the Saturday afternoon parade, witnessed by a throng estimated at 4,000 to 5,000 people, including many out-of-towners who evidently came to Astoria for the week end's activities.

Many Portlanders apparently made the trip down river for the open house at Wauna during the morning and the Regatta parade in the afternoon.

There were approximately 80 units in the line of march and it took approximately an hour for the parade to pass. Dignitaries and parade judges watched from a reviewing stand at 14th and Marine Drive.

Fine weather favored the parade, and all other Regatta events. The sun shone almost all the time during the festival.

Carnival Popular

The carnival at the corner of 20th and Marine Drive was highly popular during the entire Regatta period. It closed up its tents and pulled out Sunday night.

Friday night's program included two dances, one for teenagers at the Four-H fair grounds, the other a street dance for adults at 12th and Duane. Both were well attended, as was a dance and Pirates Den feature Saturday night at the yacht club.

Major events Saturday, in addition to the land parade, were a salmon barbecue conducted by the Lions club at the Four-H fair grounds in the afternoon, with Donald Claypool as chairman, and dedication of the rebuilt west end boat basin.

Lions members served dinner featuring 500 pounds of barbecued almon, cooked over barbecue pits at the fair grounds. The dinner brought out a crowd of more than 500 guests.

Many Boats Compete

The Victorian Arts festival, with Adelaine Sather as chairman, and the Callaby Lake hydroplane races, with Jack Robinson as chairman, were main events Sunday.

A crowd estimated at 2,000 attended the afternoon's boat racing program, in which some 40 to 50 northwest inboard hydroplanes competed. There were 10 races, most of them close. Racers commented on the favorable water conditions. Results of the races were not made available to the press.

Deirell Payne and Jim Fletcher, co-chairmen of the land parade Saturday, announced special awards went to Billy Goods, Tongue Point Job C... majorette; Diane Weber, 8-year-old majorette; Scandinavian Folk Dancers; York children and Ron Larson's Viking ship replica.

Division award winners included:

—Commercial floats Seaside 1st, Bumble Bee 2nd, PP&L company 3rd.

—Non-commercial floats: Fern Rainbow chapter 1st, Job's Daughters 2nd, Salem Cherrians 3rd.

—Non-musical marching units Ballard girls' drill team 1st, St. Johns drill team 2nd, Tongue Point drill team 3rd.

Mounted units Clatsop Sheriff's Posse 1st, Clatsop Mounties 2nd, Four-H Rough Riders 3rd.

—Marching bands—724th Air Force band, McChord field 1st, Astoria high band 2nd.

Musical marching units Portland Scottish Bagpipers 1st, Sunsetters Drum Corps 2nd.

Friday, in the warm evening sunlight, up Commercial street the Regatta Children's parade came wheeling and squealing and wiggling, between Banks of beaming parents, townspeople and out-of-town visitors, including foreign crews of merchant ships in port, wildly applauding "the festival."

Costumes Varied

Costumes of miniature marchers varied from elaborate getups, be-spangled and gaily colored, to the make-shift variety, displaying originality of execution, as small batman, fur trapper and Uncle Sams, clowns, ballerinas and future beauty queens trudged, pedalled and skipped along the line of march.

Led by a color guard from the Sea Scouts, the Astoria high school band in cut-off jeans and straw beach hats played for Regatta Queen Taune Rygg and her court and the Junior Regatta court, followed by the various divisions of the parade.

Winners in these divisions were Julie Hill, first; Susan and Dave Crawford and Del Ensign, second, and Sally third, in girls' bicycles; Kert Alderman, first; Ralph Knutinen, second, and Kenny Knutinen, third, in boys' bikes; Denese Ziak, Deann Ziak and Lesa Aho, first, Julie Hellberg, second; Andrew Marincovich and Robert Clement, third, and the Thygesen and Beals children, fourth, in costumes: Landa Asbaugh, first, and Kristne Elle, second, baby buggies; Monica Mesirich, first; Carol Gauthier, second, and Julie Mc Call, third, boys' and girl's tricycles; David, Richard and Diane Moberg, first and grand champions; Joel and Dara Watkinson, second, and Richard and Sandra Duncan, third, in waggons and floats, and Lynn and Beth Parker, winners in miscellaneous.

There was no break-down or halt in the parade although [illegible] and Dave Crawford and Del Ensign in charge of the pa[illegible] and their assistants lent an o[illegible] sional "push" to small trey clists along the way and it was [illegible] a matter of minutes [illegible] the line of march [illegible] Street Dance Popular [illegible] Victorians like [illegible] schools [illegible] and Gardner [illegible] popularity of the [illegible] and beer garden Friday night.

Continued on Page 8

Job Corps Girl To Address Urban League

Grand Parade Boasts Variety

This year's Regatta giant land parade will be just the beginning of a busy day of activities, to be culminated by a salmon barbecue and Pirates' Den.

Saturday, August 26, is the day to grab the kiddies and line the streets to watch dignitaries, beautiful floats, the Regatta court and entries from far and near walk the line of march.

Jaycees Jim Fletcher and Deirell Paine have been making plans and checking off entries forming for the march at 12:30 p.m. The parade will start moving at 1:30 in front of American Can company, and follow West Marine drive and Commercial streets to the 4H fair grounds, where barbecued salmon will be waiting.

Peter J. Cosovich, former mayor of Astoria, has been named this year's grand parade marshal. Cosovich was instrumental in reviving Regatta celebrations following a lapse during World War I.

Fletcher and Paine said units will be coming from Clatskanie, Longview, Portland, Eugene, Seaside, Molalla, Tacoma, Coos Bay . . . just to name a few.

Bands, fire departments, horses, royalty, drill teams, color guards, scouting units, floats, dignitaries, and the famous Astoria Clowns will all add to the variety that is the spice of any good parade. And the Regatta is always said to be one of the best.

The committee has released a partial list of entries . . . the remainder will be a surprise to viewers . . . but one worth waiting for!

Listed are the following:

From the Long Beach Jaycees and Lovell Auto company, the first Junior Miss from the southwestern Washington area to participate in the Washington Junior Miss pageant, Miss Andrea Wirkkala. A marching unit of Tongue Point Job Corps women, a voluntary organization of the music department at Tongue Point. They have performed at Seaside in the background overlooking a garden with Miss Salem Cherrian Elaine Volk and her court, Joyce Fuhr, Terry Hagen, Lee Snow and Patty Chapman. Two flying animals hold the front position of the float.

A special float from the Seaside hotel A . . . the US National bank float with the Astoria Regatta court . . . a novelty group, the Coos Bay Pirates, an active booster organization under the leadership of Clair Jones, "Chief Skull" . . . a perennial favorite John Vermuel as Uncle Sam . . . a float from Bumble Bee Seafoods.

The Mollalla high school summer band under the direction of W. L. Humiston . . . the Clatsop County Sheriff Posse, headed by Jack Cline . . . the Warrenton Miss Independence Day court, Queen Cindy Perry and princesses Sherry Brim and Penny Larsh with chaperone Glen Hamilton

The St. Johns girls drill team from Portland, celebrating 10 years of marching this year. The girls are between the ages of 10 and 14. They are completely self-supporting, and have recently taken many first place awards . . . Mike DeCicco and Sons Tires will enter 'Michael the Bear," a novelty automatic polar bear, that has made children as well as adults happy . . . the Clatskanie fired epartment novelty group and its float, "Good Old Summertime."

A float from Pern Assembly Order of Rainbow Girls, Astoria . . . Miss Phil Sheridan and her court from Sheridan riding in an anique car . . . a military color guard from the US Coast Guard air station in Astoria.

Grand Marshal

Peter G. Cosovich, native Astorian and former mayor of the city for eight years, is this year's grand marshal for the Regatta grand land parade. Cosovich was one of the original sponsors to revive the Regatta celebrations following a lapse in World War I days. Active in civic affairs, Cosovich was instrumental in organization the Junior Chamber of Commerce, started the United Fund here, helped organize one of the first Boy Scout troops. He is past president of the Astoria chamber. He is presently a representative of a br[illegible]erage investment firm here. He and his wife Carla are parents of three sons, have two grandchildren.

★ ★ ★

the Miss Oregon pageant. The girls are from many states and will be wearing uniforms they have made themselves.

[illegible] group from Eugeland, under the direction of R. A. Young, who has also built special bicycle equipment. The Salem Cherrians will enter a float, a castle

DEIRELL PAINE
Parade

JIM FLET[illegible]
Parade

Victorian Arts Festival to End Busy Week with Color and Fanfare

Winding up the varied, fun-filled days of the Regatta, will be the Victorian Arts Festival Sunday afternoon, on the lawn outside and inside the stately rooms of the Flavel mansion housing the Clatsop County Historical museum.

Beneath the aged trees on the spreading lawns of the fine estate will be hung, clothesline-style, bright - hued paintings from Pacific Art guild members and other local artists, with a poets' corner featuring a contest and the works of amateur writers, where they may gather and talk with patrons of that art, with Miss Jan Shaffer, herself a poet, in charge

There will be other hobby displays, including collages, ceramics, dolls, hand-made rugs, needle arts wood carvings and other nara-craft Among these will be a candle and flower display by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Opdycke, fine hamer to master of ceremonies and Betty Pauline[illegible] as the program which begins at 1:30 p.m. and runs at [illegible]

Throughout the afternoon, a continuous program of entertainment will lend music, color and [illegible] changing scene on the lawn. "The Soul Sisters", a group of [illegible] singers from the women's Job Corps center Tongue Point dir[illegible] by Mrs. Wilma Duke, and dancers under the direction of Mr. Lee [illegible] Obie, will g[illegible] through their merry routines the [illegible] from the Long Beach peninsula [illegible] Mrs. Sutton. Beyond will present several [illegible] bers there will be dancers from the Jeanne Marie's studio [illegible] taught costumes performing on the grass. The Choral singers of Flavel P.T.A. directed by Roland Harris, Clatsop County square dancers in startling scarlet, the Little Singers of McMinnville directed by Virginia Eckert making the trip for the occasion, and Otto Woogle folk singer [illegible] Astoria College to stream and sing his [illegible] ballads. Dudley Gulf will [illegible] speak on the history of candles that goes back before the birth of Christianity.

Now [illegible] there [illegible] Lining the curb along a block-long estate will [illegible] cars parked, with their owners [illegible]

Former Job Corps Man Hired by Astoria School

Miss Tongue Point

Miss Tongue Point was chosen Friday in a "Miss Oregon" type pageant at the Job Corps Center near Astoria. Miss Torres is from Tucson.

Girls Arrive at Center

ASTORIA (UPI) — Twenty-one Job Corps girls arrived at Tongue Point Job Corps Center Thursday. The newcomers bring enrollment to 651, one more than the assigned quota.

Girls arrive

ASTORIA (UPI)—Twenty-one Job Corps girls arrived at Tongue Point Job Corps Center Thursday. The newcomers bring enrollment to 651, one more than the assigned quota.

Girls Arrive

ASTORIA (UPI)—Twenty-one Job Corps girls arrived at Tongue Point Job Corps Center Thursday. The newcomers bring enrollment to 651, one more than the assigned quota.

Ships Due for Cargo; Some Go To Vietnam War

Corps Instructor to Transfer to Eugene Accepting Art Post

Portland Youth Tour Center—A group of teenagers from the Albina Service Center, Portland, toured Tongue Point Job Corps center Wednesday morning. The group was interested in the Job Corps training, and some may be possible recruits.

Job Corp, Civic Officials Meet—Local chiefs of police, district attorneys, mayors and civic officials will meet with Tongue Point Job Corps center officials Thursday at 11 a.m., to be followed by lunch at the center. Meetings are held to discuss common problems. Five Corpswomen of the Month will be

Show At Jobs Corps—A 12-person entertainment unit, traveling through the Pacific northwest to present programs at urban and conservation Job Corps centers in the area, was at Tongue Point center Monday afternoon to present a show for the corpswomen there. The group, which includes Dick Blondi disc jockey from radio station KRLA, Los Angeles, consists of dancers, musicians and singers, and its members are [illegible] their time [illegible] conservation [illegible] then to Timber [illegible] center at Estacada and Vannoy center at Wolf Creek.

CORPS GIRLS ARRIVE—ASTORIA (UPI)—Twenty one Job Corps girls arrived at Tongue Point Job Corps Center late last week. The newcomers bring enrollment to 651, one more than the assigned quota.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Regatta Queen Taune Rygg

Watsonville, Calif.
Register-Pajaronian
Cir. D 18,131
AUG 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

At new post

Dorothy M. Burns, formerly on the staff of Cabrillo college and now director of Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women at Astoria, Ore., and Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, president of the University of Oregon, greet a guest at a recent reception at the center. Dr. Burns left her post at Cabrillo in June to take the Job Corps position. The Tongue Point center, which offers job skill training in five fields to 650 girls 16 to 21, is operated by the University of Oregon under a contract with the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

Independent
Woodburn, Oregon
AUG 1 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

Actress [illegible] starred at Astoria [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] and Miss Anderson pinpoints, from [illegible] 21st Street West [illegible] has been [illegible] royal court of Miss Tongue Point. [illegible] Miss [illegible] Rodriguez has been receiving [illegible] Center for Women, operated by the University of Oregon under contract with the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

Queen Coronation Begins Regatta With Pomp and Glitter

The 1967 Astoria Regatta was officially proclaimed on by a wave of the jewelled scepter of Queen Taune Rygg, who herself was proclaimed Queen of the Regatta and crowned by F. P. (Monty) Montgomery, speaker of the Oregon House of Representatives and Admiral of the Regatta Thursday evening at the Astoria high school auditorium.

Queen Taune, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Rygg, Tongue Point, the judges' choice of five pretty princesses, is a 1967 graduate of Astoria high school. There was a merry twinkle in her brown eyes, and even a rakish angle to the glittering diadem on her reddish brown tresses placed there by her handsome admiral, as Jay Puffinburger, president of the 1967 Regatta association draped the royal purple robes on her shoulders, announcing to a suspenseful audience just who their queen would be.

Her scepter, symbol of authority ("Use it wisely and well") was presented the happy queen by Mayor Harry Steinbock, and charming and gracious Regatta Queen of 1966, Margie Huhta, stepped up to give her an armful of roses.

And then, from her elevated throne, Queen Taune stepped down, to walk regally to the microphone and declare to all her subjects that the Astoria Regatta is open, instructing "all citizens of Regatta land to attend all the functions thereof and to thus make it the best one ever."

Queen Taune was born in Minneapolis, Minn., September 12, 1949, going north to Alaska with her parents, residing in Fairbanks for five years, moving to Vancouver, Wash., then back to Alaska, Anchorage this time, and from there to Astoria. She became popular with her classmates in the year and a half she has attended AHS because of her "instant" friendliness and sincerity, that shone through all the pomp and glitter of her royal trappings. She plans to attend Clatsop Community college this fall, with plans to go on to University of Oregon for a degree in liberal arts. She and her brother Steve have a black Labrador dog, she raises puppies, and likes to bake, swim and water ski. All in all, Queen Taune is a lovable, pretty, warmly-personable girl, stepping into her new role as Regatta Queen with poise and assurance.

The program following the grand march of Regatta officials and the Anchor drill team, wound up on stage with Queen Margie Huhta of last year's Regatta on the throne surrounded by this year's court and their escorts. These were Princesses Valeria Tarabochia, Star of the Sea, with David Graves; Carol McCallister, Astoria high school, with Pat Hanlon; Judy Paulson, AHS, with Pat O'Bryant; Christine Forney, Knappa, with Heikki Yippelto, and Taune Rygg, AHS, with Bob Jacobs. Each of the attractive young women introduced his princess, explaining to the audience and judges just why she was his choice for queen. In turn each princess spoke on some phase of the Regatta or Astoria, after which there was an intermission for the judges' balloting.

The program of entertainment following intermission was a showstealer. Miss Alide Sullivan, with a guitar almost as big as she is, sang several heart-warming folk songs. "The Soul Sisters," a group of young Job Corpswomen from Tongue Point, under the direction of Wilma Duke, were called back several times, also, for encores to their vocal numbers, which featured several fine voices in solo.

Regatta Admiral Montgomery's address reminded Astorians of the unusual and outstandings advantages of this area, which citizens of Regatta land are aware of but are apt to overlook. He is a polished, but natural, speaker, from experience in his political and business life, and makes a "romantic and gallant" admiral (concensus of the female half of the audience).

Last year's queen, Margie Huhta from Knappa, showed originality in her "farewell" address, referring to her big scrapbook of memories when she was queen, and then presented each of this year's court with a scrapbook to hold their memories of this year.

The junior court performed its duties like little veterans. David Reed held out the queen's crown on a satin pillow smartly to Admiral Montgomery; Marcia Chan stood patiently with the royal scepter ready for the mayor's presentation; Clive Campbell and Blaine Ivanoff maneuvered the queen's long velvet with expert deftness; and the little flower girls Diane Loeffel and Tina Hess strewed [illegible]den rose petals, mulching the empurpled rocks of the court, along the line of march.

Lan Hall led the singing of the national anthem, following the posting of the flag by a Sea Scout color guard. Mrs. Betty Phillips played appropriate and stirring background organ music, and Robert Hanson, as MC, kept the show going smoothly throughout the eventful evening, introducing Mrs. Montgomery, wife of the admiral, and Mr. and Mrs. Willis Rygg, parents of the queen.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Job Corps Marchers in Parade

Here is the Tongue Point Job Corps Center marching unit, in the Regatta parade.

Daily Journal of Commerce
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D. 4,064)
Allen's P.C.B.

Work Scheduled At Tongue Point

(D J of C, Sept. 11, 1967)

Astoria Bids have been invited by the Oregon State Board of Higher Education for making various improvements at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center [illegible] operated by the University of Oregon.

Basic bid [illegible] construction of a bowling alley and skating rink in hangar No. 1, revising the fire alarm system in buildings "C," "H" and No. 3 and for modernization of street lighting. Basic bid "B" involves the furnishing and installing of bowling lanes equipment and supplies.

The bowling alley and skating rink will be installed in one corner of the hangar, but will have separate walls and will be divided by a partition. New wood floors are to be built over the existing concrete floor. The area, to contain a 60 x 95-foot skating rink and 26 x 120-foot bowling alley, will be enclosed with wood studs and gypsum board walls and partitions. There will be a suspended acoustical board ceiling. A masonite tempered board floor will be installed in the skating rink.

The bowling alley will contain four lanes. Basic bid "B" is for furnishing automatic pin setters and other equipment.

Basic bid "A" will include revising the fire alarm system. This, and lighting of the bowling alley and skating rink, will require extensive electrical work, with fluorescent fixtures in the new area. The street lighting system, to be connected with the present underground distribution system, will require new wood poles and luminaires.

Bids will be received at the office of the administrator in the administration building at Tongue Point until 2 p.m. [illegible] 3. Plans and specifications can be obtained from Architects Bukehart & Kinne, 2311 N.W. Irving St., Portland, upon deposit of $25.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
SEP 1 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est

Timber Carnival for Job Corps Is Slated

Statesman News Service

ESTACADA — Timber Lake Job Corps Conservation Center east of this Clackamas County city will host a four-day Timber Carnival, beginning Thursday.

Open to the public, the contests and games are similar to ones held at the Albany Timber Carnival, including ax chopping, hand bucking, power saw bucking, match splitting, ax throwing, log burling and canoe jousting.

To Choose Queen

A special event will be selection of a Timber Carnival Queen, chosen from entrants of the different ranger districts in the Mt. Hood National Forest and Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women.

An awards assembly with the presentation of awards and the coronation of Timber Queen will be held 5 p.m. Saturday.

Job Corps centers from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and California, with about 126 Corpsmen, will participate in the Timber Carnival events.

Day of Practice

Thursday's events will be limited to practice sessions, with actual competition scheduled Friday and Saturday.

Officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity said the events are free to the public. Fishing along with other recreational activities are available in the camp area, located five miles east of here on Oregon Highway 215.

The Center consists of a 15-acre lake and adjacent timber area. It houses about 250 Job Corpsmen and has supporting facilities, including a new gymnasium.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Miss Tongue Point, Princesses

Miss Tongue Point, Rebecca Torres, rode in the Regatta parade flanked by her princesses, Laverne Kaelkini, left, and Catherine Smith. Parade attracted 5,000 spectators.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D [illegible])

Job Corps in Parade

The Tongue Point Job Corps drum majorettes will be just one of the many entries in the Regatta grand land parade, scheduled to start the trek down Marine drive and Commercial at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. These young women comprise one of several entries from the center. The Astoria Jaycees have been handling parade plans for the Regatta association. Chosen this year as grand marshal was Peter G. Cosovich, former Astoria mayor and native of this city.

'Soul Sisters' to Sing Harmonies at Arts Festival

The "Soul Sisters" of Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center, a girls chorus directed by Mrs. Wilma Duke will sing in the garden of the Clatsop County Historical society museum today for the Victorian Arts Festival. Continuous entertainment throughout the afternoon will be going on both outside and inside the museum, with colorful exhibits of art of all kinds, and tea served in the dining room.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
AUG 30 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

New US Program to Offer Trainees Work Experience

Tongue Point Job Corps staff members were told of a new federal program that will provide work experience for trainees this week by Miss Kathleen Kelly, field representative for the four-month-old YMCA Job Corps Extension Residence Program (JCYW). The program was launched in May.

Miss Kelly is western area representative, and travels over 11 states. Home office is in San Francisco, where she is a staff member of the national board of the YWCA.

The $3¾ million program, federally funded with a contract with the Y, offers 2-8 months of unpaid work experience to trainees before they are on their own. It is not, Miss Kelly said, on-the-job training, but rather a "real live working situation."

The girls will be interviewed by Miss Kelly on her next visit. They have option of staying on in the Job Corps for six months.

After that, they would be moved to one of 26 cities in the United States, where all living expenses will be paid. In a 2-8 month period, each girl will work an eight-hour day in the vocation of her choice. Most probably would be one she has been trained for in the Job Corps.

There will be no exchange of money. Neither the girls nor the employer will be paid. While under the JCYW program, the girls will remain members of whatever Job Corps centers they had left.

Closest city with the program to Tongue Point is Seattle. There is none in Oregon.

Idea of the program is to more gradually ease the trainees out into the working by sharpening their skills, getting them into the eight hour a day work habit, and overcoming difficulties such as transportation problems that may arise when they have their first salaried job.

In the 26 cities, 16-40 girls will reside in Y residence centers, where environment will be similar to the Job Corps center, but on a smaller scale. They will participate in social and cultural life of the residences.

They will be provided health services, home and family life education, which will help them in selecting apartments and purchasing food and household items, and will have available counsellors and guidance.

Another facet of the residence is termed World of Work, and would involve labor education courses.

JCYW will follow through the job experienced and on until each girl has final placement in a salaried job and permanent home, both of which will be her own choosing.

Girls must be 18 years old to enter the program. Miss Kelly said the $3¾ million program will involve 1500 girls annually.

Miss Kelly arrived Monday and will confer with officials until Thursday.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Center to Have Skating Rink, Bowling Alley

Mrs. Bruce Pond assists Rossanno Delapaz, King City, Calif., in trying on dress in an Astoria store while Paulette Lyons, Oakland, Calif., looks on. The two, new corpswomen at Tongue Point, were assisted in their first downtown shopping trip by volunteer women of the community. (Photo by Job Corps)

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

July Corpswomen Honored

Corpswomen of the month for July, announced at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, are (from left, clockwise) Concepcion Mesquita and Angelita Moreno, both of Phoenix, Ariz., Fanny Kalama, Hana Maui, Hawaii, and Karen Nordine Neumann, West Linn, Ore. Carol Lee Franklin, Taylor, Tex., is not pictured. Selection of the Corpswomen on the basis of excellence in scholastic and vocational education achievement, and all-around progress in center life.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 384,694)
SEP 9 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Solon Visits Tongue Point

ASTORIA (Special) — U.S. Rep. Edith Green, Portland Democrat, paid a surprise visit to Tongue Point Job Corps Center Friday. She met with Dr. Dorothy Lunt, center director, and toured the facilities with corpswomen guides.

She said hearings would begin next week in Congress on amendments to the war on poverty bill, which includes the Job Corps program.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 384,694)
SEP 14 1967

Pleasant Hill Mother Awarded Fellowship

Mrs. Ronald Z. Zook, Pleasant Hill, has been awarded a fellowship from the Oregon State Division of the American Association of University Women for the 1968-69 academic year.

The major portion of the fellowship was contributed by the AAUW state division and local branches with the rest coming from the College Faculty Program fund to which the Collins and Carpenter Foundations were contributors.

Another Oregon woman, Mrs. Marion Berger Prince, Eugene, is currently studying at Oregon State University for her master's degree in home economics under the College Faculty Program.

Mrs. Zook, mother of five children from 13 to 6 years old, will teach during the current year and then return to the University of Oregon in the fall, 1968, where she will teach in the field of home economics education at the college level.

Mrs. Zook has been active in [illegible] has been [illegible] Point Job Corps Center's [illegible] working [illegible] the center's program.

A graduate [illegible] college, Mrs. Zook [illegible] has been awarded a [illegible] fellowship. She has been awarded a [illegible] three years since [illegible] 1954.

Volunteers Aid Corpswomen in Clothing Stores

Newly arrived girls at Tongue Point Job Corps center are being assisted in making their first purchases of clothing in downtown Astoria stores by a group of volunteer Astoria women who guide the corpswomen through the various shops and advise them on their purchases, center officials announced.

During their first two weeks of orientation at the center the new trainees receive a $35 clothing credit which may be expended as they desire in any Astoria women's clothing store. After 60 days another $35 is available, and again after 90 days and six months at the center.

The newcomers' unfamiliarity with Astoria stores and with the clothing needs imposed by the climate here brought about the request from center officials for help in advising the girls.

Local women who have participated in the program are Mrs. Ann Van Dusen, Connie Van [illegible], Mrs. Christine Peterson, Mrs. Gary Berg, Mrs. Edwin Luoma, Mrs. Sheila Frederickson, Mrs. James Henderson, Mrs. Helen Hedeen, Mrs. Florence Jumisko, Mrs. Elna Pesonen, Mrs. Donna White and Mrs. Bruce Pond.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 384,694)
AUG [illegible] 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corpsmen Cause Disorder

ASTORIA (Special) — City police broke up a disturbance early Sunday morning at John Jacob Astor Hotel and arrested one Job Corpsman for drunkeness. Police Officer Dale Carlisle had his short term.

More than 200 job corpsmen from a half dozen Northwest centers were housed overnight at the hotel after attending installation of new officers at the Women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point.

Nothing said some hotel property was damaged during the disturbance. They said some of the visiting corpsmen had brought quantities of whisky Saturday night.

No charge was filed in connection with the trouble and management of the hotel was not available for comment Monday.

Daily Tidings
Ashland, Oregon
(Cir. [illegible])

ASTORIA (UPI) — Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., paid a surprise visit to the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center here Friday.

WICS To Focus On Tongue Point Program

Women in Community Service (WICS) has planned a 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. meeting Thursday, Sept. 14, for persons interested in learning about the Tongue Point Job Corps Training [illegible] meeting will be held [illegible] hood House, 3030 SW 2nd Ave.

Leonard Calvert, coordinator, and Sydney Thompson, assistant director of community relations, Tongue Point, will show slides and explain the training of fered young women 16 to 20 years old.

Women interested in joining WICS volunteer staff may call during office hours, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
AUG 31 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Fellowship Awarded By AAUW

Mrs. Ronald Z. Zook of Pleasant Hill has been awarded a fellowship from the Oregon State Division of the American Association of University Women for the 1968-69 academic year.

The mother of five children, ages 13 to 6 years, Mrs. Zook has taught typing and bookkeeping at Clatsop Community College. She also has substituted in public schools and at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center during the past 11 years.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
SEP 1 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Volunteers Move Books to New Library

Books Moved; Library to Stay Closed for Week

More than 100 volunteers helped move 50,000 books from the old library to the new one in a Jaycee-sponsored book lift Saturday and Sunday. Above, volunteers load crated books at the old library on pallets for transport by fork lift. Below, Tongue Point Job Corps girls helped unload and stack books at the new Astor library.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
SEP - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

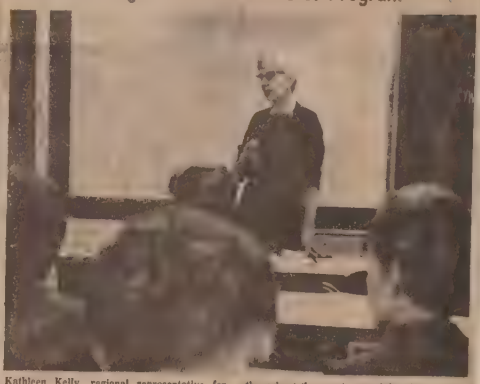
Juvenile Faces Assault Charge

Astoria city police detained a juvenile from Tongue Point Job Corps center for assault with a dangerous weapon Thursday evening at 9:16. The juvenile was detained at 15th and Marine drive.

Arrested at the same time was trainee Alicia Gortarez, 20, on a charge of minor in possession of alcoholic beverages. Bail was set at $50.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Pt. Staff Hears of Program



Kathleen Kelly, regional representative for JC YW extension residence programs, a national program to provide residence and counseling for Job Corps Women in 26 YWCA's throughout the country, explains the new program while on a three-day visit to Tongue Point. (Job Corps Photo)

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
SEP 13 1967

Tongue Point Talk Planned

Women in Community Service will meet from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Thursday at Neighborhood House, 3030 SW 2nd Ave. to hear about the Tongue Point Job Corp Training Center.

Leonard Calvert, University coordinator for the center and Sidney Thompson, assistant director of Community Relations, Tongue Point, will show slides and explain the training offered to women 16 to 21 years of age.

Any woman interested in joining the the WICS volunteer staff may obtain further information by calling the service center at Neighborhood House.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
SEP 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Edith Green Pays Job Corps Visit

US Rep. Edith Green, Portland Democrat, was a visitor Friday at Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Rep. Green, who has been a severe critic of Job Corps operations, particularly from the standpoint of high cost, dropped in without advance notice. She conferred with Dr. Dorothy Burns, center director, and was expected to tour the installation.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Boxes Donated for Book Move

Astoria Jaycees have completed plans to transfer books from the old to the new library September 9-10. The books will be packed in boxes donated by Bumble Bee and loaded on pallets, also donated by Bumble Bee. Fork lifts provided by ONC and Nehalem Valley freight lines will be used to carry the books. Here are Librarian Bruce Berney, left, Jay Sharpe, Jay Pullinburger and Dennis Thiel of the Jaycees looking over some of the cartons and pallets. Jaycee-ettes and Tongue Point girls will pack books into boxes at the old library and unpack them at the new one. Members of the Kiwanis club will help the Jaycees on the project.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Astoria School Enrollment Off

ASTORIA — City school enrollment was tallied at 2,385, down slightly from the 2,425 recorded on opening day last year.

Supt. Roy Seeborg said enrollment drop was due to department of Tongue Point Job Corps staff members following conversion from a men's to a women's center and resulting staff reduction.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Dr. Van Loan Heads Continuing Education Office

CORVALLIS — One of the state's leading women educators, Dr. Lillian Van Loan, has been named head of the Southern Regional Continuing Education Office in Roseburg, it was announced by Dr. James W Sherburne, vice chancellor for continuing education.

Dr. Van Loan replaces Dr. Ernest J. DeRocher, who recently was appointed director of the Northwest Training Center for Community Action Programs in Portland, a new division of continuing education program funded by a federal grant.

The regional office in Roseburg was opened a year ago to offer increased education opportunities to southern and southwestern Oregon in addition to those offered by cooperative extension, the community colleges and the public school adult education programs.

Dr. Van Loan will serve as a professional representative of academic programs and consulting services of the state's seven campus colleges for eight counties: Coos, Curry, Douglas, Jackson, Josephine, Klamath, Lake and Lane.

With the division of continuing education for the past two years as a coordinator of women's programs, Dr. Van Loan directed the very successful "Campus Days for Women" and "Career Day for Women" programs last year.

Dr. Van Loan said preliminary plans for the 1967 campus days, to begin Sept. 21 at Pacific university, were nearing completion and the program would continue under area DCE direction.

A native of Portland, Dr. Van Loan earned degrees at Oregon College of Education and Oregon State university. Her major field is psychology. She taught in Salem, Medford and Eugene public schools and was director of the Eugene vocational school, 1938-43.

She taught at Southwestern Oregon Community college in North Bend from 1961-65. Her husband Dr. Wendell L. Van Loan a professor of education at University of Oregon, was president of the community college and later headed Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

UGN Better Than Federal Program, Kiwanis Told

Three major reasons why it is better to have United Good Neighbors handling social welfare matters than the government were given Kiwanians on Tuesday by Sid Thompson, formerly of Coos Bay who recently joined the community relations staff of Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

The reasons, Thompson said, are (1) it would cost us more to have government take over the UGN's functions; (2) we would be denied the privilege of determining our local needs and meeting them; (3) we would be denied the opportunity of financing and conducting preventive activities.

Regarding point 1, Thompson said UGN-sponsored institutions provide care at much less cost per person than government institutions. It costs only 20 cents for UGN institutions to deliver $1 worth of care, and it costs $3 for the government to deliver $1 worth of care, he declared.

To illustrate his third point, Thompson cited the Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts as examples of work that prevents delinquencies. A new UGN beneficiary, the nationwide Big Brothers movement, is a fine example of the value of preventive activity that would be lost if government supplemented the UGN, Thompson said.

This agency works with boys aged 8 to 18 who have no father or other male older person in the family. Eight per cent of the boys it gets have had at least one experience with juvenile court. Only 7 per cent of these boys become repeaters in court. Otherwise, 43 per cent could be expected to repeat in juvenile court and 33 per cent would go on to adult crime.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
SEP 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpsmen Battle Forest Blazes

Corpsmen from four Oregon and three Washington Job Corps centers were pressed into service to fight forest fires during the recent flareup of blazes in Pacific northwest forest, according to word received at the Tongue Point center this week from Job Corps Director William P. Kelly.

There were 20 trainees from the Tillamook center and 128 from centers at Estacada, Grants Pass and Burns actively working in every phase of fire fighting from manning pumps to constructing fire boundaries. The announcement said, Washington centers are Randle, Toppenish and Larson Air Force Base sent 147 corpsmen to fire lines in Washington state. In all, Kelly said, 675 Job Corps members were engaged in fighting fires throughout the northwest.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
SEP 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Morse Praises Corps Staffer

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

OEO Officials Visit

OEO Officials Visit — Four officials of the Office of Economic Opportunity regional office in San Francisco will visit Tongue Point Job Corps Center Tuesday, center officials said. They are [illegible] P. Horan, regional director of OEO; Paul Weeks, Royce Hulsey and George Miller.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
SEP 5 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
SEP 8 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est.

685 Enrolled At Job Center

ASTORIA — Enrollment at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center climbed to 685 with arrival of 70 new trainees.

New corpswomen are from the South and Southwest. They will attend orientation sessions before selecting training courses.

Corpswomen Make Guitars

Corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps Center are making electric guitars in the center's arts and crafts classes as did the corpsmen. Based on a kit which provides necessary patented aluminum tone bar and frets, strings and electric pickup, the instruments are hand-finished and emerge in a variety of forms. Shown is Mary Helen Gonzales, 18, of El Mirage, Ariz., completing the lacing of a leather-covered model. Miss Gonzales arrived at the center in March, has completed a course in electronics assembly and one-the-job training at Tektronix in Portland, and is returning to Phoenix to look for a job. The guitar kit is marketed by Glenn Burke of Astoria, who holds the patent on its tuning fork construction. Miss Gonzales can't play the guitar, will present it to her brother.

Mrs. Zook Is Awarded An AAUW Fellowship

Mrs. Ronald Z. Zook, a former resident of the Jefferson area who was active in Salem branch, American Association of University Women, League of Women Voters and Girl Scout Council, has been awarded a fellowship by the Oregon State division of AAUW for the 1967-[illegible] academic year.

Currently a resident of Pleasant Hill, near Eugene, she will teach full time this year and enter the University [illegible] on next fall, she plans. Major portion of her fellowship comes from state division and local branches, with the rest drawn from the College Faculty Program fund designed to prepare women to enter the college teaching field. Mrs. Zook plans to teach in the field of business administration at the college level.

Mother of five children, ranging from 6 to 13 years of age, she has taught typing and bookkeeping at Clatsop Community College and has substituted in public schools and at Tongue Point Job Corps Center. Mr. Zook has recently left his position as education supervisor at the Tongue Point Center to work toward his doctor's degree at University of Oregon.

CAP Commander Visits

Brig. Gen. W. W. Wilcox, US Air Force, national commander of the Civil Air Patrol (second from right) confers with Center Director Dorothy M. Burns and Tongue Point CAP Squadron Commander Don Rodewald at the Astoria Job Corps center. At left is Ray Miller, Astoria., a lieutenant in the CAP.

Former Astorian Is Winner of AAUW Fellowship

Mrs. Ronald Z. Zook former Astorian, of Pleasant Hill, has been awarded a fellowship from the Oregon State division of the American Association of University Women for the 1968-69 academic year.

The major portion of the fellowship was contributed by the AAUW state division and local branches, with the rest coming from the College Faculty program fund of which the Collins [illegible] and [illegible] Carpenter [illegible] Oregon won an. Mrs. [illegible] Berger Prince, Eugene, is currently studying under the [illegible] program for her master's degree in home economics at OSU in Corvallis.

The goal of Mrs. Zook is to teach in the field of business education at the college level. She will teach full time during the current year before entering the University of Oregon in fall, 1968.

The mother of five children ranging in age from 13 to 6 years, Mrs Zook has taught typing and bookkeeping at Clatsop Community college, as well as has substituted in public schools and at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center during the past 11 years. This fall Mrs. Zook's husband is leaving his position as general education supervisor of the Tongue Point center to work in [illegible] program at the U of O.

Mrs. Zook was graduated cum laude from Hastings college in Nebraska in 1953, with a BA in business administration. Her community interests include the Girl Scout council, League of Women Voters, Women's Day on Campus at Clatsop Community college, and AAUW, of which she served as ways and means chairman of the Salem branch.

Mrs. Zook is the 15th recipient of an Oregon State Division fellowship, which has been awarded every three years since its inception in 1960.

Edith Green Visits at Job Corps

Rep. Edith Green, in center of above photo, spent most of Friday at Tongue Point Job Corps Center. She consulted at length with Dr. Dorothy Burns, new director there, and Dr. Harold McAbee, assistant director, then toured the area all afternoon with an escort of corpswomen, shown, above. Mrs. Green has been a critic of the Job Corps, but declined comment Friday. She said hearings on the War on Poverty bill will start next week. She was here during a short holiday visit to the Oregon coast.

Evans Appoints 2 Men To Top State Positions

SALEM (AP) — A year and will report to work [illegible] promoted later to greater re [illegible] tion, Hayes was a supervisor [illegible] assistant to the gover Oct. 16. The governor said he [illegible] responsibilities, perhaps as [illegible] director.

27-year-old Negro who was an Ol[illegible] all-conference basketball [illegible] player in college were named [illegible] to state jobs Tuesday by Gov. Dan Evans.

The governor announced at his press conference the ap[illegible] pointment of Dr. Richard H. Slavin, 42, to head the new Community Affairs and Planning Agency.

He named Vincent A. Hayes, most recently a supervisor with the Clearfield Job Corps near Ogden, Utah, as assistant director of the state's Multi-Services Center in the Seattle central area.

Quarters Sought

Slavin will receive $22,000 a year and will report to work [illegible] agency, created by the 1967 [illegible] Legislature.

Slavin is an economist by [illegible] profession and a former [illegible] lege instructor, the governor [illegible] said.

Evans said Hayes will begin at $12,500 a year and might be [illegible] permanent director.

Before taking his Utah post [illegible] secretary of the State Board [illegible] Against Discrimination, will [illegible] negro area of Pacific [illegible] He was reared in Seattle and is a graduate of Pacific [illegible] University in [illegible] Grove, where he was an All-Northwest Conference basketball player.

New UO School H[illegible]

By MILES GREEN
Journal Education Editor

EUGENE [illegible] year, the [illegible] the La[illegible] [illegible] pus he [illegible] heading for [illegible] York slum [illegible] Uganda as he [illegible] position in [illegible] on Wall Street [illegible] Philadelphia law firm. [illegible] and Publ[illegible]

Girls at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will be available in a program of fashions for presentation to interested organizations in the area, according to Mrs. Joanne Miksis, instructor in Home and Family Life classes. The young women have made the clothes they will model in their clothing construction classes.

Gladys Roberson (right), Los Angeles, a student in health occupations, assists Ethel Spears, Menlo Park, Calif., a student in electronics assembly, in putting the final details on a dress sewn in home and family life training at Tongue Point. Under the direction of Mrs. Joanne Miksis (seated), home and family life students are preparing a program of fashions for presentation to interested organizations in the area.

Trainee Fashion Shows Available For Organizations

Program chairman of civil and social organizations throughout Clatsop county have been notified that corpswomen training in the home and family life classes at Tongue Point Job Corps Center are now available for fashion show presentations at meetings.

Mrs. Joanne Miksis, instructor in home and family life, has planned a program which can be adapted to a length of 5 to 45 minutes to show civic and social groups the story of this important phase of corpswomen training.

According to Mrs. Miksis all of the corpswomen are required to take courses in the general educational area to complement the vocational subject they receive. A number of girls now in training have made considerable progress in clothing construction. These corpswomen will model the clothes they have made with commendation provided by a Tongue Point staff member.

Organizations interested in making arrangements to have the fashion program offered at one of their meetings are invited to call the community relations office at the Job Corps Center.

Mt. Hood College Library 'Well Traveled'

By SUZANNE RICHARDS
Journal Staff Writer

LIBRARIAN WITHOUT LIBRARY

In one year's time it already has resided in [illegible] permanent [illegible] will have in the first of the college's permanent buildings.

"I'm in hopes we'll be here for two years," sighs the librarian who has overseen all of the moving. "But I don't know," adds Eleanor Prewitt, who has learned to handle the problems as they come.

IN FACT, if Miss Prewitt ever accepts a position with an established library, it's likely she won't know what to do with all of her extra time.

A former elementary school teacher, Miss Prewitt decided several years ago she wanted to become a librarian. Just out of the University of Oregon with a master of library science degree she tackled her first job . . . building a library from scratch for the Tongue Point Job Corps Center. No sooner had she accomplished this than the opportunity came to go to Mt. Hood Community College and start all over again.

She laughs now when she recalls arriving at Tongue Point to find she didn't have a chair or a desk. "Here they did have a chair and desk and a typewriter," she says good-naturedly.

But Eleanor Prewitt admittedly likes challenges, and building two libraries in two years has suited her just fine.

"YOU START with the needs," she explains. They [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

...hlights Growing Interest In Service-Related Studies

...esday.

THE SCHOOL is the first of ... the nation, and is expected to be a model ... organization of young people ... to the last to flip ... ing ... graduates ... reflect ... the university's ... positive ...

... and in the nation in the ... to a number of students ... the VISTA Volun... teers to serve in America ... program ... the nation in the ... number of Peace Corps volunteers.

One of two universities in the ... operating Job Corps centers ...

DURING ... last year VISTA ... the ... was spread ... of ... ed ... in ... were ... Rhode Island ... by ... were concentrated ... in ... the ... ing ... high ... graduates who are considered to have the potential for college.

UO President Arthur Flemming ... the "climate" he would create ... accept ... applications ... parents ... to ask ... are ... ever ... in the ... ... ed ... in the ... students ... learn ... study ... at ... the ... to ... activities.

... HE POINTS ... to attitudes ... and faculty ... toward ... two of the contributing ... of the university ... service.

To many other people, however, the climate at UO is attributable to a large extent ... know that what happens ... university is largely dependent upon the attitude of the ... toward ... and ...

VISTA VOLUNTEERS recruited on University of Oregon campus have included Thomas Flemming, son of UO president, shown here getting acquainted with neighborhood children in Baltimore slum where he lived and worked for year before entering graduate school (Photo courtesy of VISTA) that it could be a step toward revolutionizing teacher training and counseling by helping to gain more knowledge about how to reach the type of students who leave the public school system," said Flemming.

The UO president visualized the new community service school as a means of making the increasing student motivation toward service with the critical shortage of persons in fields such as community action, mental health and social action.

"THE UNIVERSITY has a responsibility to try to build a bridge for those with the desire to become involved in these kinds of programs, but who, by and large, don't know how to go about it," Flemming said.

To acquaint students with the kinds of jobs which are available, and to help the "get their feet wet," all enrollees of the new UO school will be required to have field work before they graduate.

Also included in the school's program will be a graduate work and the development of "short course" programs to provide additional training in communities throughout the state for persons already working in service related fields.

ENROLLMENT in the new UO school is expected to top ...

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1...

Sanitary report planned for club meet in October

The first fall meeting of the Arch Cape Community club was held Saturday evening at the social hall of the Catholic church. Lowell Hawkins, chairman, conducted the business meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Hirsch and Mr. and Mrs. Woodcock were welcomed as new members.

Hawkins reported on the sanitation survey made recently in Tolovana Park. He announced that a similar report on Arch Cape would be given by Les Wierson, engineer, at the October 24 meeting of the club.

Mrs. Dorothy Burns, director at the Tongue Point Job Corps center in Astoria, was introduced by Floyd Scott, program chairman. Mrs. Burns explained the operation of the Corps and told of the work being done. She invited club members to visit the center.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Harry Tuttle and committee.

OEO, Job Corps Officials Visit

In Astoria Wednesday to visit Tongue Point Job Corps center were four O.E.O. and Job Corps officials from the O.E.O. western regional headquarters at San Francisco, accompanied by Marko Haggard, Salem, special assistant to the governor and coordinator of federal Poverty War programs. With Tongue Point Center Director Dorothy Burns are (from left) Laurence P. Horan, director of O.E.O. western region; George Miller, acting chief of recruitment and placement for the western region, and Royce Hulsey, Job Corps regional administrator. Haggard and Paul Weeks, regional public affairs officer, are not pictured.

State PTA Officers to Come to Astoria for School of Information

Sept 27 marks the date of the annual "School of Information" sponsored by the Clatsop County Council PTA. Three officers from the Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers will be in Astoria on Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. 2:30 p.m. to give inspiration and guidance to all PTA officers, chairmen school personnel, or anyone interested in the educat... of children.

The Veteran's Memorial room of the Astor library has been selected as the meeting place with women of Capt Robert Gray PTA in charge of coffee during the registration from 9:30-10:00 a.m. Nursery service will be provided at the First Presbyterian church, 11th and Grand the only charge being a free will offering at the church. Seaside Elementary PTA women are in charge of registration and hospitality, assisted by Warrenton Hammond PTA Lewis and Clark District number 5 PTA president will set up a table displaying PTA publications.

Richard Knotts, county school superintendent; Roy Seeborg, Astoria school superintendent; and Bruce Berney, librarian, are slated to open the program. OCPT officers, Mrs. Jesse Herbert, president; Mrs. L. W. Isom, treasurer; and Mrs. Robert Ewen, publicity director, will act as a team presenting the Who are we? What are we doing", and How do we do it? aspect of PTA work.

Planned for the morning session is a special smoking and health conference aimed as a "Smokeless Generation". Because of the alarming statistics on the increase of smoking among school children of sixth, seventh, and eighth grades, the U.S. Public Health Service is making an effort through the National, State, and local PTA's to educate every 7th and 8th grade child and every parent to the dangers of early smoking. The county council urges all schools in Clatsop County to have representation at this smoking conference, time 10:30 a.m. to noon.

During the noon hour a movie show will be given by Tongue Point Job Corps... in the Home and Family Life classes, commentary by a staff member. Those persons staying for the noon hour are asked to bring a sack lunch; coffee and punch will be provided.

Workshops for all areas of PTA work will be conducted by the OCPT team during the afternoon. All elected officers and chairmen of committees are requested to attend. Newcomers to the county are invited to get acquainted with educational opportunities and needs to promote better communication, better programming for parents and teachers, better service to children and youth.

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Corpswoman Says Farewell

Editor's Note: Following is a graduation message delivered by Doris Arkaki, a Job Corpswoman from Hawaii, at graduation exercises held recently at Tongue Point Center. She has completed a course as nurse's aide.

By DORIS ARAKAKI

The most difficult part of any graduation program is to say farewell. The farewell we say to you tonight is filled with appreciation, gladness, and sorrow. For those with whom we part:

Many of us have come to Tongue Point to pursue the vital education we lacked. To the administration, our advisors, and Corpswomen, since the day we came to you, eager to learn, time in and so many ways and a little unsure and frightened, for five months. You have given us your time, experiences and wisdom.

There were many times when misunderstandings and problems arose and tempers flared. Only with your kind understanding, careful guidance, and optimism were these incidents smoothed out. You were very patient with us and for this we are very grateful.

Tonight as we are assembled here for the last time, we realize that it is up to you as an individual with your courage and determination to weigh the advantages against disadvantages to see that we have been ours and we are a step forward along our pathway of life. To our administration, staff, friends, and fellow corpswomen, on behalf of our graduating class, I'd like to extend my most sincere "Thank you."

We have an obligation to ourselves, our parents, our schools, fellow men and country. We have the obligation to make life better with the education and knowledge we have accumulated.

Our paths may grow widely divergent, and what has been together in fun and sorrow, a united group, may become only a joyful memory. But this will remain with us forever.

Nothing is there to stop you from learnings if you as an individual have set your mind and heart upon the attainment of your goal.

Even while we are overjoyed over our completion of our course, we have a lump in our throat, as we gaze for the last time at our familiar Tongue Point which has been our home for five months.

To the undergraduates and corpswomen, we part with you regretfully. We hope you will miss us sometimes in the dorms and on the campus.

To my fellow graduates, tonight we are proud of ourselves for having successfully completed our course.

Tongue Point has done all it can for you but it is not enough. There is more to be done, here in the real world and it is up to you as an individual with your courage and determination to work and attain to better yourselves.

Astoria, Oregon (Cir. D 6,590)
SEP 25 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

McAbee Says Tongue Point Helps Trainees Help Selves

"We learned during operation of the men's center here not to try to do too much for the trainees, but to help them to help themselves," Dr. Harold McAbee of Tongue Point told chamber of commerce members Friday. The chamber's weekly luncheon was held at the Job Corps Center.

Aim of the center administration is to make the corpswomen into contributing members of the community, good wives and good mothers, as well as giving them skills enabling them to earn a living, Dr. McAbee said. Noting that the staff has its hands full with enrollment at 674, over the 650 allocation, Dr. McAbee appealed for volunteer help from the community.

"There are many forms ... help could take, he said. An example is the need for birthday cakes for parties given to celebrate corpswomen's birthdays.

Fifty-seven have graduated so far from the women's center and all were reported holding jobs, Dr. McAbee reported.

He gave a few statistics. Twenty-six per cent of corpswomen are Caucasian, 47 per cent Negro. They come from 34 states, half of them from west coast states. Half come from rural areas or towns of 5000 or less population. A third are high school graduates. Average schooling of Grade 6. Dropout rate in September was 3-1 per cent, slightly less than it has been before.

There will be another graduation ceremony Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the theater building and visitors are welcome, Dr. McAbee reported.

Chamber members were entertained during luncheon by the Soul Sisters, a choral group of volunteer young women led by Mrs. Wilma Duke. Dr. McAbee said this group is much in demand for appearance before community organizations.

East Oregonian
Pendleton, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,138)
SEP 27 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

ASTORIA (AP) — Trainees at the Ft. Simcoe Job Corps Center near Yakima, Wash., have been barred from the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center east of Astoria, Ore.

Job Corps spokesmen said several men from Ft. Simcoe failed to catch a bus back from Tongue Point and were later involved in a recent disturbance at an Astoria hotel.

One was arrested for illegal possession of alcohol. A policeman's shirt was torn.

Signal
Seaside, Oregon
(Cir. W 2,470)
SEP 28 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est ...

Dr. Lillanna Kopp, director of center life at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, will be keynote speaker for Clatsop College Campus Day for Women October 10. Sister Mary Audrey, associate professor of sociology at Marylhurst college, Portland, Dr. Kopp received special dispensation from her order to put aside her nun's habit and wear civilian clothes for her Tongue Point assignment. In recent years she has lectured extensively and conducted numerous conferences and workshops on guidance and counseling. She is presently involved in interracial relations work at Loyola university, Chicago.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
SEP 26 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Dean to Speak At Graduation At Tongue Point

Mrs. Vera Gault, dean of women at Clatsop Community college, will be speaker for graduation ceremonies scheduled at the theater building at Tongue Point Job Corps Center Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Fifteen corpswomen will graduate, six in electronics assembly, three in food services and six in health aide services. Eight will receive GED certificates, equivalent to high school graduation.

In addition, 36 corpswomen who have completed courses but are not yet leaving the center will receive completion certificates, six in electronics assembly, seven in food services and 23 in health aide services.

Dr. Harold V. McAbee, deputy director of the center, will preside and present the certificates. Congratulating the graduates in behalf of the community will be Mrs. Bruce Pond, a member of the Tongue Point Community Relations council. Musical numbers will be included in the program, to which the public is invited.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Tongue Point Off Limits To Ft. Simcoe Corpsmen

Tongue Point center officials have made that place off limits to any future visits by job corpsmen from the Fort Simcoe center near Yakima as an aftermath of disturbances last week-end at Joan Jacob Astor hotel, center officials said this week.

Job Corpsmen from Fort Simcoe and three other men's centers came by bus to attend an installation of new officers at Tongue Point. Some of the Fort Simcoe men failed to make the bus going back to their center, stayed at the hotel and were involved in disturbances there.

Tongue Point officials said there will be a conference in Portland soon for administrators of all northwest centers and that they will make plans for better coordination of visits by groups from other centers to Tongue Point.

Tongue Point officials were not fully advised regarding last weekend's visit by groups from four centers all at the same time, they said.

Daily Journal of Commerce
Portland, Or...

Bids Announced At Tongue Point

(D J of C — Oct. 5, 1967)

Astoria — Walt Muna, 12701 NoE. 414th St., Vancouver, was apparent low bidder at $54,450 for construction of a bowling area and skating rink in Hangar No. 1, revision of fire alarm system and modernization of street lighting at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center. Only other bidder was Albert Mittet, Astoria, at $55,800.

American Machine & Foundry Co. submitted a low bid of $11,700 to furnish and install bowling lanes and equipment. Brunswick Corp. bid $14,160.

Bids were received by the Oregon State Board of Higher Education.

Plans by Dukehart & Kinne, Portland, architects, call for a 60 x 95-foot skating rink and a 28 x 120-foot, four-lane bowling area. The areas will be enclosed by wood stud and gypsum board partitions and will have suspended acoustical board ceil...

Skilled in the skating rink ...

Corpswomen of Month Honored

Four ... of the Month" for August received congratulations from Lt. ... Ridin, vice president of Astoria chamber of ... at last week's chamber luncheon at Tongue Point. From left are corpswomen Velecia Rivers, Beaumont, Tex.; Mary Ridin, Dunsmuir, Calif.; Yolanda Morales, Lawton, Okla.; and Kathy Mincey, Phoenix, Ariz. Not pictured is Doris Wade, Ocala, Fla., fifth award winner.

Daily Courier
Grants Pass, Oregon
(Cir. D 9,63...)
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Women's Job Corps Center Off-limits

ASTORIA (UPI)—The Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center has been declared off limits to Job Corpsmen from the Fort Simcoe center near Yakima, Wash., according to authorities at the women's center.

The off-limits order followed a recent disturbance in a local hotel.

The men had missed a bus back to the Yakima center after a visit to the women's center and were involved in a disturbance in which one was arrested for illegal possession of alcohol and a city police officer's shirt was torn.

Allen's P.C.B. Est ...

Off-limits

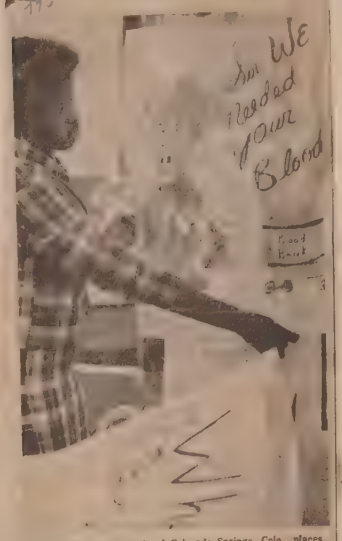
ASTORIA (UPI) — The Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center has been declared off limits to Job Corpsmen from the Fort Simcoe center near Yakima, Wash., according to authorities at the women's center.

The men had missed a bus back to the Yakima center after a visit to the women's center, and were involved in a disturbance in which one was arrested for illegal possession of alcohol and a city police officer's shirt was torn.

'Hamburger for UGN' Is Job Corps Slogan

The hamburgers they'll give up won't really be this large, but this group of Tongue Point Job Corps women is posed to illustrate the slogan "A ~~Hamburger~~ for UGN" which has been adopted for their participation in the Clatsop county UGN campaign under direction of the student government. Each girl will be asked to contribute at least the price of the hamburger to the drive. From left are Norma Bojorquez, Sarajane Bagood, Billie Woods, Mary Frank, Alice Williams, Holly Gomez and Kathleen Mauler. (Photo by Tongue Point Job Corps)

Corps to Aid Bloodmobile



Corpswoman Billie Woods of Colorado Springs, Colo., places poster in Tongue Point Job Corps Center library calling attention to upcoming visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile to Astoria. Corpswomen are being urged to obtain parental consent to give blood if they are under 21, and to participate in a center-wide donor campaign. Under direction of the trainees' Big Sister club, a door-to-door canvass for blood pledges will be conducted among residents of Navy Heights. The bloodmobile is scheduled to visit Astoria September 27.

SEP 8 1967

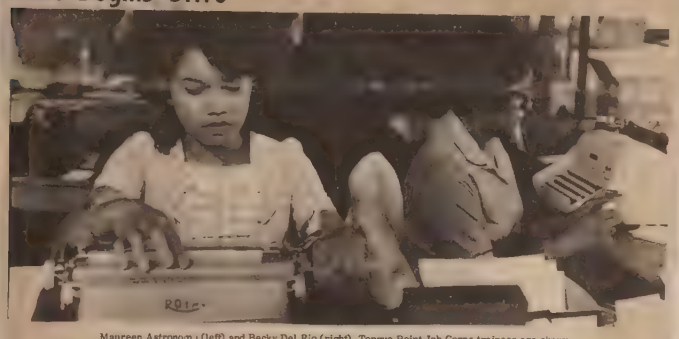
CORPS WORKER — Mary Helen Gonzales, 18, of El Mirage puts the finishing touches on a leather covered guitar made by fellow job corps workers in Astoria, Ore. Corpswomen at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center there are making electric guitars in the center's arts and crafts classes. Based on a kit which provides the necessary patented "tuning fork" aluminum tone bar strongs, frets and electric pickup, the instruments are hand-finished and emerge in a variety of forms. Miss Gonzales arrived at the center in March, has completed a course in electronics assembly and has taken on-the-job training at the Tektronix plant in Portland. She is returning to Phoenix to work.

Astoria, Oregon
Columbia Press
(Cir. D. 1,321)

1957

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

UGN Begins Drive



Maureen Astronom (left) and Becky Del Rio (right), Tongue Point Job Corps trainees are shown working at the downtown headquarters of United Good Neighbors in the Elks Building. The annual UGN fund raising drive began this week, and this year's goal is $71,100. Local Girl and Boy Scouts, Red Cross, Y.M.C.A., and Salvation Army are some of the organizations who benefit from the contributions. Volunteers will solicit employed persons at their place of work.

Daily Astorian
Oregon

Corpswomen Assisting on Campus Day Plans

Corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps center are assisting in arrangements for the October 10 Campus Day for Women at Clatsop college by preparing driftwood decorations in spare-time evening hours. Working with the girls, under direction of Mrs. Adelaine Sather, hospitality chairman for the event, are Mrs. Grace Teeter, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Herrington, John Titus, Cliff Van Miller and Raymond Fugate. Van Miller and Fugate are former corpsmen at the center. Pictured with corpswomen are Mrs. Gerald Spoonberg (left), Tongue Point staff member; Van Miller (standing) and Mrs. Sather (right).

The Tower
Maryhurst Or.

Allen's P.C.B.

Morse Honors Sister

A May 25 TOWER article, as well as stories from the MARYLHURST MIRROR and OREGON JOURNAL made the August 15 Congressional Record. The topic was Sister Mary Audrey Kopp, former chairman of the sociology department at Marylhurst, who was appointed director of center life at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon entered the TOWER article in the records as part of a speech he made August 15 concerning Sister Audrey. It is as follows

"Mr. President, the unrest that we have been witnessing in our urban areas during the past years calls on all citizens for immediate and comprehensive action. Many people in our society today are too willing to condemn the obviously unjust conditions of poverty and hopelessness that exist in parts of our Nation, but are too unwilling to do anything to solve these problems. For this reason it is most encouraging to learn of the dedicated activities of certain courageous individuals who have devoted their lives to the elimination of the conditions which many other comfortably deplore.

"I am proud, Mr. President, to honor just such a courageous person here today. Sister Mary Audrey of Marylhurst College, near Portland Oregon, has devoted her exceptional diversified talents to the betterment of our society. Sister Mary Audrey holds two masters degrees and a doctorate in sociology and anthropology. But even more impressive than her academic achievements have been her willingness and desire to share her acute perception and first-hand experiences in ghetto life to assist those in our society who are most in need of her help.

"Mr. President, it is my great pleasure to inform the Senate that Sister Mary Audrey has just recently accepted the position of director of center life at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Oregon. While at Tongue Point, she will be known as Dr. Liliana Kopp. Every indication we have points toward a continuing success story for the Oregon Job Corps center; and there is no doubt in my mind that Sister Mary Audrey meets the criterion of excellence. It is my belief that in the years ahead we will look back with pride on the accomplishments of Sister Mary Audrey and her colleagues in the training and education of the underprivileged youth of our nation.

"Finally, I note with special interest and gratitude that Sister Mary Audrey is the first cousin of Mr. James Lhoumdike, whom we all know to be our fine assistant Journal clerk of the Senate.

"Mr. President, recently several excellent articles have dealt with the appointment, background, and exceptional qualifications of Sister Mary Audrey. I ask unanimous consent that [illegible] articles be printed in the RECORD."

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B.

Poverty Program

The women's Job Corps center near Astoria is henceforth off-limits to men Job Corpsmen from the center near Yakima. It seems the boys came to Astoria for a dedication the other day and bashed up a hotel.

There should be no need for a permanent ban, unless the boys from Yakima have travel allowances that permit them to hang around Astoria, which is 300 miles away.

Longview Wash
Daily News

Allen's P.C.B.

Trainees Barred

ASTORIA (AP) — Trainees at the Ft. Simcoe Job Corps Center near Yakima, Wash., have been barred from the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center east of Astoria, Ore.

Mail Tribune
Medford, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B.

Tongue Point Job Center Off Limits

-The Tongue

[illegible] has been declared off limits to Job Corpsmen from the Fort Simcoe center near Yakima, Wash. according to authorities at the women's center.

The off limits order followed a recent disturbance in a local hotel.

The men had passed a bus [illegible] to the Yakima center [illegible] and were involved in a disturbance in which one man was charged for illegal possession of alcohol and a city police officer's shirt was torn.

Training Used By Corpswoman At Crash Scene

... was riding ... Car ... the vehicle car- ... Mr. and Mrs. Richard, ... was involved in an acci- ... who dent with another auto. She ad- ... ministered first aid to the Rich- ... lards and to another victim before ambulance arrived. Miss Platt's car ... sude hospital by ambulance. The Richards were taken to the hospital for further treatment in ... The young corpswoman has been ... tional Youth Corps program ...

Police Break Up Hotel Disturbance Involving Youths

Astoria city police officer ... Carsner rescued a ... clerk who ... at the John ... Astor hotel early Sunday ... he said.

... went to the hotel after ... information that a ... group of young people ... walking up and down side- ... the motel and that ... tea had purchased large ... of liquor earlier in the ... from the state liquor ... a block away.

... buses from north west ... Corps centers were parked ... the hotel. More than 200 ... Corps youths were regis- ... four floors of the hotel ...

Carlsen told the Daily Astorian his shirt was torn while he was breaking up the disturbance at 2:30 a.m.

Police reports said some of the youths were seen making several trips to the liquor store. One youth purchased 10 to 12 bottles of liquor, the reports said.

According to a Tongue Point Job Corps spokesman, the youths were in Astoria to attend initiation of student body officers at the Astoria women training center.

Another Job Corps spokesman said information was very sketchy here because the corpsmen who came had their own staff personnel and reports were not made by the local Job Corps staff on the incident.

It said it was understood ... were damaged in the ... and that one corps- ... from Fort Lawton, Wash., ... was jailed for drunken- ...

The official Astoria police report was not available to the police Monday morning.

Visitors from Fort Simcoe, Wash., Fort Vannoy in ... counties, Wolf Creek in Douglas county Manager in ... county, and Tillamook Job corps centers were in Astoria and staying at the hotel.

Pool Attendance Shows Increase

The Astoria ... recreation department's Tapiola pool aquatic program had a larger ... increase ... summer ... 1966. This year's attendance of 22,861 was aided by an extremely fine summer and addition of new programs.

John Cline, pool manager, ... registered a mile in registered for swim classes 12 took the water safety instructors course and 8 took the junior and senior lifesaving method. All swimming instruction was offered ... with the Clatsop County Red Cross. In addition ... were offered to Tongue Point Job Corps students.

All guards were involved in a 16 week training program taught by the Oregon Red Cross Director of Aquatic Activities.

For the first time since the pool was opened the program was available seven days a week. Many person took advantage of the free swim period on Saturday mornings. The Astoria Dolphin swim team the yearly swim meet and the playground's aquatic activities highlighted the season.

Correspondence from the Oregon State Board of Health indicated that at no time was the water in an impure or unsafe condition and that several inspections found Tapiola pool to be maintained in an outstanding manner.

Persons wishing to comment on any phase of this year's aquatic program are asked to call or write the Astoria parks and recreation department office.

Tours Set For Women

CLATSOP COMMUNITY COLLEGE, Astoria—Women of Astoria and surrounding communities will get a new look at Clatsop College Oct. 10 during Campus Day for Women, an annual event designed to acquaint women of the area with educational opportunities available at the college.

... program will ... tours and classroom demonstrations in the college's recently completed campus facilities, followed by luncheon in the new Student Center and afternoon program of demonstrations in the Patriot Hall auditorium.

Events will start at 9:15 a.m. and conclude at 2:30 p.m., to allow for attendance of mothers of school-age children. Nursery care is being arranged for pre-school children.

Speakers at the day's events will include Dr. Dorothy Burns, director of Tongue Point Job Corps Center; Mrs. Jean Henniger, women's editor of The Oregonian; and Dr. Lillanna Kopp, Center Life director at Tongue Point Center.

Fracas Brings Off-Limits Order

ASTORIA (UPI)—The Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center has been declared off limits to Job Corpsmen from the Fort Simcoe center near Yakima, Wash., according to authorities at the women's center.

The off-limits order followed a recent disturbance in a local hotel.

The men had missed a bus back to the Yakima center after a visit to the women's center, and were involved in a disturbance in which one was arrested for illegal possession of alcohol and a city police officer's shirt was torn.

Autumn Tea to Honor New Wives, Women at College

"An Autumn Tea" honoring women and wives new to Clatsop Community college will be held on campus Wednesday from 2-4 p.m. in the spacious student lounge in Patriot hall.

Officers of the organization, Women of Clatsop College, have planned this first social event of the new school year.

James and Virginia Cameron will offer a dramatic reading as part of entertainment. Cameron is executive director of the Lewis and Clark Festival association and instructor of theater arts at the college. Mr. and Mrs. Cameron have appeared in several summer theater plays at Gearhart and Salishan.

Soloist for the afternoon will be Evelyn Miles, 19, from the Loving Soul Sisters, a group directed by Wilma Duke, Tongue Point Job Corps center. This is the same group that captivated the Regatta coronation audience.

Mrs. John Barger will play background piano selections throughout the afternoon.

Job Center Bars Yakima Trainees

ASTORIA (AP)—Trainees at Ft. Simcoe Job Corps Center near Yakima, Wash., have been barred from the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center ... of Astoria.

Job Corps ... several men ... failed to catch a ... Tongue Point and ... volved in a recent ... at an Astoria hotel.

One was arrested for illegal possession of alcohol. A policeman's shirt was torn.

Suspect Hunted By State Police

State police are seeking a man for questioning on a rape charge involving a Tongue Point Job Corps Center trainee. The incident occurred on the Lewis and Clark road at 8 p.m. Thursday.

The man was described as 5 feet 8 inches tall, 190 pounds, dark complexion and eyes with a thin moustache. The word "love" is tattooed on his forearm. A scar runs from the forehead down into the left cheek.

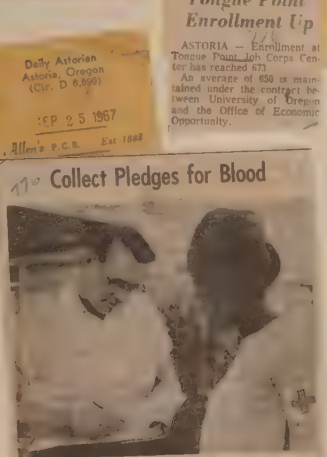
He was seen in about a 1962 Falcon, two-door, medium dark blue.

Tongue Point Enrollment Up

ASTORIA — Enrollment at Tongue Point Job Corps Center has reached 673.

An average of 630 is maintained under the contract between University of Oregon and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Collect Pledges for Blood



In anticipation of the visit of the Bloodmobile to Astoria on Wednesday, Tongue Point Corpswomen solicited blood pledges at Navy Heights. Corpswoman Mary Frank, one of 12 to participate in the student government project, gets a pledge of one pint of blood from A. K. Kiebel, drafting instructor at Tongue Point. Girls collected pledges for 28 pints of blood.

Day on Campus For Women to Display New Look

Women of Astoria and surrounding communities will get a new look at Clatsop College October 10. This is the date set for Campus Day for Women, an annual event designed to acquaint women of the area with educational opportunities available at the college.

This year's program will feature tours and classroom demonstrations in the college's recently completed campus facilities, followed by luncheon in the new student center and afternoon program of demonstrations in the Patriot hall auditorium.

Events will start at 9:15 a.m. and conclude at 2:30 p.m., to allow for attendance of mothers of school-age children. Nursery care is being arranged for pre-school children.

Speakers at the day's events will include Dr. Dorothy Burns, director of Tongue Point Job Corps center; Mrs. Jean Henniger, women's editor of the Oregonian, and Dr. Lillanna Kopp, center life director at Tongue Point center.

Evans Resigns as Pastor Of Clatsop Plains Church

WARRENTON — Congregation ... Clatsop Plains ... Presbyterian church has accepted the resignation of the Rev. John Clinton Evans Jr., who will conduct his last service here Sunday.

The Mr. Rev. Evans will become pastor of Laurelhurst Presbyterian church in northwest Portland, which has a congregation of approximately 650. He also will attend Portland State college for a three-year course in pastoral counseling.

As pastor of the oldest established Presbyterian church west of the Rockies, the Rev. Mr. Evans has helped foster several programs in the church. Among these programs are the youth group's complete financing of nine students for a trip to Garberville, Calif., where under the guidance of Evans they ... vacation church school for a week; a men's breakfast Bible study group and for the last two years at Christmas, a widely acclaimed nativity scene, ... September 15, 1967, saw dedication of the new addition containing a pastor's study as well as Christian education facilities necessary for the growing congregation.

The September 15 service served not only as dedication for the new building but also saw the culmination of a major effort by Evans to bringing together members of the various faiths for the first ecumenical service in this area.

Both Evans and his wife Joyce have been active in community work.

Evans serves as chairman of the United Nations in Clatsop county and for the past two years has organized the UNICEF drive for the benefit of needy children. He has provided the American Field Service foreign student exchange and helps with the Lutheran Good Neighbor ... and is a member of the Seaside branch of AAUW. She is program chairman of Women's Day at Clatsop college.

THE REV. J. C. EVANS JR.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Evans have two sons John Jr., 2, and David, 8 months.

Prior to his appointment as pastor at Clatsop Plains, Evans spent a year in theological work at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. He graduated from San Francisco Theological seminary in 1963 after receiving a bachelors degree from Lewis and Clark college in 1959.

TLCW Installs, Looks Ahead to Full Calendar

... with a luncheon meeting and work project Tuesday in the church parlors.

Following the potluck lunch, officers for the coming year were installed by Trinity's pastor, the Rev. Bruce E. Pond, ... a ... and prayer. Installed were Mrs. William ... Mrs. ... Mrs. ... Mrs.

Portland, Oregon
The Press
City Central North
Cir. W 14005

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

'Equal Opportunity' Talks Due Oct. 11

The Portland League of Women Voters, in conjunction with other Leagues in the metropolitan area, will have its regular October briefing Oct 11 at the Westminster Presbyterian Church NE 18th and Hancock. The program will focus on the various Office of Equal Opportunity programs in the state.

Four Job Corps young people and Mrs Helen Kennedy regional Job Corps coordinator, will tell abut and answer questions concerning the Job Corps programs in Oregon There will be two corpsmen from Estacada Timber Lake Conservation Job Corps and two corpswomen from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center

Additional information will be presented by Mrs Matthew Cohen of the Lake Oswego League of Women Voters Mrs Thomas Gilles will update the Day Care program, and Mrs David B Anderson will present a progress report on the recently opened Occupational Skills Center in Milwaukie

The program will start at 9:45 a.m. followed by lunch The afternoon speaker will be Marko Haggard, OEO coordinator.

Chairmen of the Human Resources study from the metropolitan area Leagues are Mrs. Marvin C. Hines, Portland; Mrs David B. Anderson, Milwaukie-Clackamas County; Mrs. Robert Cohen, Lake Oswego, and Mrs. James Johnston, East Multnomah County.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling the office of the Portland League of Women Voters.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 160,402)

OCT 11 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees Elect New Officers

Alice Eubanks, 19, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., has been elected general director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center student government, succeeding Pat Sidney of Galveston, Tex., whose term of office expired last week the center announced.

Other officers elected by the corpswomen for the next four months period were Irine Cox, Albuquerque NM deputy director Lurinda Hill Indianapolis, Ind. [illegible] and Opal [illegible] Klamath Falls secretary.

Six representatives from each of the center's five residence areas, or dormitories, were also elected.

Journal of Commerce
Seattle, Wash.
(Cir. D. 5,316)

OCT 10 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Job Corps Center Project Figured

ASTORIA — Walt Musa, 12701 N. E 114th St., Vancouver, Wash. was low bidder to the Oregon State Board of Higher Education at $51,950 for improvements at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria, operated by the University of Oregon.

Only other bidder was Albert Mittet, Astoria, at $55,800. Bids were opened last week by the Oregon Board of Higher Education. Bids are being analyzed.

Plans were prepared by Architects Dukehart & Kinne, 2311 N. W. Irving St., Portland. The project involves construction of a bowling alley and skating rink, revising the street lighting, and furnishing and installing bowling lanes equipment and supplies.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 160,402)

OCT 11 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point Bids Opened

ASTORIA — A parent low bid of $51,950 for construction of a bowling alley and skating rink at Tongue Point Job Corps Center was submitted by Walter Musa, Vancouver, Wash.

Work will also include modernization of fire alarm and lighting systems at the center.

A skating rink 60 by 95 feet and a four lane 28 by 120 foot bowling alley will be built in a hangar at Tongue Point.

Only other bidder was Albert Mittet, Astoria, at $55,800. Bids were opened last week by the Oregon Board of Higher Education. Bids are being analyzed.

Judges Plan Crackdown On Minors with Liquor

[illegible] Judge Alfred Zafiratos and District Judge Harol T. Johnson said there seems to be a recent trend toward increase in number of arrests for illegal possession by minors, and particularly arrests of second offenders.

Both warned that jail sentences are likely in future, as well as stiffer fines.

Zafiratos also lashed out at those who supply liquor to minors, particularly to Tongue Point Job Corps girls.

Zafiratos last week sentenced a third- offender minor in possession to 30 days in jail and fined him $65. He also ordered a supplier of liquor to a minor [illegible]

Johnson, like Zafiratos, has noticed a tendency toward increase in cases of youthful drinking.

"It's not [illegible] kids all are developing a taste for beer," he said. "But taking a drink of beer is becoming a sort of status symbol."

Job Corps Center Visited By Four Harbor Women

[illegible] women, Mrs. Marvin Sanders and Mrs. [illegible] Montesano and Mrs. Walter McKann and Mrs. Lurcher Nelson of Aberdeen visited the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria to become acquainted with the center Community Relations Director Lena Woolf arranged the tour for them.

Following lunch in the cafeteria, an interesting three-hour tour of the campus gave insight to the varied activities taking place in the center. This residential training center offers disadvantaged young women aged 16-21 an opportunity to acquire educational, vocational, and social skills necessary to live as productive, self-supporting members of society. The center is operated by the University of Oregon under contract to the Federal Office of Economic Opportunity, with Philco-Ford Corporation as sub-contractors for vocational training.

A general education program is carried on at the center develops basic skills of reading, writing, mathematics, social studies, [illegible] science and health education. These are basic skills needed by young people to function adequately as homemakers, consumers, and as occupational productive citizens. The training received comes in an atmosphere conducive to understanding the world of work, the responsibilities of citizenship, and the problems generic to family life.

The tour permitted the visitors to observe actual classes in session and they noted in particular how well-disciplined the classes were. It was learned that the turn-over in staff is high, but the experience gained by the teachers and instructors proves helpful as they return to their original posts in schools. The experience aids in understanding why youth is at the center, and what steps might be taken to prevent problems before trouble begins. In talking with the instructors the visitors found them enthusiastic, dedicated and proud on their work at the center.

The center conducts five occupational areas of training, health and social service programs, business and clerical occupations, electronics assembly and testing, drafting and food occupations. New enrollees are received about every two weeks. Graduation exercises are held as appropriate throughout the year as students complete training. Length of training varies from a few months to two years, depending on complexity of the courses selected by the trainee and her progress. When training is completed, job interviews are arranged.

Since the center's educational task extends throughout the waking hours [illegible] not only to the class [illegible] to cooperate to [illegible] with others in [illegible] social and recreational experiences.

From an inquiry about the girls who selected the electronic assembly course, it was learned that these students are chosen according to their aptitude and [illegible] when graduated [illegible] the course, they are [illegible] aided for work as an apprentice in this field The center for training has prepared them for the period of study and learning on an apprenticeship ahead of them.

Eligible for the Job Corps are young women who are out of school unable to find adequate work, and in need of a change of environment They come from broken homes, poor schools, and economically deprived communities. They have low skills, but normal and often above average intelligence.

Women In Community Service, (WICS) formed by women from the National Council of Catholic Women, National Council of Jewish Women, National Council of Negro Women and the [illegible]. In community relations the Job Corps Candidates are interviewed, tested, and on basis of need and potential, recommended for training.

At present there are 650 girls enrolled at the center. Dorothy [illegible] M Burns is the center director. Notice as passes are needed.

Established last March, the center has become an important factor economically for both the city of Astoria and Clatsop County. In community relations the cooperation has been excellent by civic officials and interested citizens, the Harbor women said.

Arrangements for a visit to the center and tour of the campus may be made in advance by contacting the Community Relations

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,560)

OCT 6 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpswomen Stage Fashion Show

Eleven corpswomen from Tongue Point Job Corps center presented a fashion show at the recent all-day PTA conference in the Veterans room of the Astor library. Under direction of Mrs. Joanne Mikuls, instructor in home and family life courses, the corpswomen modeled dresses they had made themselves and explained features of the [illegible] home life training program. Presentation is available on request to other club [illegible] organizations in the area, a center [illegible] said. (Job Corps Photo)

Campus Day for women set

[illegible] Day, for women [illegible] Clatsop Community College, October 20, will feature a choice of two campus tours for those attending the all-[illegible] event.

The first tour will be a walk through [illegible] the entire campus with an opportunity to see various classes in session. The second will consist of two 20-minute visits, one to the foreign language lab and one to the study skills center, a new concept in education added to the college this year. Clatsop women [illegible] with [illegible] the [illegible] which will be divided into groups of 20. The tours will be part of the morning session.

Registration starts at 9:15 a.m. Adjournment is at 2:30 p.m. Registration fee of $2.50 includes luncheon and free baby-sitting for pre-school children at the First Presbyterian Church, Astoria, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mothers wishing to avail themselves of this service are asked to provide a sack lunch for each child.

Featured speakers will be Mrs Ken Hedinger, women's editor of the Oregonian; Dr. Dorothy [illegible], director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center; Dr. Lillian Anna Kopp, center [illegible] director at Tongue Point.

The afternoon program will include demonstration in the fields of art, law enforcement, drama, marine technology, music speech and business.

The days events are open to all women of the area, regardless of educational background.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon

OCT [illegible]

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Portland, Oregon
The Press
City Northwest
(Cir. W 8376)

OCT 4 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

'Equal Opportunity' Talks Due Oct.

The Portland League of Women Voters, in conjunction with other Leagues in the metropolitan area, will have its regular October briefing Oct. 11 at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, NE 16th and Hancock. The program will focus on the various Office of Equal Opportunity programs in the state.

Four Job Corps young people and Mrs. Helen Kennedy, regional Job Corps coordinator, will tell about and answer questions concerning the Job Corps programs in Oregon. There will be two corpsmen from Estacada Timber Lake Conservation Job Corps and two corpswomen from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Additional information will be presented by Mrs. Matthew Cohen of the Lake Oswego League of Women Voters, Mrs. Thomas Gilles will update the Day-Care program, and Mrs. David B. Anderson will present a progress report on the recently opened Occupational Skills Center in Milwaukie.

The program will start at 9:45 a.m., followed by lunch. The afternoon speaker will be Marko Haggard, OEO coordinator.

Chairmen of the Human Resources study from the metropolitan area Leagues are Mrs. Marvin C. Hines, Portland; Mrs. David B. Anderson, Milwaukie-Clackamas County. Mrs. Robert Cohen, Lake Oswego, and Mrs. James Johnston, East Multnomah County.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling the office of the Portland League of Women Voters

Tacoma, Wash.
OCT 11 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

JOB CORPS CENTER PROJECT FIGURED

ASTORIA — Walt Musa Vancouver, Wash., was low bidder to the Oregon State Board of Higher Education at $51,950 for improvements at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria, operated by the University of Oregon.

Only other bidder was Albert Mittet, Astoria, at $55,800

Learning to use the stenograph machine, used for [illegible] deposition such as court reporting, are Clatsop College coeds from left, Linda Tayler Tillamook, Lucinda Guyett, Tillamook, Ann Hemis, Scappoose (seated at machine), and Lynn Hankel, Astoria. This is one of demonstrations to be given on [illegible] of college during Campus Day for Women, October 10.

Day on Campus For Women Will Have 2 Tours

[illegible] Day for Women [illegible] Clatsop Community College [illegible] 10 will [illegible] a chance to [illegible] the foreign language [illegible] with [illegible] attending for [illegible] visits [illegible] etc.

The [illegible] will be a walk [illegible] through [illegible] with an opportunity to see various [illegible] in session. The second will consist of two 20-minute visits, one to the foreign language lab and one to the study skills center, a new concept in education added to the college this year. Clatsop women [illegible] with [illegible] the [illegible] which will be divided into groups of 20. The tours will be part of the morning session.

Featured speakers during the [illegible] program will be [illegible] Hedinger, women's editor of the Oregonian; Dr. [illegible], director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center; Dr. Lillian Anna Kopp, center [illegible] director at Tongue Point.

The afternoon program will include demonstrations in the fields of art, law enforcement,

Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 - S 33,348)

OCT 8 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Poverty Battle 'Needs Time'

By YVONNE FRANKLIN
Statesman Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (Special) — Senators Wayne Morse and Mark Hatfield agree that the Office of Economic Opportunity [illegible] poverty programs such as Job Corps, Head Start and Community Action, deserve more time [illegible] to prove themselves. Both supported the $2.06 billion measure which passed the Senate.

Yvonne Franklin

Hatfield and Morse were a part of the move to transfer these programs to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Both [illegible] say they will be satisfied by their [illegible] Rep. Edith Green on the coming House [illegible] over the bill. Morse, however, said an attempt [illegible] transfers would [illegible] eventually have to be made, but not now.

"I think that given the crisis we have on the cities, we need badly to shore up what we have and improve it, rather than emasculate the poverty program," said Morse.

Hatfield said that the programs had not had sufficient time to prove themselves, and that while criticism was justified, administrative improvements should be and are being made.

"But don't throw the baby out with the bath water!" said Hatfield, "improve it... don't destroy."

Neither mentioned Mrs. Green in commenting on the continuation of OEO programs. These abound in Oregon, from six Job Corps conservation camps for men to one urban center for training young girls, to community action in most Oregon cities, to the Valley Migrant League which seeks [illegible] for [illegible] workers.

The community action program in Portland was especially pleasing as with Salem, was an example of [illegible] by local people, with federal and private backing to stop the past [illegible] poverty.

Morse recently visited an Albina day care center. He said that private groups had raised $100,000 to renovate an old building and run the program and that community women "had built the children' furniture themselves."

Hatfield praised the community action program in Albina, particularly the neighborhood center which offered a variety of services, such as legal aid, employment opportunities, family counseling.

Morse pointed out that it would cost more money to revamp the administrative setup in transferring programs such as community action, Head Start and Job Corps to HEW.

"Community action is working in Portland," continued Morse, "HEW isn't doing. Eventually it will go to HEW, but not this year or next."

Morse was embarrassed along the Job Corps center in Oregon. He had recently visited the center in a snap at [illegible] speech [illegible] last [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the staff.

Morse and Hatfield also supported an amendment to the poverty bill which failed by five votes to add almost a billion dollars to provide jobs and job training for the hard-core poor.

Morse said that the Senators who voted against the effort to provide jobs were "[illegible] away from their responsibility."

He said that cuts in federal spending [illegible] the edge [illegible] when there is over $6 billion [illegible] billion for Vietnam.

Cuts should not be made, he said, in programs such as aid to education, poverty, air pollution, conservation.

Hatfield said he voted for the billion dollar job creation amendment because "we need to put people into a productive role rather than dependent."

[illegible] said that the Senate [illegible] were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

'Equal Opportunity' Talks Due Oct. 11

(Tigard West) -3

The Portland League of Women Voters, in conjunction with other Leagues in the metropolitan area, will have its regular October briefing Oct. 11 at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, NE 16th and Hancock. The program will focus on the various Office of Equal Opportunity programs in the state.

Four Job Corps young people and Mrs. Helen Kennedy, regional Job Corps coordinator will tell about and answer questions concerning the Job Corps programs in Oregon. There will be two corpsmen from Estacada Timber Lake Conservation Job Corps and two corpswomen from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Additional information will be presented by Mrs. Matthew Cohen of the Lake Oswego League of Women Voters. Mrs. Thomas Gilles will update the Day Care program, and Mrs. David B. Anderson will present a progress report on the recently opened Occupational Skills Center in Milwaukie.

The program will start at 9:45 a.m. followed by lunch. The afternoon speaker will be Marko Haggard, OEO coordinator.

Chairmen of the Human Resources study from the metropolitan area Leagues are Mrs. Marvin C. Hines, Portland; Mrs. David B. Anderson, Milwaukie; Mrs. Clackamas County; Mrs. Robert Cohen, Lake Oswego, and Mrs. James Johnston, East Multnomah County.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling the office of the Portland League of Women Voters.

DR. DOROTHY BURNS

DR. LILLIAN KOOP

Campus Day for Women Speakers Will Be Doctors Kopp and Burns

A Catholic nun, who put aside her nun's habits to wear civilian clothes, in a special dispensation from her order is in charge of the corpsmen, living quarters at the Job Corps Tongue Point Job Corps Center will be a featured speaker at Campus Day in Women Tuesday at Clatsop Community college.

As Sister Mary Audrey, she was associated professor of sociology at Marylhurst college near Portland, having received her doctorate in sociology and anthropology from St. Louis university. Now as Dr. Lillian Kopp she is involved in interracial relations work being done at Lewis and Clark college, along with her duties as Job Corps.

Dr. Dorothy Burns, director of the Job Corps center, will be speaker at the education program for Campus Day for Women. Dr. Burns holds a BA degree from Indiana State college, an MS from the University of Illinois, an MA from San Diego college and a doctorate from the University of Oregon. She has held teaching and administrative positions in colleges in Oregon and California and has wide experience in areas of counseling and guidance.

Dr. Kopp's keynote address will be at 10 a.m., and Dr. Burns will speak on evaluation at 2 in the afternoon.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 10 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Her Job: Cutting Grass

Irin Cox, who regular[ly] ... to operate this large mow[er] ... center ... parts for the ...

'The Girls Can Spot A Phony'

DR. DOROTHY BURNS, left, is director of Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women. Her 8-year old son, Robbie, is paper boy at the center. A married daughter in California will be making Dr. Burns a grandmother soon.

By JEAN HENNIGER
Women's Editor, The Oregonian

The hardest part of Job Corps training from the administrative staff point of view, is trying to effect changes in trainees' behavior and attitude in a very short time.

This is the opinion of Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, personable director of the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women, appointed to the post early in July.

How's it going?

"Extremely well."

In an interview last week Dr. Burns offered this considered verdict, obviously giving the matter some thought.

Mother of two, she and her husband, an insurance broker, live on the center grounds. They came in early summer from California where she had most recently been with Cabrillo College at Aptos.

She has a wide background of working with and understanding disadvantaged youth, and it was with this perspective she noted the main challenge of her new job.

"The average girl who comes to the center stays six months or a year, with the maximum being two years. This is such a little time to instill new attitudes, train for a job, and teach such other vital things as courtesy, appearance, reliability."

What has surprised her most, working with the young women, some 50 per cent of whom are Negro, 20 per cent Mexican, 25 per cent white, and the rest combinations thereof?

"It is the change in the girls in a few days, each time, making friendships that cross racial lines.

"The best thing that happens is to see the girls get involved in student government, where they are participating directly in decisions, policies, and particularly, discipline."

There is a serious need, she says, for both a higher proportion of minority personnel and wholesome recreational opportunities.

Way of Life Opens

A dance is held every weekend with young men from Conservation Centers invited to attend, and often this will be salvaged [illegible] a [illegible] softball game, skating party or some other activity.

But just as important to the girls are visits to Portland as guests in private homes when they get to observe normal family life in [illegible] surroundings.

"This opens up a whole new way of life to them, especially when it is a family of their own race.

There is not nearly enough of this sort of opportunity available, just as the

(Continued on Page 7, Col. 3)

Job Corps Girls Change

(Continued from Page 1)

[illegible] counselor from a minority group sit in on a committee or discussion."

On [illegible] ... players' D[illegible] ... which is set [illegible] Oct. 20.

At least a dozen major firms and several governmental agencies are expected to attend the all-day event, designed to acquaint prospective employers with the Job Corps programs and the job skills of graduating trainees.

Five Areas Covered

There are, according to Dr. Burns, five areas in which girls are trained: nurse aide occupations, electronics assembly, drafting, food service occupations, and business and clerical.

They spend six hours a day bringing these skills up to vocational entry level, as well as literacy studies — reading, writing and arithmetic.

Dr. Burns, who holds a BA degree from Indiana State College, a B.S. from the University of Illinois, a M.A. from San Diego State and a doctorate from the University of Oregon, believes one thing, above all.

"To get anywhere with disadvantaged youth, you must genuinely accept them, be sincere in your efforts and sensitive to their level of learning.

"If nothing else, these young people can't spot a phony."

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Iranians Plan Visit to Clatsop

Clatsop county commissioner Lyle Ordway and Astoria chamber of commerce manager Jean Hallaux will meet an Iranian delegation at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday at Portland International airport and transport the delegation to Astoria.

The foreign delegation is in this country as participants in the International Visitor program Bureau of Educational and Cultural affairs and US State Department under the international exchange program, Hallaux told Clatsop county commissioners Wednesday morning.

The group will begin a tour of local and county points of interest at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at the OSU Seafood laboratory. Dr. David Crawford as host. They will tour the Tongue Point Job Corps center at 12:30 p.m., then go to Bumble Bee Seafoods at 2:30. Bill Seaberg is arranging dinners for the group at various Astoria residences that night.

The Friday agenda includes a tour of the court house between 10-11 with Vern Stratton county commissioner, their host, and a tour of county forest land that afternoon under auspices of Crown-Zellerbach.

Official escort of the Iranians is Leo Wollemborg of the US State Department, Hallaux said.

The foreign delegation consists of Hassan Abtahi, Ayadeh, Abolhassan Shahabeddin, Javad Kali and Houshang Mobasheri. They all serve as district governors of Iran and are cattle backbishers. Their main concern in the US is rural administration. Fishing industry and home hospitality is their topic of interest in Clatsop county, Hallaux added.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 9 - 1967
Est. 1888

Decor for Campus Day Luncheon

Mrs. Jud[illegible] ... Day ... as Clatsop Commu[illegible] ... items were prepared by Tongue Point corpswomen under direction of members of Astoria Business and Professional Women's club. ... day is in window of Pacific Power and ... Lagerway, president of BPW, is being assisted in decorating the luncheon tables for Campus Day ... Craig, Durris Roy, Jeanne Fastabend and Carol[illegible]

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 4 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tea Honors Lady Irene

Cups of coffee at the afternoon tea given by Mrs. Harry Steinbock Monday in honor of Lady Irene, wife of Gavin Astor, were Lady Irene, left; Mrs. Steinbock, wife of Astoria's mayor, and Dr. S. John from West Pakistan, a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Leroy Steinmann. The woman doctor, in colorful Indian sari gown, added interest to the tea, which attracted women of the community to the hilltop home to meet Lady Irene.

Astors Leave Here for Canada

Lady Irene Astor were guests for dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Coe and in the evening they [illegible] second visit to the library, to see it with the furniture in place and normal operations in progress.

In Portland Tuesday the Astors planned to acquire some bulbs to take home with them for planting, and wanted also to obtain seeds of as many types of local native trees as possible, for planting at home.

Lunch was scheduled with Sir James Macdonald, British consul at Portland, before boarding a plane for Canada in the afternoon.

Before leaving Tuesday morning the Astors [illegible] Point Job Corps [illegible] were Astor found much interest in instructional methods and equipment. He said this sort of educational work was being considered in England.

Portland, Oregon
The Press
City North
(Cir. W 16237)
OCT 4 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

'Equal Opportunity' Talks Due

The Portland League of Women Voters, in conjunction with other Leagues in the metropolitan area, will have its regular October briefing Oct. 11 at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, NE 16th and Hancock. The program will focus on the various Office of Equal Opportunity programs in the state.

Four Job Corps young people and Mrs. Helen Kennedy, regional Job Corps coordinator, will tell about and answer questions concerning the Job Corps programs in Oregon. There will be two corpsmen from Estacada Timber Lake Conservation Job Corps and two corpswomen from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Additional information will be presented by Mrs. Matthew Cohen of the Lake Oswego League of Women Voters. Mrs. Thomas Gilles will update the Day Care program, and Mrs. David B. Anderson will present a progress report on the recently opened Occupational Skills Center in Milwaukie.

The program will start at 9:45 a.m., followed by lunch. The afternoon speaker will be Marko Haggard, OEO coordinator.

Chairmen of the Human Resources study from the metropolitan area Leagues are Mrs. Marvin C. Hines, Portland; Mrs. David B. Anderson, Milwaukie; Clackamas County; Mrs. Robert Cohen, Lake Oswego, and Mrs. James Johnston, East Multnomah County.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling the office of the Portland League of Women Voters.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tea for Royalty Happy Occasion For Astorians

Coffee and conversation and a chance to meet lovely Lady Irene, wife of Gavin Astor, son of Lord John Jacob Astor, characterized the Monday afternoon affair hosted by Mrs. Harry Steinbock at her home on Ridge drive.

Lady Irene, here with her husband from England for the dedication of the new Astor library Sunday, received the guests informally with her hostess, creating a relaxed and friendly event of one that is often stiff and boresome. Many of the guests arriving through the afternoon hours had recently returned from vacation trips, thus making it a happy reunion of friends and acquaintances, with much to talk about.

Additional interest was the presence of a stately young woman doctor from West Pakistan, Dr. S. John, who is a guest of Dr. and Mrs. Leroy Steinmann, and who is at Tongue Point on a temporary basis, making a study of the Job Corps girls. Dr. John, who appeared in a graceful sari type gown with silver jewelry from India, talked easily about her home land and her work to groups of women who found her an interesting guest.

Those presiding at the silver services during the afternoon or assisting about the rooms were the Mesdames Sven Lund, Bill Wilson, Arnald Swanson, Tony Stramiello, Charles Wood, Deskin Bergey, Robert Neikes, Vera Gault, George Hediger, Jerome Greenberg, Thomas Cameron and Robert Lovell.

Formal 'welcome' scheduled for COCC president

A formal "welcome" by Dr. Frederick H. Boyle, new Central Oregon Community College president will be among the highlights of the annual Campus Day for Women at COCC on October 17.

Dr. Boyle recently assumed his duties at COCC after moving from North Carolina where he was dean of instruction at Rockingham Community College.

Main speaker for the event will be Dr. Lillanna Kopp, director of Center Life at the Tongue Point Training Center in Astoria.

Presiding at the conference will be Mrs. Alice Shambaugh, assistant professor of business at COCC.

Registration will be at 9 a.m. in the Student Union with a general session to follow.

Speakers at morning sessions will include Keith Clark, instructor in English; David Habura, instructor in business; Dallas Quick, assistant professor of music; Jane Schroeder, home extension agent; Walter Shold, head of the North Central Regional Office of the Division of Continuing Education, and Harold Black, director of Continuing Education at Central Oregon Community College.

Speakers at afternoon sessions include Nancy Ray, director of nursing at COCC; Ruth Bergderfer, assistant professor of art, and Charles Eskes, instructor in language.

A luncheon will be held in the Student Union beginning at 1 p.m.

All Central Oregon women are invited to attend the event. The registration fee of $2.50 includes the price of the luncheon.

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Second annual 'Women's Day scheduled at COCC campus

Central Oregon Community College will hold its second annual "Women's Day on Campus" Tuesday, October 17, with the luncheon speaker a Catholic nun who has gone back into civilian life as a Job Corps instructor.

Preregistration deadline is Thursday, October 12. A fee of $2.50 covers the all-day program and the luncheon. Forms are available from Mrs. Alice Shambaugh, assistant professor of business at COCC.

Participants may choose two of eight special interest areas for group sessions which will follow a general meeting at 9:30 a.m. in the Student Union. Registration will be at 9 a.m.

Following the luncheon, there will be evaluation of the information covered and a campus tour.

The luncheon speaker is Dr. Lillanna Kopp, formerly Sister Mary Audrey, director of Center Life at the Tongue Point Training Center. She has a master's degree and Ph.D. in sociology from St. Louis University, Mo. She also earned a master's degree in education at Seattle University, majoring in psychology, and has a B.S. in social sciences from Marylhurst College, where she later was an instructor. She has a broad background of teaching, writing, counseling and research.

Topics and leaders for the group sessions are as follows: "Improvement of the Three R's Through a Laboratory," Keith Clark; "Data Processing and Computers Should Not be Feared," David Habura; "Current Procedures in Office Machines," Joe Updegraff; "Music-Go-Round," Dallas Quick; "Lifelong Learning," Jane Schroeder; "A Day in the Life of a Patient," Nancy Ray, director of nursing; "Discovering Design," Ruth Bergderfer, and "Language Laboratories Make Learning Easy," Charles D. Eskes.

Members of the planning committee are Mrs. K.C. Johnson, chairman; Mrs. Frank Nolan, Mrs. Richard McRae, Mrs. James Ramesy, Mrs. Victor Schroeder, Mrs. Alice Shambaugh, Dr. Lillian Van Loan and Mrs. R. B. Zimmerman. Mrs. Sam Johnson is consultant.

The event is co-sponsored by COCC and the Division of Continuing Education of the State System of Education.

Job Corps Centers Praised

LAWRENCE HORAN

Law[illegible] ern [illegible] Office of Economic Opportunity, visited the Western Job Corps Center at Tongue Point and the Tillamook Job Corps Center Wednesday, and was favorably impressed that [illegible] everything possible to expand the job corps program.

The visit to the women's corps at Tongue Point was Horan's first visit to a women's job corps center. While he was there, 75 new corpsmen arrived at the center to bring the total number of girls enrolled in the Tongue Point program to 200.

"THE GIRLS at [illegible] seem to be enthusiastic and a large number of them are working for their high school diplomas," Horan said.

He said a recent survey shows that 68 per cent of the Astoria area community now actively support the Job Corps center, and that only about 30 per cent are indifferent or opposed to it. He said this increased support is "a step in the right direction."

He was pleased to find that the rate of the 152 corpsmen there high and he attributed this to good community endorsement and support of the Job Corps program.

ALTHOUGH Horan has only At Tillamook, Horan said he held his post as OEO regional director for four months, he has outlined aims for the program to prevent duplication of services and to increase communication between local and state governments.

He said he also hopes to work out better cooperation between the Job Corps, Community action programs and VISTA volunteer programs, so there will be a continuity of support for job corps graduates through these other segments of OEO.

A CARMEL, Calif. attorney, who headed the Peace Corps in Columbia for two years before taking his present OEO post, Horan is on leave of absence from his law practice.

Accompanying Horan to Oregon and on his visits to the Job Corps centers were Royce Ulsey, Job Corps regional administrator; Paul Week, OEO public affairs officer; and George Miller, acting chief of recruitment, all from the San Francisco office. The group returned to Portland Wednesday evening and visited OEO centers at Moses Lake [illegible]

'Employers' Day' At Job Corps Set October 20

Representatives of at least a dozen major firms and several governmental agencies are expected to attend an "Employers' Day" program at Tongue Point Job Corps Center Friday, October 20, according to Cormie Hamilton, placement director for Philco-Ford corporation, which handles job training and job placement at the center here.

Purpose of the special event is to acquaint employers with the Job Corps training program and the employment possibilities represented by Job Corps graduates. Speakers will explain various phases of the educational and vocational training offered corpswomen and outline the various skills represented by graduating trainees. The all-day program will also include corpswomen-guided tours of center facilities and vocational education classes.

Firms which already have indicated they will be represented include First National and U. S. National banks; Atlantic Richfield; Hanford company, and the U. S. Atomic Energy commission at Richland, Wash.; State Farm Insurance company, Philco-Ford Corporation; International Business Machines; Johnstone Associates, Lynwood, Wash.; Pacific Northwest Bell, Crown Zellerbach Corporation and United Control, Redmond, Wash.

Table agencies planning to attend are Multnomah County Health Department, Oregon State Board of Health Employment Service and Food Service, Washington State Department of [illegible] Portland Civil Service commission, and U. S. Civil [illegible] office at San Francisco also will attend.

Portland, Oregon
The Press
City Northeast
(Cir. W 23,495)

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

'Equal Opportunity' Talks Due Oct. 11

[illegible] of Women Voters in Multnomah [illegible] metropolitan area, will have its regular October briefing Oct 11 at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, NE 16th and Hancock. The program will focus on the various Office of Equal Opportunity programs in the state.

Four Job Corps young people and Mrs. Helen Kennedy, regional Job Corps coordinator, will tell about and answer questions concerning the Job Corps programs in Oregon. There will be two corpsmen from Eastcada Timber Lake Conservation Job Corps and two corpswomen from the Tongue Point Job Corps center.

Additional information will be presented by Mrs. Matthew Leitch of the Lake Oswego League of Women Voters. Mrs. Thomas Gilmore will [illegible] Day Care program and Mrs. David B. Anderson will present a progress report on the recently opened Occupational Skills Center in Milwaukie.

The program will start at 9:45 a.m., followed by lunch. The afternoon speaker will be Marko Haggard, OEO coordinator.

Chairmen of the Human Resources study from the metropolitan area Leagues are Mrs. Marvin C. Hines, Portland; Mrs. David B. Anderson, Milwaukie; Clackamas County, Mrs. Robert Cohen, Lake Oswego, and Mrs. James Johnston, East Multnomah County.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling the office of the Portland League of Women Voters.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D. 340,302 - S. 394,694)

Job Corpsmen Seek Better Opportunities

PAGES 1-12

The Oregonian
HOSTESS HOUSE
PORTLAND, OREGON, MONDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1967

OTHO LESURE
"I learned to read . . ."

JOHN LOERA
". . . get responsibility . . ."

FAYOLA PIERT
"I have a job, now . . ."

By MILLY WOHLER
Club Editor, The Oregonian

The hardest part of Job Corps training comes at the beginning.

"Leaving home," was the answer three trainees gave League of Women Voters members who asked what they "disliked most" about their experience in the Job Corps.

A recent program on "Human Resources" was conducted by an Inter-League committee of the four Portland area Leagues and presented at Westminster Presbyterian Church Wednesday.

The three trainees were brought to the briefing session by Mrs. Helene Kennedy, regional Job Corps coordinator, to put flesh on the [illegible] bones of the report on community action programs [illegible] most of them federally funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Fayola Piert, 19, Beaumont, Tex., who will graduate from the Tongue Point Center this month; Otho LeSure, 21, Coldwater, Miss., and John Loera, 18, El Centro, Calif., both from the Timber Lake Conservation Center, answered searching questions frankly.

Why did they enroll? What will it mean to them?

Fayola said: "I had graduated from high school but there was no job I was trained for. At Tongue Point I took the business and clerical training. I've been offered a job with the telephone company (Pacific Northwest Bell) in Portland and will accept it."

Otho said: "I was a high school drop out. I couldn't get a job. I wasn't getting anywhere. I decided to try it and see if I could make something of myself. And here I am."

John said: "I wanted a future. I wanted to get married [illegible] I was against the [illegible] [illegible] and I may [illegible]

Surprisingly articulate on the difference between Job Corps and their previous lessons, the trainees gave variations of a familiar theme.

"At Tongue Point you're really working. Filling, keeping records, using the business machines. You aren't just studying about it—you're doing it," Fayola said.

"In high school I did a lot of day dreaming — thinking about playing baseball after school or going to see my girl," John explained. "Out there in the woods there aren't any girls and you have to concentrate on the job. There's no reason to think about anything else."

"Those teachers out there pay more attention to you than the teachers where I come from."

Otho had an even more explicit explanation. "The Job Corps teachers break it down, they explain it to you and then they stand over your shoulder until you get it. At home the teachers give you a book and tell you to do it."

Otho also was most succinct about the "best" thing the Job Corps brought him.

[illegible] selected a little humor in his reply to the same question.

"I learned responsibility. You have to do things for yourself. You don't have a mother going around picking up your clothes for you."

Otho has nine brothers and sisters in [illegible] comes from a family of 11 children in [illegible] has a small son; now with her parents in Texas, who [illegible] plans to support.

Mrs. Kennedy, who has been with the Job Corps almost from one beginning in 1964, filled League members in on background details.

"We're one of the most [illegible] — with only one large city [illegible] population. It makes the weekend [illegible] challenging.

Currently there is a backlog [illegible] girls screened and waiting for openings [illegible] There has been a shortage of [illegible] and Washington, reflecting the fact [illegible] jobs.

From her office in the Downtown YWCA Mrs. Kennedy has seen recruits come from throughout the country, screened them to baseball games, bowling [illegible] visits and then watched them enter the [illegible]

"At first after they graduate [illegible] help. Then later they come back to see [illegible] Keep in touch with [illegible] additional [illegible]

[illegible] When they go [illegible] Inland [illegible] would [illegible] Economic [illegible] idea.

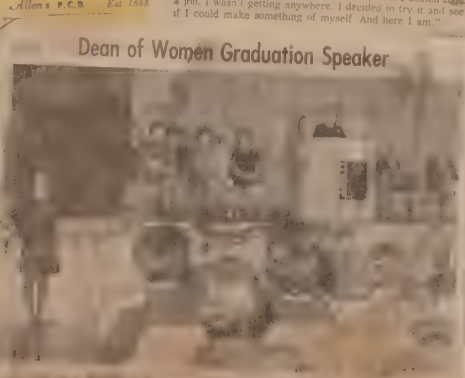
Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Receives Double Honors

Donna Charles, Port Angeles, Wash., has achieved double honors at Tongue Point Job Corps Center by receiving both her completion certificate in a food services vocational training program and G.E.D. certificate equivalent of a high school diploma. She is the third member of her family to be enrolled at Tongue Point. Her brother Ken Charles was the center's first trainee when it opened on February 1965, and her sister Pat graduated in food services earlier this year. Presenting the certificates are Glynn Price, left supervisor of food services, and Russel McCollister, instructor in communication skills.

Dean of Women Graduation Speaker



[illegible] engaged in on-the-[illegible] [illegible] said. Thirty corpswomen [illegible] GED certificates, comparable to [illegible] school diplomas. (Photo by Job Corps)

Speakers at College Campus Day Discuss Women's Role Today

...woman is never really wasted...(whether in or out of the home)...said; it rubs off on ...and keeps her wits ...and finds enrichment in complete involvement with other ...

...interesting ...ranger fills the day.

Dr. Dorothy Burns, director ...ongue Point Job Corps center ...gave an evaluation of Women's ...ole in today's society at the ...afternoon gathering.

Women in today's society has a dual role she said, with her ... a woman on one hand ... on the other. Ameri...

...Close to 200 women relaxed in the student center of the college on the hill, with its imposing new wing, to hear the afternoon and morning speakers and to gather for lunch in the cafeteria to hear the noon address, roaming through the rooms on guided tours and watching demonstrations of student work in various classrooms. The day was designed to further acquaint women of the community with the advantages in education the college right in their community offers.

...Women in today's ...lines it possible ...

...To Eugene — Charles Stolsig, center life manager at Tongue Point Job Corps center, took five corpswomen from the center to Eugene Friday to make a presentation on the center's vocational programs before a meeting of the Oregon Personnel and Guidance association. The corpswomen represent each of the five vocational subjects taught at the center: office and clerical occupations, health aide occupations, food services, drafting and electronics assembly.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)
NOV 1 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B.

Graduation Set At Job Center

ASTORIA — Forty corps women who have completed ...Job training courses at Tongue Point Job Corps center will receive certificates at graduation ceremonies here Thursday night. Twenty-one have completed courses in health occupations, 2 in business and ...ler, 3 in food services and ...can people."

In addition to GED certificates, the equivalent of high school diplomas, will be awarded to nine trainees.

A total of 140 girls have completed courses at the center since it began training young women in March.

Enrollment at the Job Corps facility is about 650.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 17 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Council to Meet ...Community Relations council of Tongue Point, an organization composed of local citizens and Tongue Point staff personnel, will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Tongue Point library to discuss a greater role by corpswomen in community service, possible sponsorship of a Tongue Point football team, a Miss Tongue Point pageant and other mat...

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 12 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est

...To Eugene — Charles Stolsig, center life manager at Tongue Point Job Corps center, took five corpswomen from the center to Eugene Friday to make a presentation on the center's vocational programs before a meeting of the Oregon Personnel and Guidance association. The corpswomen represent each of the five vocational subjects taught at the center: office and clerical occupations, health aide occupations, food services, drafting and electronics assembly.

Mrs. K. C. Johnson, left, and Mrs. Alice Shambaugh, on committee for annual COCC "Women's Day on Campus," find it no small task to make assignments for eight group sessions scheduled for October 17 event. Each participant may select two special interest subjects from eight offerings. (Bulletin Photo by Dave Swan)

Annual COCC campus day for women set October 17

Participants in the annual "Women's Day on Campus," Tuesday, October 17, at Central Oregon Community College, will hear an address by a Catholic Sister who has donned secular dress and taken back her original name, for an assignment as cente...le director at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center.

Dr. Lillian Kopp (Sister Mary Audrey) will speak following a 1 o'clock luncheon in the Student Union. The morning session will include group sessions at 10:45 and 11:15 a.m. Registration will be at 9 a.m., followed by a general meeting. Evaluation and a campus tour will follow Dr. Kopp's talk.

Advance registration will be a convenience, according to Alice Shambaugh, assistant professor of business at COCC, who is coordinator for the program. Registration forms are available at Eriksen's Stationery, Brandis Drug, the J.C. Penney store, Wetle's and The Smart Shop in downtown Bend, and at the Bend Troy Laundry station at Bend Plaza.

Forms should be mailed to Mrs. Shambaugh with the $2.50 registration fee in order to be processed by next Monday morning, it was pointed out. An effort will be made to give participants their choice of two special interest sessions chosen from eight offerings. Late registrations will be accepted Tuesday morning in the Student Union. The registration fee includes the cost of the luncheon.

Dr. Kopp, the guest speaker, has had first-hand experience in ghetto life, has conducted numerous conferences and workshops on guidance and counseling, and has written several books and articles dealing with deviant behavior, racial relations and cultural deprivation. She has two master's degrees and a doctorate in sociology and anthropology.

At Tongue Point, she is responsible for the corpswomen's living groups, and governs the work of 55 resident supervisors, counselors and advisers.

In the summer of 1965, she traveled and taught race relations across 28 states of the south and east, in a station wagon "college on wheels" equipped with a library, films and tapes on American ethnic group cultures and problems. She and four other Sisters from different regions and religious orders conveyed over 12,000 miles. They lived almost a week in the heart of Harlem, New York, and in Puerto Rican, Italian, Polish and Negro ghettos in Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Omaha and other cities visited along their route.

The campus day program is co-sponsored by COCC and the Division of Continuing Education of the State System of Higher Education. On the planning committee, in addition to Mrs. Shambaugh and Dr. Lillian Van Loan of the Division of Continuing Education are Central Oregon residents Mrs. K. C. Johnson, Mrs. Harold Nolan, Mrs. Richard Sidlau, Mrs. James Ramsay, Mrs. Victor Schroeder and Mrs. R. B. Zimmerman. Mrs. Sam Johnson is consultant, and will preside at the afternoon program.

At the general session at 9:30 a.m. in the Student Union, the new COCC president, Dr. Frederick Boyle, will make the welcoming remarks. Theme for the conference is "Learning Through the Laboratory."

Coordinators for the group sessions include COCC faculty members Keith Clark, David Fabura, Joe Undercuffler, Dallas Quick, Charles D. Eskes and Ruth Burgderfer. Others are Jane Schroeder, Jefferson County home economics extension agent, and Nancy Ray, director of the COCC practical nurse training program. Topics range from data processing and office machines to language, music and art study and adult education.

Logan Road Chapel Organized in Area

LEWIS AND CLARK — Logan Road Chapel is name of the newest church in the Lewis and Clark area. It is a self-governed group associated with the International Ministerial association with headquarters in Houston, Tex. The Rev. Howard Wal...bran was ordained by this ... as pastor of the ...

The nucleus of the national group began meetings at the home of the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Wa... on the...Mr. and Mrs. Ortel ...ground floor apartment with the Waibrans moved here from Sweden where they had ... years in their home for about four years.

Before the end of the year the group had outgrown the point where the Waibran home became too small. When Mr. and Mrs. John Maxson, who had rented an apartment in a building in the rear moved to Seaside Jan. 1, the congregation moved the apartment for a chapel. They plan to enlarge their meeting area again in the near future.

Last weekend they erected a wooden cross in front of the chapel and an electric-eye-light beside it. They hope soon to erect signs designating the chapel.

The congregation includes people from their former group in Svensen, as well as some from Seaside, Warrenton and Astoria.

There is a full schedule with Sunday school at 9:45 a.m.; morning worship at 11 a.m.; Sunday evening service at 7:30 and prayer meeting Wednesday nights at 7:30. In addition, each Tuesday night some of the group goes to the Tongue Point Job Corps training center to conduct Bible drills, games and ...anging for the girls. The Sunday congregation includes Job Corps girls.

Assisting the Rev. Mr. Waibran are elders Peter Tuyter, John Maxson and Jerry Hobbs; deacons Donward Hendrickson, Mrs. Peter Tuyter and Mrs. ... Peeler. Sunday school superintendent Donward Hendrickson, secretary and treasurer Mrs. Hendrickson, adult teacher Jerry Hobbs and kindergarten teacher Mrs. Hendrickson.

The Rev. Mr. Waibran is employed at White and Elna Sewing Machine center as a salesman and serviceman.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 23 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Job Corps Has Fashion Show For Anchor Club

Monday night at the Yacht club, the Anchor club was entertained by a group of eight girls from the Tongue Point Job Corps modeling clothing they have made themselves. Mr. Al Mikes, from the Family Life department, explained a little bit about the program at Tongue Point. He pointed out that the girls are taking courses in homemaking, citizenship and homemaking skills. Mrs. Ethel Jones ... acted as commentator for the entertaining style show that followed.

At the brief business meeting that preceded it was announced that nomination of officers would be held at the next meeting. The club voted to give an annual donation to United Good Neighbors.

The Skipper's banquet, an event of next month will be headed by Mrs. Charles Farmer, chairman and Mrs. William Malmberg, co-chairman. They will be assisted by the Mesdames Paul Branham, Jim Brecht, Herbert Berreth, John Day, Vern Mogensen, Lawrence Oble, Chuck Smith and Carol Jacobson.

Another event planned for November will be a Christmas auction with the Mesdames Herman Haggren, Wes Shaner, Larry Peters, William Leahy, Terry Salo, Stan Hixson and Tom Edison assisting. The refreshment committee will be headed by Mrs. Vincent Dulcich, chairman and assisting her will be the Mesdames Richard Delphia, Art Hilton, Stan Bergstrom, John Moberg and Robert Ryding.

The evening was rounded out with a coffee hour where Halloween decorations were about the room. The main table was centered with a large pumpkin filled with colorful autumn leaves and chrysanthemums. Mrs. Allan Ahola as chairman and the Mesdames William Whitten, Robert Nelson, and George Oja served the guests colorful individual cakes, orange sherbet and coffee.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
OCT 2 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Enrollment Up At Job Center

ASTORIA — Enrollment at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center reached 672 with arrival of 27 new trainees.

Most are from West Coast states and Hawaii, with 3 from Louisiana, 3 from Arizona and 2 from Texas.

Established quota for the center is 650.

Family Visits For Job Corps Girls Proposed

By MARGE DAVENPORT
Journal Staff Writer

The Astoria Poverty needs solution...

Oregon women who would like to help underprivileged children are needed to make it possible for needy girls to make weekend visits to families in the Portland area.

Dr. Lillian...Kopp, in charge of resident life at the Astoria center, says many of the 650 girls have never visited a home other than their own.

MANY OF ...girls are from substandard homes and never have ...ed school, declares ...ologist.

...ed since the girls ...ome to the Job ...Corps, many ...ed improvement ...ay of life, ...out to be more ...ople in a strange land.

...As caseworkers and citizens, the people who have a first hand experience with the Tongue Point girls will realize the need to upgrade our inadequate education system that has resulted in the need for Job Corps.

Although Dr. Kopp believes that programs within others should prevent such "dropouts" from school, she has group up without adequate education opportunities she believes that the Job Corps is presently the only way to help these youngsters catch up."

DESCRIBING the girls at Tongue Point, Dr. Kopp says 40 percent are Negro. Some are unsophisticated children from the southern cotton fields, the...rmed without ...ses. Others are from Watts and have the "veneer" necessary for survival in such ...tions. There are some ...problem children. In these are reports.

...They do not ...ress an ...ssion of Mexican ...ry. A good ...ber of ...ge Point girls are white and some of these come from Appalachia and other poor white areas.

The Tongue Point program has three basic emphases. One is on ...and emotional life of ...to help ...ge ...ect ...and ...

DR. LILLIAN A. KOPP

(Continued on Page 1, Col. 1)

Job Corps Girl Visits Proposed

(Continued from Page 1)

...ing the girls become self-...reliant.

The second emphasis of the Job Corps program is on basic education, and the center offers courses for a GED or high school equivalency certificate. This program incorporates some of the most modern educational methods known, and the girls have the benefit of ...reading courses, help ... other accelerated educational devices for making up the ...

THE THIRD ... program is vocational education ... Corps ... and ... courses ... in food services, electronics, drafting, business and clerical ... and training in ...nursing aides. When possible, ... the girls have ... their ... ...

...AT FIRST, Dr. Kopp hopes to work through organizations and church groups, who will volunteer to take 15 or 16 girls for Saturday morning, to Sunday evening stays in families within ... ...

The girls don't expect ... entertaining. They ... have a chance to go shopping to play with children and to get away from living in a bureaucracy for a little ...while," she explains.

The Oregonian
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 384,804)
NOV 1 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

40 To Graduate At Tongue Point

ASTORIA (Special) — Forty ... Tongue Point Job Corps center ... Twenty ... one home ... courses ... occupations, seven in business and clerical, five in food services and one in electronics assembly. In addition nine corpswomen will be given GED certificates, the equivalent of high school diplomas.

This will be the fourth graduation held at the center since it began training young ...

The center total enrollment is slightly more than 650.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 20 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Astoria Center For Corpswomen To Be Dedicated

Formal dedication of the new ... down center for Tongue Point Job Corpswomen at 14th and Duane will take place at 7 p.m. today, with local people invited.

Dr. Dorothy Burns, Tongue Point center director, will preside. Representatives of the city government, chamber of commerce and other local agencies will speak.

Kenneth Carlstrom, who will operate the center, will be introduced.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 240,562 - S 384,804)
OCT 29 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Director Of Job Corps Billed As College Speaker

Dr. Lillianna Kopp, director of center life at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center ... Speaker ... pus Day for Women at Mt. Angel College Thursday, Nov. 9.

Dr. Kopp ... speak at 9:45 a.m. on "Woman of the Seventies: Neither Mouse nor Matriarch." She is on leave from Marylhurst College, where she is a sociologist, and known as Sister Mary Audrey Kopp.

Other highlights of the conference, co-sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education, will be special interest group meetings, including calligraphy, dance and fitness, learning and language, preschool education, opportunities in aging, East Asia and theology.

Talks and resulting discussions are designed to interest mature women in continuing their education.

Meetings, beginning at ... will also include ... tion of "lifelong ... " and the place of ... students on campus.

Sister Peter Mary Lambert will discuss opportunities at the college at 2 p.m. Tours ...

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. in the student lounge, and the fee includes lunch...

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Enrollment Now 673 at Center

Enrollment at Tongue Point Job Corps Center reached a total of 673 with the arrival of 85 new trainees this week, the center announced. Graduations and other attrition had reduced the corpswomen total to 628. An average of 650 is maintained under a contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity.

This week's arrivals came from western southwestern and deep south states, in addition to Hawaii.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
OCT 18 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Philco-Ford Man Due Friday for Employers' Day

Dr. Perry Rushlau, Fort Washington, Pa., manager for Philco-Ford training centers including Tongue Point Job Corps center, will be in Astoria Friday to attend the Employers' Day program scheduled at the center here.

Dr. Rushlau supervises Philco-Ford operators at Job Corps centers at Guthrie, Okla.; Madera, Calif.; Jersey City, N.J., and Breckinridge, Ky., in addition to Tongue Point.

More than a dozen major Pacific northwest firms and several Oregon and Washington state commissions will attend the all-day program Friday at Tongue Point in addition to firms previously announced, two representatives from Frederick & Nelson department store in Seattle and three from Seattle YMCA are expected.

Purpose of the ... brief prospective employers on the general education and vocational education programs offered at the Job Corps center here. Center tours with Corpswomen guides are scheduled and several administrators of the center will address the group. The event was arranged by Philco-Ford. Howard Gentry is ... ment manager at the center for Philco-Ford in charge of the center's vocational training.

Herald & News
Klamath Falls, Oregon
(Cir. D 14,170 - S 14,860)
OCT 20 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est 1888

Klamath Girl Wins Job Corps Student Office

ASTORIA — Opal Cornwell, 20, daughter of Mrs. Willice Cornwell, 615 Commercial St., Klamath Falls, has been elected secretary of the student government at Tongue Point Job Corps Center for Women here.

The center, operated by the University of Oregon under a contract with the federal Office of Economic Opportunity, has an enrollment of 650 young women between the ages of 18 and 21, and offers vocational training in five separate fields.

Miss Cornwell, who has been at the center since July, is enrolled in the business and clerical course.

HELP WANTED...

The Tongue Point Job Corps for Women is looking for used patterns. The Linn County Extension officials will see that they get to the center if you can get them to their office.

Tongue Point Job Corps trainees have been hard at work washing windows and otherwise preparing their new downtown center at 14th and Duane for formal dedication at 7 p.m., Friday. The public is invited to the ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Corpswomen's Recreation Center Here to Be Dedicated Friday

Public dedication of the new Tongue Point Job Corps downtown center at 14th and Duane will be held at 7 p.m., Friday, with civic and center officials, local citizens and corpswomen participating.

"We are dedicating the center to the citizens of Astoria in appreciation of their hospitality, and we hope it will prove to be a welcome and attractive addition to the Astoria business district," said Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, center director.

"We have long realized the need for a USO-type facility in the downtown area where the corpswomen could wait for the Tongue Point bus, visit with their friends or drop in for a few minutes' relaxation while shopping. Efforts to obtain federal funds for this purpose were started while the center was still training corpsmen, and were intensified with the change to a woman's center.

"We are extremely pleased that OSA authorized the project."

The center has been in use for the past week, although all equipment and furnishings had not been installed. It will be open daily except Monday and Tuesday, "closed days" for the corpswomen, under supervision of Kenneth Carlstrom of the Tongue Point staff.

The public is invited to attend Friday night's brief ribbon-cutting ceremony and an open house which will follow.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,348)

Allen's P.C.B. Est.

Drinking Parties Lead to Arrests

Several young adults and teenagers were arrested by Astoria police on various charges during the weekend following reports of beer parties involving beer bottles being thrown on a house at one location.

Arrested by police at a house in the 600 block of 18th street at 12:30 a.m. Saturday were John Andreas Owen, 23, supplying liquor to minors; Lloyd Michael MacFarlane, 18, minor in possession of liquor; Stephen Donald Early, 18, disorderly conduct; Kenneth Martin Jarvis, 21, disorderly conduct; Bonnie Carlene Pedersen, 19, minor in possession of liquor, and Marie Margaret Hansen, 20, minor in possession of liquor. In addition, police said, a 16-year-old youth, a 16-year-old girl and two 17-year-old girls were detained as minors in possession of liquor.

Addresses of those arrested were not reported by police.

In the other incident involving the reported throwing of beer bottles from 247 West Lexington on to a house just down the hill, about 10:30 p.m., Saturday, four persons were arrested on various charges. They included Richard Jaimer Oren, 20, supplying liquor to a minor, resisting arrest and minor in possession of liquor; Rosemarie Henderson, 19, Tongue Point Job Corps Center, minor in possession of liquor and resisting arrest, and two 17-year-old Job Corps trainees charged with minor in possession of liquor.

Oren's address was not listed on the police report.

OCT 12 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Jeff Women Busy In COCC Event Plans

A formal "welcome" by Dr. Frederick H. Boyle, new Central Oregon Community College president will be among the highlights of the annual Campus Day for Women at COCC on Oct. 17.

Active in the planning for the October 17 event are two Jefferson county women: Mrs. James Ramsey and Mrs. Victor Schroeder, the latter the Jefferson county home extension agent, who is also scheduled to speak.

Dr. Boyle recently assumed his duties at COCC after moving from North Carolina where he was dean of instruction at Rockingham Community College.

Main speaker for the event will be Dr. Lillanna Kopp, director of Center Life at the Tongue Point Training Center in Astoria.

Presiding at the conference will be Mrs. Alice Shambaugh, assistant professor of business at COCC.

Registration will be at 9 a.m. in the Student Union with a general session to follow.

Speakers at morning sessions will include Keith Clark, instructor in English; David Habura, instructor in business; Dallas Quick, assistant professor of music; Mrs. Schroeder; Walter Shold, head of the North Central Regional Office of the Division of Continuing Education, and Harold Black, director of Continuing Education at Central Oregon Community College.

Speakers at afternoon sessions include Nancy Ray, director of nursing at COCC, Ruther Burgderfer, assistant professor of art, and Charles Eskes, instructor in language.

A luncheon will be held in Student Union beginning at p.m.

All Central Oregon women invited to attend the event. registration fee of $2.50 includes the price of the luncheon.

Los Angeles Corpswoman Before, After

Proud of her accomplishment in personal appearance, credited to diet and personality and grooming training at Tongue Point Job Corps center, is Barbara Moore, 19, of Los Angeles who weighed 253 pounds when she enrolled at the center in April and now has a comparatively trim figure at 176, as shown in photo at right. Photo at left was taken when she was 17, weighed 222. Miss Moore is one of about 200 corpswomen enrolled in grooming and charm classes conducted by Edith Harrison at Tongue Point. She is receiving business and clerical vocational training, plans to become an office training. (Tongue Point Job Corps Photo)

Trainee Cleared, Man Sentenced On 2 Charges

Charges ste[m]ming from a [fi]ght in [A]storia last we[e]k resulted in a mixed [ver]dict Friday morning, resulting in a sentence for a man and a court finding of [J]ob Corps trainee [n]ot guilty.

Richard Jaimer Oren, 20, 934 Commercial, pleaded guilty to charges of supplying liquor to a minor in connection with [a] fight and resisting arrest. [T]he charge was dismissed in return for the court ruling the beer [i]n question was not [a] can the second count, Judge Antonia Zafiratos fined Oren $75 and suspended a seven-day jail sentence. Oren received an additional sentence and fine of $[1]00 and even days suspended for [t]he third charge.

The other person charged was Marie Henderson, 19, of the Astoria Job Corps center. She was found not guilty on separate charges of minor in possession of liquor and resisting arrest after she stated it is illegal she had consumed the contents of four bottles of beer and could [n]ot be responsible from her defense counsel. Were you at last resisting arrest?" Attorney William Bergquam of Portland is [q]uoted by the Job Corps to defend trainees in court.

Judge Zafiratos said following that he found Miss Henderson not guilty because her [e]motional safeguards were apparently not lowered during arrest procedure by the arrest[i]ng officer.

Astoria policeman Dale Carlisle testified the conduct of Oren and Miss Henderson was such that he used force to take them into custody during arrest procedures. He testified to using tear gas from a "chemical mace" a police billy with tear gas pellets. Oren told the court [h]e made it difficult for him to see and he stumbled over an embankment.

Campus Day Slated Mt. Angel on Nov. 9

MOUNT ANGEL — Two nationally known speakers and several Mount Angel College faculty members will address women who are invited to visit the Mount Angel campus Nov. 9.

The talks and resulting discussions are designed to interest mature women in continuing their education. The Division of Continuing Education of the State System of Higher Education aided in organizing the conference.

Dr. Lillanna Kopp, director of center life at the Tongue Point Training Center (Job Corps) for women, will be the keynote speaker at the all-day Campus Day for Women at 8:45 a.m. Her topic will be "Woman of the Seventies: Neither Mouse nor Matriarch."

The luncheon speaker will be Mrs. Mary N. Hilton, Washington, D.C., deputy director of the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Dr. Kopp, well - known as Sister Mary Audrey Kopp, SNJM, Marylhurst College sociologist, is on leave from that position, and has adopted her given name while at Tongue Point. She was a member of traveling workshops in intergroup relations for the National Conference of Interracial Justice and Loyola University of Chicago in 1965-66. Also in 1965, she was a member of the first Catholic leadership Conference in the South in Atlanta.

She also has been involved in welfare planning, research and action programs in Oregon for several years. She has written extensively on sociological and religious problems.

Special interest group meetings will be conducted by Sister Grace Taylor, whose subject is calligraphy; Martha Wynd, dance and fitness; Clemencia Diaz, learning and language; Sister Bernice Schmidt, preschool education; Sister Loyola Schwab and Gary Hansen, opportunities in aging; Mrs. Jane Fields, seminar on East Asia; and Sister Augusta Marie Raabe, the new theology.

Dr. Walter Shold of the Division of Continuing Education will speak on "Lifelong Learning" and a panel of students led by Sister Julianne James will discuss the place of older students on the campus.

The meetings and discussions will start at 10:45 a.m.

Sister Peter Mary Lambert, instructor in philosophy, will discuss opportunities at Mt. Angel College at 2 p.m. The conference will end at 3 p.m., when there will be tours of the campus for those interested.

Registration will be at 9 a.m. in the student lounge. Meetings will be in the college auditorium.

A small registration fee will include the luncheon.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

OCT

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 18[88]

Alice Eubanks, director general of student government, Tongue Point center, cut the ribbon at formal dedication of the new downtown center for Tongue Point girls Friday evening. Helping her was Deakin Bergey, community relations council chairman of the Job Corps Center. At left, June Yeates, recreation chief at Tongue Point. Lower photo shows Kenneth Carlstrom, left, downtown center supervisor, with Robert Cook, Mt. Hebo Air Force station; Peggy Wilson and Linda Shocklin.

Freighter Freed From Sandspit

ASTORIA (AP) — A salvage tug finally freed the 438-ft Greek freighter Ostaya[s] Tuesday [a]fter a [s]ix-room of the Columbia Riv[er].

The ship, bound for Portland from Seattle with a cargo of fishmeal ran aground Oct. 2[1] in a violent storm. [A] storm [s]pokesman for the owners said the ship would be towed to Tongue Point, former naval station that has been converted into a Women's Job Corps center – for [w]omen.

Rep. [W]alter Hall, port manager of Portland, said the freighter would [be] towed to Portland or [Ta]coma [a]fter repairs.

[D]ue to the [h]igh tides of the Pacific ocean, and the [s]trong [c]urrents in the Columbia [R]iver, the ship [s]ustained an estimated $500,000 in internal damage from running aground and from subsequent attempts to pull it back into deep water.

Bulletin
Bend, Oregon
(Cir. D 7,707)

OCT 16 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

College program due on Tuesday

Central Oregon Community College will hold its second annual "Women's Day on Campus" tomorrow. Persons who have not registered may still do so tomorrow at 9 a.m. in the Student Union. The first general session will be held there starting at 9:30 a.m. All women who are interested are invited.

Group sessions will be held from 10 to 10:45 a.m. and from 11:15 to 12:30 p.m. There will be a luncheon at 1 p.m. in the Student Union, with Dr. Lillana Kopp, formerly Sister Mary Audrey, as guest speaker. She is director of Center Life at the Tongue Point Job Corps Training Center.

Eight special interest group sessions are offered, with each participant to take part in two. Speakers for these are Keith Clark, David Habura, Joe Updegraff, Dallas Quick, Jane Schroeder, Nancy Ray, Ruth Bergderfer and Charles B. Eskes.

A fee of $2.50 covers the all-day program and the luncheon.

Mrs. K.C. Johnson headed the planning committee for the event, with Mrs. Alice Shambaugh, assistant professor of business at COCC, as coordinator. Mrs. Sam Johnson is consultant, and will preside at the afternoon program.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

OCT 17 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

OCT 17 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est.

Recreation Center For Corpswomen Opens in Astoria

First use by corpswomen of a combination recreation center and [illegible] in the downtown Astoria area began Friday, although an official opening and dedication program will be delayed until later, Tongue Point Job Corps officials announced.

The facility, at the corner of 14th and Duane will be supervised by Tongue Point staff and volunteer workers.

While the location had been tentatively selected weeks ago, a center [illegible] and its actual use had been delayed pending approval of lease arrangements by the university and the federal agencies involved.

"With the advent of the rainy season it became imperative that a location be obtained where corpswomen could be protected from the weather while waiting for transportation or visiting in the downtown district," a spokesman said. "With installation of limited recreation facilities it is hoped the new center will serve as a meeting place for the corpswomen and their friends, along the lines of the USO centers provided for U.S. service personnel."

Details of a formal opening and dedication program will be announced within a few days, it was stated.

Most Trainees at Tongue Point Responsive, Friendly, Club Told

Vast majority of corpswomen at Tongue Point center are responsive, concerned and friendly, Syd Thompson of the center's community relations staff told Kiwanians Tuesday.

But, he said, it is hard to view these girls in an ordinary frame of reference. They come from backgrounds of poverty and one must really have had to experience poverty fully to understand them, Thompson declared.

"They are not ordinary girls," he said. "Nearly half are from broken homes; three-fourths never saw a doctor or dentist, majority are undernourished and many of them have missed the sympathetic and adequate care of an adult.

Average reading achievement level is that of a sixth grader, Thompson said. Many of the girls cannot adequately read a newspaper.

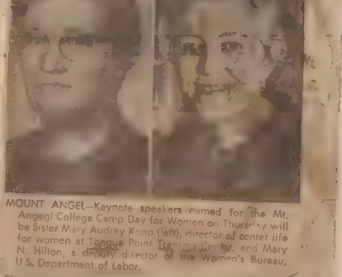
"In my opinion, most of the girls crave sympathy and recognition," he added.

Educational program at Tongue Point has three objectives, Thompson said. These are employability, family membership and citizenship.

There is currently an effort on foot to involve more girls in community service projects, the speaker said, on the theory that helping others helps greatly for one to solve one's own problems.

Thompson showed club members a series of slides on the Tongue Point program, entitled "Color Me Human."

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 31,429 - S 32,[illegible]



MOUNT ANGEL—Keynote speakers named for the Mt. Angel College Camp Day for Women on Thursday will be Sister Mary Audrey Kopp (left), director of center life for women at Tongue Point Training Center, and Mary N. Hilton, a deputy director of the Women's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labor.

Astorians Join In Dedicating Corps Center

Civic officials and other Astoria citizens joined Tongue Point Job Corps folk in formal dedication of the new downtown center for corpswomen at 14th and Duane Friday night.

A plaque was installed on the wall with the legend:

"To Astoria's cooperation, understanding and friendly hos[illegible] to our young persons [illegible] downtown center is dedicated."

Speakers included Dr. Dorothy Burns, center director; City Councilman Roy Duoos representing Mayor Harry Steinbock who is vacationing in Las Vegas, Alice Eubanks, student government director at the center, and Mrs. Bruce Pond, who urged participation by citizens in voluntary services at the center.

An open house followed the ceremonies.

COLLEGE AFTER CLASS

Clatsop College has made extraordinary gains in a short time under difficult circumstances until it has definitely become a substantial educational institution. The public is impressed by its solid growth and appreciates the fact that Clatsop College has already provided the Lower Columbia area with its only higher education. It is significant that southern Pacific county at the other end of the Astoria bridge this fall sent more students to Clatsop college than any other institution of higher learning.

But we are told that despite this rapid development there is something essential lacking. It must come as a surprise to the general public that even those students who take no part in sports insist that Clatsop College must have football.

It is said that the board of directors realizes that the college needs football among other reasons because other colleges have football and the public associates college with football. The local public may believe our practical college can get along without football just as the women's Job Corps center does at Tongue Point. To local people, Clatsop College is an institution that was established to offer efficient training in important skills and basic knowledge for jobs in a number of fields. Such an attitude toward the college, which is in keeping with its role in our education, appears to be quite widespread.

But the students are not happy without the status that football gives to an educational institution just as golf does to a community. We are reminded that after getting the $103 million Wauna project next door the people of Clatskanie just had to have a golf course and dug up most of the money for reviving the Depression period golf course on the crest of Rainier Hill.

Football is needed in Clatsop College to provide class that is not to be achieved in any other way. But the board of directors can't be blamed for not rushing into football even though it appeals to the students. Much is needed before Clatsop College is ready for football. College football cannot be played on the street.

Those who feel that football doesn't belong in a college devoted to training students in non-football skills should realize that the students make up their college and that if they are disappointed with the college it is likely to be a disappointing college.

Dr. Lilliana Kopp, right, visits at COCC Women's Day luncheon with Mrs. Sam Johnson, a member of the State Board of Higher Education. Mrs. Johnson, consultant for the all-day program, introduced the speaker and presided at the afternoon session. (Bulletin Photo by Dave Swan)

Hope lies with 'five percenters'

Slide Program Tells Story of Job Corps Here

"Getting to Know Us" sums up a recent effort in the production of "Color Me Human," a color slide presentation about the Women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point prepared for showing before any interested groups throughout Clatsop county, according to Dr. Dorothy Burns, center director.

The specially prepared documentary is available to any club or organization. Its content is suitable for almost any group interested in becoming better informed about the Astoria Job Corps center, including modern problems classes in high school, church fellowship groups, parent-teachers association groups, business and professional organizations and civic and social organizations.

The program tells the Tongue Point story as it relates to the center's objectives in working with disadvantaged young women from many areas of the US. It presents a statistical analysis of the center's corpswomen as well as a more human analysis and goes on to describe recruiting procedures, what happens after trainees arrive at the center, vocational training programs, education offered in social studies and home and family living, health services and student living activities.

Clubs or organizations interested in scheduling "Color Me Human," are asked to write or telephone community services, Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center.

September Corpswomen Honored

Five Tongue Point trainees named corpswomen of the month for September are congratulated by center Director Dr. Dorthy M. Burns on receiving their commendation letters and merchandise orders which accompany the awards. From left are Dr. Burns, [illegible] Oak Harbor, Wash.; [illegible] Lyons, Wanata, Ga.; Diana Cook, Covington, La.; Eva McGee, Madison, Fla.; and Lena Brown, Pelzer, S.C. Awards are for excellence in attendance, class p[illegible] manner, contribution to the center, leade[illegible] and cooperation.

Capital Journal
Salem, Oregon

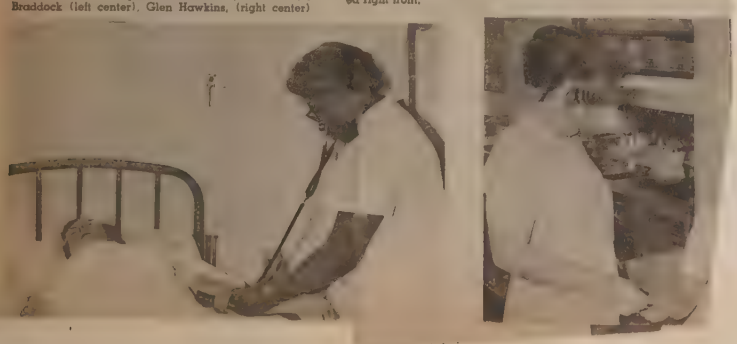
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1804

Ceremony Dated

ASTORIA (AP) — Graduation exercises were scheduled tonight for 40 girls at the Women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point near Astoria. The center switched to a women's facility in March. Current enrollment is 650.

Job Corps Girls Get Nurses Aid

Job Corps girls meet the hospital board and supervisors at a get-to-gether in cafeteria. Officials are Boyd Hartman, (left) hospital administrator; Rev. Lester Braddock (left center), Glen Hawkins, (right center) chairman of the board, and Roy Peterson, board member. Virginia Williamson, nursing supervisor, is seated right front.



Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B.

Trainee Scores High in College Speech Tourney

Tongue Point Corpswoman Jean Callahan, 19, from Aptos, Calif., one of several Tongue Point trainees taking courses at Clatsop Community college, achieved the highest point total among the college's representatives at an inter-collegiate speech tournament last Friday at Lewis & Clark college in Portland, according to center officials.

Although it was her first competition and she did not compete in a novice division, the corpswoman took three second places, two thirds and one fourth.

She is enrolled in sociology and speech classes at the college. She is training to be a social worker aide and has been at Tongue Point since June.

Oregon Journal
Port[illegible]

Allen's P.C.B. Est.

Corpswomen Give UGN $151

ASTORIA — Corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, who are paid $30 a month (less taxes) while receiving their training, have contributed $151 to others less fortunate than themselves through the Astoria UGN campaign.

The UGN drive used the slogan "Give Up a Hamburger for UGN," and it was estimated the total represented about 600 unconsumed sand[illegible]

[illegible] corpswomen must pu[illegible] all personal items, such as cosmetics, cigarets and between-meal snacks, from their monthly checks, which average about $26 after taxes.

Job Corps Trainee Virginia Perez Takes Blood Pressure

[illegible] Journal

Girls To Sing

The 14-voice girls' choir of the Tongue Point Job Corps [illegible] sing at a festival scheduled for all Astoria Community churches, NE Rodney Ave. and Sunset St., at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Services at 9:00 and 11:00

(Register Guard photo by Joe Matheson)

Modesta Bedolla (left), Josefina Rascon Quickly Change Hospital Sheets

Girls Learn On the Job

By JANET GOETZE
Of the Register-Guard

"The patients are so nice. They introduce themselves when you first see them, and they're very easy to work with."

This was the evaluation of Shirley Soto of Douglas, Ariz., one of six new faces at Sacred Heart Hospital who have arrived in Eugene via the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria.

The six girls, from towns in California, Arizona and Texas, are nurse's aide trainees who are getting on-the-job experience following four months of classroom work in Astoria.

Sacred Heart Hospital contracted with the University of Oregon, which administers the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, to provide the girls with the practical experience they need to get jobs. Hospitals in Astoria and Portland also are helping to train Job Corps members.

They will be evaluated on their work ability at the end of four weeks by Mrs. Donald G. Newman, a registered nurse at Sacred Heart who is in charge of their training.

"I've been designated 'mama,'" she explained with a laugh.

Virginia Perez, a petite 17-year-old from Oxnard, Calif., explained that the course work at Tongue Point was divided into four "milestones," that included learning about temperature-taking, bed-making, intravenous feeding and general patient care. During their first week at Sacred Heart they learned how to deal with emergencies arising from cardiac arrest.

"We worked on a dummy, not a real person," Virginia said.

What's a typical day in the life of a nurses aide trainee? Yolanda Torres, 17, from Tucson, Ariz., said the work day begins with taking and recording temperatures.

"Then when the trays come up from the kitchen, we serve breakfast," she said. "After breakfast we pick up the trays, then give bed baths and make up the beds. From there, we take the patients things they need, or just chat a while."

Mrs. Newman said each trainee works with an older, experienced nurses aide who is able to give extra advice and immediate practical help.

"The girls have been working the 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. shift," Mrs. Newman said. "We feel that we can give them the best supervision during the day shift, but later on we may switch them around, depending on what seems to work out best."

Lucy De La Fuente, 18, a tall, dark-eyed girl from Fresno, Calif., said the Job Corps will try to help them find jobs in hospitals when they have completed their training. Most of the girls want to return to their home communities, she said, but "it all depends," Lucy said.

The group, which also includes Modesta Bedolla, 19, of San Benito, [illegible] is living in the Sacred Heart student nurses dormitory. They have spent part of the first two weeks of their month-long stay getting acquainted in the area.

"We walk around window-shopping a lot," Yolanda said.

They weekend they have been invited to visit the ranch of a student practical nurse.

"I've been very pleased with how well the girls have been taken in by the student nurses and the staff members," Mrs. Newman said.

The Job Corps experience has opened new horizons for the girls, who had not completed their high school educations. While at Tongue Point they worked toward the G.E.D., a high school equivalency certificate.

We stopped working on it when we left Astoria," Virginia said. "But I'd like to finish it."

The new job skills have inspired Shirley to think about more education. "I'd like to go to college and try to get more nursing education," she said.

Yolanda and Modesta indicated they became interested in Job Corps when they realized that without high school diplomas and work skills they were unable to get jobs.

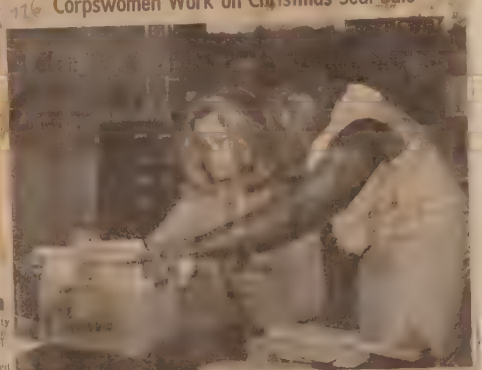
"I left many friends already in the Job Corps," Yolanda said. "One guy's sister joined. She's still in Astoria studying at Business College. I read some pamphlets about it and since I was in school I decided to try. I thought if I didn't like it I could go back home."

Yolanda apparently liked the course work, and she says she enjoys working in the hospital, too. She is anxious to get back to see her four brothers and sisters in Tucson, "but I like it here, too," she said wistfully. "It's such a pretty country."

Yolanda Torres Records Temperature

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Circ. D 6,590)
OCT 31 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpswomen Work on Christmas Seal Sale



Helping to prepare Christmas Seal envelopes for the Clatsop County Tuberculosis and Health association are Barbara Penner (left), Lua Thorpe, Galt, and Sally Shatteen, Statesboro, Ga., from Tongue Point Job Corps center. The corpswomen volunteers are working under supervision of Mrs. Lloyd Fletcher, executive secretary of the association, in preparing for the annual seal sale. (Job Corps Photo)

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
Seattle
San Francisco - Los Angeles
Univ. of Ore. Emerald
Eugene, Oregon
OCT 24 1967

Job Corp Center Holds Orientation

A meeting to orient University students to the Tongue Point Job Corps Center will be held at 7 p.m. today in the EMU.

This was erroneously printed in a campus brief as being scheduled for 12 noon.

The meeting will include speakers on the training program and group life at Tongue Point. Slides will be shown of the center.

Tongue Point Job Corps Center is one of the many investment that the United States is making in its outside community.

Visitations are now being planned for that group of girls who would like to know more about the Job Corps training program.

The first visitation group will go to Tongue Point November 4-5 for a weekend of discussion and exchange. Girls who wish to participate may sign up at the orientation meeting.

Long view, Wash. News

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Republicans Poverty Program Goals

The poverty program has and youth programs, notably for prevocational and vocational education in schools and the maximum feasible population of persons in decision making pro-

more than two years. ation and any one period

Thompson presided the meeting in some of

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Circ. D 6,590)
OCT 13 1967

Football Game At Cispus Calls Local Trainees

Two busloads of Tongue Point Job Corps center trainees will attend a football game

Study Finds Corps Trainees Lack Information on Health

EUGENE —Young women entering the nation's Job Corps centers lack adequate health information, according to findings of a University of Oregon study.

Human reproduction, the effects of using alcohol and tobacco, the way in which disease is transmitted, and knowledge of how to conduct social relationships the opposite sex are areas in which men in the Job Corps

After interviews, revised forms, and selors at the centers

We also found upon tape recording the questions, she said, that the trainees related better

Miss Tuck said a series of studies at men's and women's Job Corps Centers giving insight to these and other health

As a result, recommendations for corrective health education programs, tailored to needs of the individual women and corpswomen, are awarded an $8,000 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) in 1965—the only kind—to study health men entering the Job Additional funds in the form of a $7,000 grant from OEO were added during the summer of 1966 to conduct a similar study of women in the Job Corps.

Didn't Know Problems

Miss Tuck's proposal was accepted by OEO even though other researchers who sought funds for the study because she frankly stated she didn't know what problems she would find.

Prior to her work with the Job Corps centers, she served in various public service capacities including chairman of the state's advisory committee on the school lunch program and chairman of the public education committee of the Lane county Mental Health association, and had directed a migrant health project under a U. S. Public Health Service grant.

As a first step in her study of men's Job Corps health needs, Miss Tuck sought to determine the reading level of the trainees so that more meaningful interviews could be conducted.

Although the average corpsman had completed ninth grade, the average reading level was from fifth to sixth grade level at the "urban" centers, and lac stated concern more health problems for information on such as sex education

As one male t

40 to Receive Completion Certificates at Tongue Pt.

Job Corps Pair Entertain Crew For Halloween

Albany Veterans' Day Observation to Abound With Politicians

Military Men Real 'Stars,' However

Tongue Point Job Center Alterations Due

ASTORIA, Ore.—Bids have been invited for providing home and family facilities in a building at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria that will be opened by the State Board of Higher Education as the office and building at Tongue Point until 2 p.m. Dec. 5.

The project involves erection of facilities for seven teaching kitchens and a sewing room, with the facilities to be provided in the northwest corner of building No. 5.

Plans can be obtained from Architects Thorshov & Kunz, 2411 N.W. Irving St., Portland, upon deposit of $25.

Wood stud and gypsum board partitions will be erected. Acoustical ceiling will be provided in the sewing room. The seven food areas will be left open. Concrete floors in kitchen areas will be finished with vinyl asbestos tile. There will be no floor covering in the sewing room.

Other work will include construction of cabinets, painting, and necessary plumbing and electrical revisions.

Seattle Journal of Commerce
Seattle, Wash.

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Hawk Reports High Rating for Job Corps Here

Successful accomplishment of the changeover of Tongue Point Job Corps center from a men's to a women's training facility has been lauded by Job Corps and OEO officials in Washington, and the center is now rated as one of the top facilities in the nation, Dr. Ray Hawk, director of economic opportunity programs for the University of Oregon, told the Tongue Point community relations council at a meeting Tuesday night at the center.

Hawk predicted that while changes in the Job Corps program may emerge from this week's consideration of the Economic Opportunity act by the House of representatives, there is little chance that a social program of its significance will be abandoned. He said it is probably that the new legislation will require a further increase in the proportion of women in Job Corps, and that there is a likelihood of increasing the Tongue Point enrollment from 650 to 850. This would reduce the center's cost per corps-woman-year, he indicated.

Also speaking at the meeting was Dr. Dorathy M. Burns, center director, who said corpswomen at the center are now being recruited from the west, southwest and deep south areas of the nation, and that a large percentage are from California. She voiced a plea for area residents in to invite corpswomen to their homes, pointing out that family contact and home atmosphere are lacking in the girls' life at the center.

Committee chairmen for the counsel were named by Chairman Deskin Bergey as follows: constitution and bylaws, Mrs. Robert Neikes; volunteers, Mrs. Bruce Pond; home services, Mrs. Helmer Lindstrom; churches, Mrs. Stuart Ley; nominations, Robert Lovell.

Election of new officers is planned for the next meeting, scheduled for December 5.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

NOV 9 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Hotel Club Hosts Home Ec Women Of Five Granges

LEWIS AND CLARK The Home Economics unit of the Neil [illegible] met [illegible] 23 members of Deep Rive[illegible] clubs of granges in five counties [illegible] Hotel Lewis and Clark [illegible] Tuesday [illegible]

A subject of [illegible] was discussed by a fashion commentator by Leo Maxeen.

A skeleton of [illegible] clothing and [illegible] lesson [illegible] was served at 12:30 Sid Thompson in charge of [illegible] Mrs. Doris [illegible] Corps at Tongue Point showed a film depicting what the Job Corps does for girls.

Mrs. Irene Graham, Tualatan [illegible] chairman, gave the [illegible] of the contests to be [illegible] coming year. Mrs. Doris [illegible] Young [illegible] Corps at Tongue Point showed a film depicting what the Job Corps does for girls.

Mrs. Irene Graham, Tualatan [illegible] chairman, gave the [illegible] of the contests to be [illegible] coming year. Mrs. Doris [illegible] Young [illegible] Corps at Tongue Point showed a film depicting what the Job Corps does for girls.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

NOV 9 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

In Parade—The Tongue Point Job Corps center drill team and marching group of drum majorettes will participate in the Veterans' day parade at Albany Saturday, center officials said. At the 1966 Albany event the Tongue Point entry was awarded the parade's grand sweepstake award.

Eugene Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir, D 48,512 - S 48,290)

NOV 16 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Berna Daggenbaugh, assistant supervisor at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria, spoke to the senior American Problems classes last Thursday. She discussed the work of the Job Corps, the rewards she has gained in her work and what she has learned working with young people.

Staff Realigned At Tongue Point

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B.

Coos Bay, Oregon
World
(Cir. D 14,393)

NOV 2 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Graduation Set

ASTORIA (AP) — Graduation exercises were scheduled for tonight for 40 girls at the Women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point near Astoria. The center switched to a women's facility in March. Current enrollment is 650.

Zonta Meetings Feature Varied Youth Activities

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

ASTORIA (AP) — Graduation exercises were scheduled tonight for 40 girls at the Women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point near Astoria. The center switched to a women's facility in March. Current enrollment is 650.

Daily Journal of Commerce
Portland, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Plans Remodeling Job

Job Corps Gets New Trainees

Corvallis, Oregon
Gazette-Times
(Cir. D 10,048)

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Girls To Graduate

ASTORIA (AP) — Graduation exercises were scheduled for tonight for 40 girls at the Women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point near Astoria. The center switched to a women's facility in March. Current enrollment is 650.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

NOV 9 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Visit Ship — Guests this week aboard the Israeli freighter Har Ramon at the port terminals were members of the seamanship class of the marine technology department of Clatsop community college. Also visiting the Har Ramon were corpswomen of Tongue Point Job Corps center.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 146,403)

NOV 15 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

51 Trainees 'Hold Jobs'

ASTORIA (UPI) — Fifty-one trainees at the Tongue Point Job Corps center received additional training in off-center assignments during October, according to placement officials at the center.

The number represents about 8 per cent of the total enrollment of 650.

Twelve of the corpswomen were at Tektronix Corp. at Portland, and the others were at hospitals in Astoria, Tillamook, Eugene, Seattle and Everett, Wash.

The off-center training provides practice of the skills learned in the corps for a two- to four-week period under actual employment conditions.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

NOV 9 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Stage Play—"The Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden," a one-act play by Thornton Wilder, will be presented by the Tongue Point drama club in a [illegible] Center Friday [illegible] Sandman, who directs the corpswomen, [illegible]

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)

NOV 9 - 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

TP Staff Wives Planning Party For December 8

Tongue Point staff wives and personnel are making plans for a gala party to be held Friday, December 8, at the Gearhart motor inn.

The evening will include a buffet dinner, games, prizes, carolling and music for dancing, provided by Dennis Thiel and his trio.

General chairman for the event is Mrs. Sydney Thompson. Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible] are [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Mrs.

40 to Receive Completion Certificates at Tongue Pt.

Albany Veterans' Day Observation to Abound With Politicians

Military Men Real 'Stars', However

Job Corps Pair Entertain Crew For Halloween

Hawk Reports High Rating for Job Corps Here

Tongue Point Job Center Alterations Due

Motel Club Hosts Home Ec Women Of Five Granges

Staff Realigned At Tongue Point

Coos Bay, Oregon World (Cir. D 14,973)

Zonta Meetings Feature Varied Youth Activities

Graduation Set

ASTORIA (AP) — Graduation exercises were scheduled for tonight for 40 girls at the Women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point near Astoria. The center switched to a women's facility in March. Current enrollment is 650.

Job Corps Plans Remodeling Job

Job Corps Gets New Trainees

Corvallis, Oregon Gazette-Times (Cir. D 10,046)

Girls To Graduate

ASTORIA (AP) — Graduation exercises were scheduled tonight for 40 girls at the Women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point near Astoria. The center switched to a women's facility in March. Current enrollment is 650.

Oregon Journal Portland, Oregon (Cir. D 146,403)

Job Corps Asks Holiday Visits

TP Staff Wives Planning Party For December 8

Tongue Point staff wives and personnel are making plans for a gala party to be held Friday, December 8, at the Gearhart Mountain Inn.

The evening will include a buffet dinner, games, prizes, caroling and music for dancing, provided by Dennis Thiel and his band.

General chairman for the event is Mrs. Sydney Thompson. Mrs. H. V. McAbee and Mrs. O. J. Gentry are co-chairmen for reservations. Mrs. John Spencer is in charge of decorations with Mrs. D. B. Pierce, assisted by Mrs. Claude Kezer and Mrs. R. Burke. Book Bazaar is Mrs. Lauren Wykert special arrangements and Mrs. Mer. Bean publicity.

51 Trainees 'Hold Jobs'

ASTORIA (UPI) — Fifty-one trainees at the Tongue Point Job Corps center received additional training in off-center assignments during October, according to placement officials at the center.

The number represents about 8 per cent of the total enrollment of 650.

Twelve of the corpswomen were at Tektronix Corp. at Portland, and the others were at hospitals in Astoria, Tillamook, Eugene, Seattle and Everett, Wash.

The off-center training provides practice of the skills learned in the corps for a two-week period under actual employment conditions.

55 Corpswomen Added at Center

Fifty-five new job corpswomen, mostly from the west and midwest, arrived Thursday at Tongue Point Job Corps center. The arrival brings total enrollment to 650.

Tongue Point officials reported that 122 corpswomen have graduated from the institution.

Daily Astorian Astoria, Oregon (Cir. D 9,500) NOV 9 - 1967

Is Parade—The Tongue Point Job Corps center drill team and marching group of drum majorettes will participate in the Veterans' day parade at Albany Saturday, center officials said. At the 1966 Albany event the Tongue Point entry was awarded the parade's grand sweepstake award.

Register-Guard Eugene, Oregon (Cir. D 48,512 - S 48,290) NOV 16 1967

Bertha Daugherbaugh, assistant supervisor at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria, spoke to the second American Problems classes last Thursday. She discussed the work of the Job Corps, the rewards she has gained in her work and what she has learned working with young people.

Daily Astorian Astoria, Oregon NOV 1 - 1967

Graduating corpswomen will be the first time wear the traditional academic caps and gowns during the center officials said. The public is invited to view the ceremony.

Trainees will complete courses in health occupations, business and clerical fields during their 24 weeks at the center. Women Job Corps song, with lyrics and music by Linda Kezer, music instructor at the center, sung by the Tongue Point Chorale. Organ prelude and recessional and procession will be played by Ann Carlson, art instructor.

This will be the fourth graduation ceremony at the center since it began training young women in February 1966.

Daily Astorian Astoria, Oregon NOV 9 - 1967

Visit Ship—Members of the crew aboard the Israeli freighter Ramon at the port terminal were members of the seaman ship class of the marine tech at the Hill Burton Job Corps center at Tongue Point.

Daily Astorian Astoria, Oregon NOV 16 - 1967

Stage Play—"The Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden," a one-act play by Thornton Wilder, will be presented by the Tongue Point Job Corps center drama group at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the center auditorium. Admission will be charged.

BRIGHT CORNER

The new Job Corps Service Center at 14th and Duane in Astoria is getting plenty of use in the evenings as Corpswomen come in to town after school and on weekends. Facilities include lounge chairs, Television, and game tables, and pop and coffee venoors. The spot is taking the place of the Courthouse Cannon as a meeting spot, and according to the staff advisor on duty, the girls willingly cooperate with the "house rules" for conduct at the center.

League Group Sees Girls In Action at Job Corps

Last week six women toured the new women's Job Corps Center at Tongue Point in connection with The Lake Oswego League of Women Voters No-nember Study of Human Resources. Mrs. Walter Avery headed the group from Lake Oswego. With her were Mrs. Hobart Cheverton, Mrs. Joseph Bernard, Mrs. Richard Kosa, Mrs. E. H. Anderson and Mrs. Dean Rak.

"Too many of us don't know very much about the Job Corps and its job in present day society," commented Mrs. Avery. "These are children who would otherwise become welfare cases, but who would not be able to contribute to a society. These girls are being trained to become productive members of our society.

Each girl who enters Tongue Point must go through careful screening. The evaluation of applications for the Job Corps at Tongue Point is done by an organization called WICKS (Women in Community Service). This is made up of women from Protestant, Catholic and Jewish churches. This commission has full responsibility for admission.

The requirements fo a girl wishing to enter are quite simple. She must be between 16 and 21, and must come from a family whose earning power is $3000 per year or less, depending on the number in the family. The families are classified as those in extreme poverty

When a girl is accepted to Tongue Point she is given her choice of many programs. They fall into five general classifications: food services, health and social services, office and clerical, classroom training, and assembly and drafting.

"In reality, approximately 1/3 needs of girls in our area and job programs for these girls was conditioning, basic homemakers. They all feel that the training was necessary and well coordinated to satisfy employment needs.

"Our public school systems could learn a lesson from the individualized training and schooling of the girls at Tongue Point," said Mrs. Mosier. "The teachers are trying to give the girls the kind of schooling we all wish our children could have. Of course, the teacher-student ratio there is five to one," added Mrs. Mosier.

One example of how they train the girls in all kinds of living, not just job training, can be told of the 20 girls who volunteered to assist the Astoria public library when they were moving recently. After the girls gave their time on one day, and this was hard work, 14 of the original 20 went back the next day, during their own free time and helped some more. This is one small point in the complete training given—community responsibility and service.

"This is a rare opportunity for these girls to have a second chance," said Mrs. Cheverton. "All of these girls have been dropouts of one type or another, and later they have realized what they missed—this is their chance to make good, and they are making the best of it," she added.

It costs $6000 to educate a girl at Tongue Point for one year. A large amount—yes! But, consider what it would cost in tax dollars if this girl was not trained and became a welfare case for years to comes—many times $6000. So the government considers it a good investment. As yet there are no definite statistics regarding the success of graduates from the women's job corps at Tongue Point, because the center has only been in operation since last March.

All of the six women who visited Tongue Point from Lake Oswego said they would like to return and they all urge other Lake Oswego residents to make the trip for a visit—they would find it rewarding, too.

Western Union Training Eyed At Tongue Point

Possibility that Tongue Point and perhaps other Job Corps centers might participate in Western Union training program was disclosed by [illegible] agent for Western Union [illegible] Astoria office.

Tongue Point, the Los Angeles Women's center were suggested by [illegible] as possibilities for the women's training program, [illegible] Lusk said today. [illegible] the center [illegible] Hearst visited the Miracle center and Kilmer [illegible] near [illegible] at Totowa, N. J. before coming to Astoria.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon

'SHE'S ALL WET'

Edith Draws Fire By Young Heckler

By TOM STIMMEL
Journal National News Service

IT CAN'T BE said that Pierce was persuasive — after

MRS. GREEN

IN THE COURSE

HE WOULD

Pierce, however, impressed in this fiscal year is already reporters — not as an avid in the bill, adopted in committee protester but as an average, clean - appearing young man

Mrs. Green's effort will be to hold other amendments in the committee version of the bill, particularly her amendment that would make states, cities or other local governments responsible for community action programs.

Clatskanie Chief
Clatskanie, Oregon
(Cir. W 1,655)

Allen's P.C.B. Ext. Legs

Corpswomen "Give Up Hamburgers"

Corpswomen at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center, who are paid $30 per month (less taxes) while receiving their training, have contributed $151.51 to others less fortunate than themselves through the Astoria UGN campaign.

Their UGN drive used the slogan "Give Up a Hamburger for UGN," and it was estimated the total represented about 600 unconsumed sandwiches!

The corpswomen must buy all personal items, such as cigarettes, cosmetics and between meal snacks, from their monthly checks, which average about $28 after taxes

News
Mount Angel, Oregon

FEATURED SPEAKERS AT MAC, NOV. 9

SR. MARY AUDREY KOPP

MARY H. HILTON

A Holy Names sister and the [illegible] director of the federal Women's Bureau will be [illegible] ers on the Mt. An[illegible] lege campus Thursday, [illegible] Sister Mary Audrey Kopp, on leave from Marylhurst College to [illegible] director of center life [illegible] the Tongue [illegible] the keynote speaker at the [illegible] nal Campus Day for Wome[illegible] ...ion "Woman of the [illegible] ...ather Mouse Nor[illegible] ...at 9:45 a.m. known professionally as Dr. Lillianna Kopp at Tongue Point, where she wears laywoman's clothing. She will be introduced [illegible] Bureau, a division of [illegible] Department of Labor, will speak at luncheon at 1 p.m.

The Campus Day for Women has been organized in cooperation with the Division of Continuing Education of the State System of Higher Education to interest mature women in continuing education [illegible] veral faculty members participate in the [illegible] gram. They will lead discussions starting at 10:45 a.m. The lecturers include Sister [illegible] pro[illegible] Loyola Schwab and [illegible] ...ussion, opportunities in ag[illegible] ...t Jan[illegible] ...minar on Ed[illegible] ...ng, and Sister Aniceta Mar[illegible] ...abe, the new theology.

Dr. Walter Sheld of the Division of Continuing Educ[illegible] ...ak on "Lifelong [illegible] ...a panel of Mt. [illegible] ...y Sister [illegible] Jones, instructor in education, will discuss the place of older students on the campus.

Sister Peter Mary Lamnert, instructor in philosophy, will discuss educational opportunities at Mt Angel College at 2 p.m. The conference will end at 3 p.m. when tours of the campus are scheduled.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. in the student lounge in the Commons. Meetings will be in the college auditorium. A $2.75 registration fee will include the

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B.

BPW of Seaside Is Host for Fall Conference

SEASIDE — The Pacific District fall conference of the Oregon Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs was held October 28 at the Seaside with the Seaside BPW club as hostess [illegible]

A tea was held in the Lewis and Clark room at the hotel from 3 to 5 p.m. The hostess was Lydia Smith of the Seaside club. The state officers attended the tea, as did several girls from the Tongue Point Job Corps center, who were guests of the Astoria club.

The conference [illegible] "A Look Tomorrow." The [illegible] Saunders Hopkins [illegible] conference at 7 p.m. with greetings. The invocation was given by Wanda Hayden of Hillsboro. Adrianne Sather, [illegible] Flag salute. The [illegible] given by Anna Hagbom, Seaside. The response was given by Elinore Schmidlin, Forest Grove.

The entertainment was presented by moderator Marge Weber and eight members of the Seaside club. The "latest" fall fashions in hats and accessories were presented by the group.

State greetings and introduction of state officers in attendance were given by Maxine Haya, Junction City, state first vice president and the state representative to the conference.

The speaker was state membership chairman Hildah Highbee, Beaverton. Mrs. Highbee presented a very [illegible] and thought - provoking [illegible] "Reaching Out [illegible]

Mabel Ensley [illegible] gave the roll call [illegible] with a total attendance reported of 110. Six of the seven clubs of the Pacific district gave presidents reports of their activities.

The collect was led by Geneva Shadley, St. Helens.

The decorations were brightly colored fall leaves and foliage.

Nina Jackson of Seaside was the conference chairman.

Influential Mrs. Green

Rep Edith Green is proving to be one of the powers in the Congress. Especially in matters coming before the Committee on Labor and Education. She ranks second in the committee, Rep Carl Perkins, but as is so often the case with committee action

On the education bills she succeeded, with support from Republicans, in upgrading state departments of education in the programs of educational aid. She insisted that the federal government should be the junior partner in education, giving to state and local governments

On the anti-poverty legislation an amendment offered by Mrs. Green was approved which requires that local units of government receive community action money only with the approval of the governing body. As originally written, Representatives sought to split up the program. Mrs. Green opposed the effort and prevailed. She tried also to have a termination or account of services given migrants in addition to the Job Corps.

Mrs. Green is married ... possesses the reckless with in the House as the administration has learned

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpswomen at Tongue Point home and family life class watch as one of them scrapes old paint from a table being refinished in the center's woodworking shop. The project is part of a program designed the girls to refurbish repairable items for home use.

The end table and bookcase with which these two Tongue Point corpswomen are posing were repaired and refinished in the center's home and family life classes, and are in use in the girls' dormitory rooms. The center is seeking contributions of used materials for the project.

Girls Refinish Household Items In Center Class

Corpswomen at Tongue Point Job Corps center are learning to repair and refurbish used furniture, lamps, rugs and other items in a consumer education program, and are in need of repairable materials for their class work, according to Mrs Nettie Miller, instructor in home and family life.

Purpose of the instruction, Mrs Miller said, is to teach the girls that comfortable and attractive home furnishings may be obtained at low cost by exercising their own abilities and ingenuity. Presently the finished items are being used in the girls' dormitory rooms at the center.

Furniture is repaired, refinished and even modified or modernized in the center's woodworking shop, ... sewing classes mend and restyle rugs, drapes and lamps.

Small furniture pieces such as tables, end tables, chairs, shelves, bookcases, throw rugs, drapes and lamps, with or without shades, are needed for the projects. Astorians who may wish to contribute materials are asked to call Mrs. Miller to arrange for pick-up, or the items may be left at the center's main gate.

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Portland
San Francisco Los Angeles
Univ. of Ore. Emerald
Eugene, Oregon
NOV 2 1 1967

Tongue Point Sets Table at EMU

University students may have a chance to become involved in the Tongue Point Job Corps Center for women at Astoria.

A table will be set up on the EMU terrace today, and information about the center will be available. Interested students may sign up to participate in the exchange program.

The program is operated by the University under a contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity. All programs will be planned ... with the University and center participants.

It is anticipated that the corpswomen will make visitations to the campus in addition to students in the program will also be ... with the student government organization in planning programs.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

McAbee to Help Conduct Family Life Institute

Dr. Harold V. McAbee of the ... director of Tongue Point Job Corps ... will head the ... family life institute ... College Counselors ... Monday through ... Portland ... Dr. McAbee ... Tongue Point ... Dr. McAbee

Caps, Gowns Worn by Corpswomen Graduates

Pale blue academic caps and gowns were worn for the first time by graduation graduating from Tongue Point Job Corps center at ceremonies last week. Principal speaker was Dr Lillana Kopp, director of center life, shown at the rostrum. Seated at left are Richard Price, supervisor of communication skills, who presided, and H. A. (Obie) O'Bryant, who represented the community. Thirty-nine trainees received course completion certificates, and nine were given GED certificates, the equivalent of high school diplomas.

Corpswomen Contribute to UGN

Tongue Point Job Corps center trainee Billie Woods presents to H. A. (Obie) O'Bryant, chairman of the Clatsop county UGN campaign, a "Hippy Hamburger" representing the $151 collected by the corpswomen for UGN in a "Give Up a Hamburger" drive. Presentation was made at the recent graduation ceremony at Tongue Point, where O'Bryant was a speaker.

Third year, Ronald Christensen, Mike Coons, Jon Hartill, Steve Hendrickson, Patty Laird, Jeanne Lake, Rebecca Leback, Rebecca Parker, Jonathan Riekkola, Mike Smith and Carolyn Stoner.

Fourth year, Terry Christensen, Vickie Coons, Diane Cordiner, Candy Fitzgerald, Lou Ann Henry, Katherine Kahl, Arlene Larson, Bonnie Link, Shelley Magnuson, Gail Manners, Kenneth Nelson, Ruth Ann Oakley, Marilyn Olsen, Benjie Riekkola, David Riekkola and Sue Dean; seventh year, Elizabeth Laird, eighth year, Kathleen O'Connor, Karl Magnuson, Mark Magnuson and Judy Lake; ninth year, Sterling Ficken, Randy Hartill and Helen Burkhart.

Karl Magnuson was awarded a trophy for the champion boy demonstrator in the state, which is provided by Meier and Frank company. Magnuson is one of two in the county and 27 in the state of Oregon who will fly to Chicago November 24 to attend the National 4-H Club congress, to be held there the last week in November. His trip to Chicago is also sponsored by Meier and Frank. Magnuson qualified for the trip on winning his demonstration award.

Garden clubs led by Mrs. Clifford Magnuson and Mrs. Florence Link, Mrs. Eugene Tuveng and Mrs. Howard Knapp, Mrs. Glenn Kamm and Mrs. Everett Larson, Mrs. Betty Manners, Mr. Howard Knapp, Mrs. Florence Link, John Pickett, Don Hansen, Mr. Eugene Tuveng, Mr. Glenn Kahl, Mrs. Velma Christensen, Mrs. Hiram Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Magnuson, Archie Riekkola, Mrs. Ethel Gustafson, Mrs. Ron Teague, Mrs. Anna May Christensen, Mrs. Lawrence Linsday, Mrs. Harry Olson, Gilvert Marxen, Mrs. Allen Larson and Miss Kathy Tikka.

A movie film "Islands of the Sea" was presented after the conclusion of the awards. The film showed the animal and bird life of the islands otherwise uninhabited in the Pacific ocean. This was supplied as well as the ice cream twists which were given to all those attending by the First National bank.

Awards, Honors Are Presented At 4-H Meeting

LEWIS AND CLARK — Four-H members of the Lewis and Clark, Youngs River and Jeffers Gardens area were honored at Achievement Night Friday at the Lewis and Clark school gymnasium. Mrs. Ben Lake, community chairman, was in charge of the program.

Syd Thompson, of community relations of the Tongue Point Job Corps center presented a film and lecture entitled "Color Me Human." The film depicts the work the personnel is accomplishing with the girls at Tongue Point. Thompson brought out that if these girls had had the advantages that 4-H offers they would not have been in need of Job Corps training.

Erling Orwick, of First National bank, presented awards in behalf of the bank to the following: First year - Kathy Knapp, Darlene Andrews, Randy Blair, Ronny Carr, Debbie Cheuvront, Joanne Hansen, Robin Duncan, Wandy Duncan, Traci Ficken, Joni Fudge, Michael Graham, Frank Hall, Christie Harrtill, Kelly Ann Helligso, Celeste Holman, Greta Joohansen, Ron Johansen, Randy Killion, Chris Knapp, Debbie Kottre, Sharon Kujala, Donald Land, Donald Leach, JoAnne Long, Georgia Mason, Pam Mason, Philip Maycumber, Virginia Ann Miller, Julie Nelson, Kenneth Nesk, Todd Olsen, Darcy Lred, Dawn Venable, Lori Wheeler, Pam Wikstrom, Nancy Wolf, Carrie Tellosa, Terry Sanford, Brent Seppa, Cynthia Ann Smith, Jeryanne Starr, Philip Summers and Ruth Cutlip.

Second year, Mike Blair, Chris Brandon, Janet Burnell, Linda Carlson, Marlyce Christensen, Pam Downes, Dawn Fletcher, Michael Hasnes, Terry Hertz, Susan Karpela, Jody Larsen, Julie Leonhardt, Janine McBride, Harold Bill Maycumber, Glenn Monsong, Max Morning, John Olson, Edwin Olsen, Steve Olson, Terry Parnell, Jeff Riekkola, Deidre Teel, Linda Venable, Angela Vogt, Judy Tellosa, Jeanne Thompson, Kelly Smith, Kimberly Smith and Harry Coons.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Finnish Lodge Plans Program Noting 81st Year

A program celebrating the 81st anniversary of the Astoria Finnish Brotherhood lodge will be held Saturday at 7 p.m. at Sonom hall. The Rev. John Havarinen, pastor of the Naselle Congregational church, will be speaker and 50-year gold membership pins will be presented to 11 members of the lodge. The coffee hour will be followed by a dance.

The program will open with singing of "America" by the audience, with Mrs. Stanley Swanson as accompanist. Mrs. Edwin Rogers will bring the invocation.

A new vocal group, the Hawaiian Chorus from Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center, consisting of eight girls in native costume, will present several numbers. Also on the program will be a vocal solo by Dr. John Hickman, accompanied by Mrs. Swanson; a poem by Arvid Paavola; vocal solo by Mrs Elno Johnson, accompanied by Mrs. Swanson, instrumental numbers by the Astoria high school brass choir and selections by the Aberdeen lodge Ladies Chorus.

Finnish Brotherhood grand lodge vice president Rudolph Laulainen, of Longview will bring a tribute to the following 50-year members: Frank O. Berg, Walnut Creek, Calif.; John Hakala, Portland; Mandi Hietala Hansen, John V. Klivisto, Adolf W. Koski, John Kuivala, John William Lamppa and Phoebe Rohola, all of Astoria; Sulo Rinne, Seaside; Senja Smith, San Francisco and Ruka Soderman, Arcata, Calif.

During the coffee hour, sandwiches, cakes and Finnish pastries will be served. The Santtil orchestra of Svensen will play for the dance. Lodge secretary William Seeborg will serve as master of ceremonies.

President Edwin Niska of the Astoria lodge said the public is invited to the celebration for which admission is free.

Klamath Falls, Oregon
Herald & News
(Cir. D 14205)
(Cir. S 14286)

NOV 9 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

KF Girl Ends Electronics Training Class

Earlene Love, 615 Commercial, Klamath Falls, has completed a course in electronics assembly at Tongue Point Job Corps center at Astoria, and now is receiving on-the-job training at San Diego, Calif., under the JC-YW program.

Although she is still enrolled in Job Corps, she will spend two to six months putting into practice under actual employment conditions the job skills she has learned. At the end of her off-center training period she will either return to Tongue Point for more job training or be graduated, depending on the evaluation of performance given by her practice "employer."

Allen's
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
Established 1888
PORTLAND
Seattle
San Francisco Los Angeles
Univ. of Ore. Emerald
Eugene, Oregon

NOV 21 1967

School Accredits Job Corps Plan

The University School of Education is offering a program for credit at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria.

Called the Tongue Point Exchange Program, this operation Citizenship venture offers students a chance to become acquainted with Job Corps and Tongue Point women on a one-to-one basis.

Tongue Point is operated by the University under a contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity. Oldest Job Corps center in the nation in terms of continuous operation, the center was changed from a men's to a women's facility in 1967.

It is anticipated that the students in the Tongue Point program will work closely with the corpswomen's student government organization in planning joint programs.

All programs will be planned jointly between University and center participants. It is anticipated that the corpswomen will make visitations to the campus from time to time and that students will visit Tongue Point for special functions.

In order to make more students aware of Tongue Point and the exchange program, a table will be set up on the EMU terrace Wednesday.

Information about the center will be available and interested students may sign up to participate in the exchange program.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)

NOV 21 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

TP Life Director To Speak at Lewis-Clark PTA

DR LILLANA KOPP

LEWIS AND CLARK — A Happy Hour or Hippy Hazard" will be the topic of a lecture by Dr Lillana Kopp, director of Center Life at Tongue Point Corps center at the Lewis and Clark district PTA Monday night November 20, at the band room at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Kopp gave the keynote address on the campus Day for women of Clatsop college October 10. She was associate professor of sociology at Marylhurst college before coming to Tongue Point. She received her bachelor's degree at Marylhurst, master's degrees in sociology and anthropology from Seattle university and St. Louis university doctor's degrees in sociology and anthropology from St. Louis university.

Miss Kopp has worked at the Christie Home for Girls in Portland and is presently involved in Interracial Relations at Loyola University in Chicago with the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice.

She is a lecturer and author and previously has taught in the elementary schools in Oregon, in St. Louis University, Webster college and Marylhurst. In her religious order she is Sister Mary Audrey but has received a special dispensation to resume her baptismal name and lay name her nun hood when she plans joining the present

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)

NOV 21 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Two Promoted At Tongue Point

Two promotions on the staff of Tongue Point Job Corps center have been announced by Dr. Dorothy Burns, director. Paul Haas, formerly assistant librarian, has been named supervisor of instructional media, succeeding Stafford Thomas, who has become coordinator for the Office of Economic Opportunity at University of Oregon. Cecil Yandell, general education instructor, has been made supervisor of [illegible]

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)

NOV 21 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees to Get Holiday Friday

Corpswomen at Tongue Point will not attend classes Friday because the day is a holiday for part of the staff, center officials announced. A group of 84 [illegible] will [illegible] Friday [illegible] Thanksgiving [illegible] and [illegible] groups will go to [illegible] Job Corps center for a football awards dinner and dance.

Saturday there will be [illegible] at the center with [illegible] by Tongue Point [illegible] and [illegible] invited.

Times-Herald
Burns, Oregon
(Cir. W 2,573)

NOV 16 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

News from Malheur Job Corps Center

A new band composed of students at Malheur Job Corps Center made its first appearance in Harney County Friday evening at a party given by Safeway Store. They had previously made appearances at [illegible]

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Church Services, Turkey Dinners To Mark Holiday

Brisk sales of turkeys and other Thanksgiving feast goodies in the past few days unheralded a boomlet observance of the day in the canned Empire Thursday.

Formal observances is scheduled in seven local churches.

Stores and other business will be closed Thursday. The Daily Astorian will not publish an edition that day.

Tongue Point Job Corps center reported it has received flood of invitations for corpswomen to receive dinner with local families than it can handle Dr. Dorothy Burns, director expressed deep appreciation to the community for its response to the center's appeal to invite girls to dinner.

Public worships and nearly all local businesses will be open again Friday, however, and will have a holiday from this afternoon until Monday morning.

Schedule of church services for Thursday follows:

The annual Union Thanksgiving service sponsored by the Astoria Ministerial association, will be held this year at the First Presbyterian church Thursday at 10:30 a.m. The Rev. Virgil Savage of the Tongue Point Job Corps will be speaker. Special music will be furnished by the Presbyterian choir under direction of Mrs. Kirk Beninger and Mrs. A. A. Larson. First Presbyterian church organist, will be at the organ. The offering will go to the ministerial association for its work among transients in the community.

This service will last one hour and the public is invited.

First Lutheran church will have a special Thanksgiving day service Thursday at 10 a.m. The senior choir will sing for this service. Sunday at 6:30 p.m. there will be an advent workshop for the family to be held at the church. Displays and activities preparing for the Advent season will be presented. All members of the congregation are invited.

(Continued on Page 6)

Church Services, Turkey Dinners To Mark Holiday

(Continued from Page 1)

Thanksgiving day worship services at Trinity and Zion Lutheran congregations will be held at Trinity Lutheran church at 10 a.m. Members of both congregations as well as other members of the community are invited. Speaker for the morning will be Chaplain Orrton R. Pond. Chaplain Pond recently returned as chief of chaplains at the VA hospital in Montrose, N.Y. Prior to that he was chief of chaplains for the VA on the Pacific coast during World War II. He was a division chaplain with the 41st Infantry and the 1st Cavalry. Chaplain and Mrs. Pond have been living in the San Francisco Bay area and are visiting their son and his family, the Rev. Bruce E. Pond of Trinity on the holidays.

First church of Christ Scientist Astoria will hold a Thanksgiving service open to the community in the church edifice at 632 Eleventh at 11 a.m. The public is invited.

This service is traditional in Christian Science churches throughout most of the world. Branch churches in South America, Europe, Asia and the Near East will observe the American Thanksgiving day November 23.

The congregation will join in hymns as organized by Leon Erickson organist. Helen Fowler, first reader, and Roy C. Cole, second reader, will conduct the service.

In accordance with long-standing practice no collection will be taken at this special service.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Larson Studying At Hawaii School

HONOLULU (Hawaii)—George D. Larson, a former teacher with the Job Corps in Astoria, has started postgraduate work at the East-West center, a federal educational project in cooperation with the University of Hawaii, leading to a master's degree in politics.

Larson graduated from University of Oregon with a bachelor degree in history in 1961.

The East-West center provides an intensive program for 600 all-resident graduate students, American and Asian students covering in the ranging from 18 to 24 months. All of the American scholarships are awarded for postgraduate study leading to a master's degree and usually include a total trip to the Asian or Pacific area.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpswomen of Month

Named Corpswoman of the Month at Tongue Point Job Corps Center because of superior rating in attendance, class performance, contributions to the center leadership and cooperation were these trainees (standing, from left), Sarah Dean, Sumter, S.C.; Anna Street, Las Vegas, Nev.; Alice Cubanks, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; (seated) Ernestine Loman, Hartford, Ala., and Virginia Quintana, Mendota, Calif.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

WSCS Members Are Guests at Job Corps Center

The meeting of the Astoria WSCS of the Methodist church had an unusual meeting for the November session. Twenty-three members met at the church and then went to Tongue Point to have dinner with the girls of the Job Corps. After dinner they saw a style show presented by some of the girls, after which members reconvened at the church for a business session and program.

The bazaar, which is put on by the WSCS and the GF club of the church will be held December 6 at the church, opening at 10 a.m., with a lunch served starting at 11 a.m. Members were told to have articles brought to the circle meeting so that they be priced, and those to be put on display in the power company window may be made ready.

Mrs. Robert Gauthier reported on circle matters in the process of organizing a morning circle. It was reported that they met in the church and that those attending were busy making decorations to be used and sold at the bazaar.

Mrs. Jenia Jenkins had charge of the program and devotions. The program was a thorough discussion of what the women had observed and their reactions of the project at Tongue Point.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Downtown Center To Be Open to Senior Citizens

The Tongue Point Job Corps downtown center, opened in October as a bus waiting room and recreation center for corpswomen [illegible] center, is now open to the public as a recreation center for Astoria "senior citizens," according to Dr. Dorothy M. Burns, center director.

Objective is to provide a training situation for the center's corpswoman recreation aide program, as well as to provide a needed facility for older residents, Dr. Burns said. About 20 trainees will work short shifts as hostesses and aides at the center, under supervision of local women volunteers, directed by Mrs. R. Stuart Lay, president of Church Women United and church committee chairman of the Tongue Point Community Relations Council.

Currently Tongue Point trainees change the downtown center evening, Wednesday through Saturdays and 1 to 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Under the new plan the facility will be open for public use without charge from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, beginning December 4, except Wednesdays.

"We expect that this project will afford the corpswomen an opportunity to become more deeply involved in the community," Dr. Burns said, "and it is part of the Job Corps goal to [illegible] the girls in meaningful community projects. We believe this program will provide a needed community service and at the same time offer a training situation for corpswomen in the recreation aide field. Other [illegible] members of the community are [illegible] available."

Miss [illegible] Youth [illegible] director of Tongue Point Job Corps, is in charge of the recreation training program at the downtown center for corpswomen and the adult volunteers.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Local Girl Ends Job Corps Course

Pamela Kolski, daughter of John Kolski, 934 South Main Street, Independence, has completed a course in electronics assembly at Tongue Point Job Corps center and is receiving on-the-job training at San Diego, California under the JC-YW program.

Although she is still enrolled in Job Corps, she will spend two to six months putting into practice under actual employment conditions the job skills she has learned. At the end of her off-center training period she will either return to Tongue Point for more job training or be graduated, depending on the evaluation of performance given by practice "employer".

YWCAs in major cities throughout the nation are participating in the JC-YW program under a contract with the federal Office of Economic Opportunity. Corpswomen selected for the training are provided with counseling, housing and job training opportunities by the YWCA to which they are assigned, but receive regular Job Corps pay and allotments from the Job Corps centers.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

League of Voters To Be Guests of Job Corps Center

A luncheon at Tongue Point Job Corps center will be the special feature of the League of Women Voters December meeting, the Wednesday.

A continuation of their study topic on human resources League members will meet at Tongue Point to see for themselves some of the accomplishments of the Job Corps program. Dr. Liliana Kopp, [illegible] at Tongue Point will speak to the group and present the program [illegible] Mr. Human.

Arrangements for the program were made by Mrs. Harry Moore, human resources chairman for the League in cooperation with Sydney Thompson administrative assistant at the Tongue Point Job Corps center.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 28 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

House Endorses Full Pay Funds For OEO, AID

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The House today approved, 368 to 13, legislation to provide full pay for the government's antipoverty and foreign aid workers, on half status because of congressional sparring over their programs.

The leaders of the House Appropriations Committee, Chairman George Mahon, D-Tex., and the ranking GOP member, Rep. Frank Bow, R-O., joined in sponsoring a resolution to guarantee full paychecks for Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) and Agency for International Development (AID) employees through this week.

AID had notified its 9,000 employes they would get only one week's pay for two weeks' work late today or early

Employees at Tongue Point Job Corps Center will not go on half pay status. Officials there said the University of Oregon, which operates the center on a contract basis, has enough money paid on its contract for the current fiscal year to take care of salaries and other expenses until February. By that time, center officials hope, the congressional deadlock will have been resolved.

Wednesday. The same applied to 2,991 OEO workers.

Money to pay the workers has run out because Congress has failed to pass resolutions carrying interim funds while new authorizations to keep the agencies in business are being worked out.

House-Senate conferees, meantime, resumed the search for compromise on a bill to authorize the war on poverty for another two years. Some participants predicted success as early as Thursday, but others said they doubted that.

The two biggest issues confronting the negotiators are money and how much control local governments should be given over federal antipoverty projects.

The Senate approved a $2.25 billion authorization for the first year and $2.4 billion for the second, which starts next July 1. The House killed the second-year authority and cut President Johnson's first-year request for $2.06 billion to $1.6 billion.

The authorization only sets a ceiling on antipoverty spending. Separate legislation must be approved actually providing the money.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 24 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Pianist Dates Free Concert At Astoria High

COLEMAN BLUMFIELD

The concert to be presented by pianist Coleman Blumfield at Astoria high school auditorium Tuesday night, November 28, will be part of a nation-wide tour including almost 45 appearances at major colleges, universities and Job Corps centers, according to officials at Tongue Point Job Corps center, which is sponsoring the free performance for the Astoria area.

While Blumfield's expenses are paid by the Office of Economic Opportunity, all his concerts are donated.

The pianist is a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, and was a student of Vladimir Horowitz. He has performed as soloist with the Detroit, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Washington, Buffalo, Denver, Tampa and Savannah symphony orchestras.

Blumfield's program here will include selections by Chopin, Prokofieff, Mendelssohn and Bach-Busoni.

Tongue Point spokesmen stressed that there will be no charge for the concert which will begin at 8 p.m.

Daily Journal of Commerce
Portland, Oregon

Alterations Bid At Tongue Point

[illegible] Construction Co. of Portland was awarded a contract for $[illegible] for alterations and remodeling of [illegible] facilities at the Tongue Point Job Corps center, Clatsop county.

The Portland firm submitted a basic bid of $21,500 and other bids on deletion of certain items on the schedule. The alternates deleted the sewing room storage area; $660 on Alternate B, omission of some wall cabinets in the sewing room; and $818 on Alternate C, omission of wall cabinets in the kitchen area.

Bids were received by the State Board of Higher Education. Other bidders were Albert Mittel, Astoria, $22,300 basic less $326, $620 and $750 on the alternates, and Ben O. Hayes, Warrenton, $24,214 basic less $325, $395 and $601 on the alternates.

Seven teaching kitchens and a sewing room are to be provided in the northwest corner of the building. Plans were prepared by Pinkham & Kinne, Portland architects.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Program Slated On Job Corps At Library Here

An hour-long color slide presentation, "Color Me Human," will be presented in the Flag room of the Astor library Wednesday in cooperation with the Women's Job Corps center at Tongue Point, according to Librarian Bruce Berney. The public program will be given at no charge as a library service to provide information to local residents on interesting and important activities in the community, Berney said.

Scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m., the presentation includes information and statistics on trainees at the center, vocational programs, the basic and general education courses, center life program and other items. A question-and-answer period will be included.

Berney said the program will be narrated by Dr. Liliana Kopp, director of center life at Tongue Point.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 23 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

68 New Trainees

Sixty-eight new trainees arrived at Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center Wednesday. Most are from the western state, half from the south. Enrollment at the center now totals 697, officials there reported.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

NOV 23 1967

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees Assist Center Security

Since most women Job Corps centers in the U.S. located in leased hotels or other downtown buildings, Tongue Point is believed to be the only center which maintains a security motor patrol of its own.

Trained and supervised by the adult Tongue Point security guards, under direction of Security Supervisor Phillip Averill, the corpsman patrol makes periodic checks of the extensive Tongue Point area in the center's security vehicles during the evenings, and assists the staff guards in main gate and other security duties.

About 15 corpswomen make up the personnel of the trainee group. They meet regularly for classes at which they are instructed in their duties and in the principles of security work.

Averill pointed out that while other women's centers have pedestrian corpswoman patrols, at Tongue Point the patrol members have passed the federal driving license test and are authorized to use the government vehicles with which the center is provided. They are also trained in the use of the vehicles' two-way radio equipment, he said.

"Without the assistance of our efficient corpswoman patrol we would find it difficult to provide proper guard and security service [illegible] only our

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

In Tournament — Eight men's Job Corps Centers in Oregon and Washington will participate in a basketball tournament Saturday and Sunday at the Tongue Point field house, the women's center said Friday. Competing will be teams from Timberlake, Tillamook, Angell, Wold Creek, Ft. Vannoy and Simcoe men's centers.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon

Allen's P.C.B.

Center Planned

ASTORIA (Special) — Tongue Point Job Corps center's downtown waiting room and recreation spot will be made available as a rest and recreation center for older citizens of the community during daytime hours four days a week, center officials said Friday.

It will be open for public use from 10 to 4 each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Appear on TV — The Tongue Point Job Corps Center chorus, directed by Claude Kezer, center music instructor, will appear on the "Telescope" program on KGW-TV, Channel 8, Monday at 8:30 p.m. The chorus will sing an original composition, "We Are the Women of the Job Corps," written by Kezer, and one or two encore numbers, according to [illegible] information department, who arranged the appearance.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Concert Artist To Spend Time at Center, College

Coleman Blumfield pianist who will present a free public concert in the Astoria high school auditorium at 8 p.m. Tuesday, will spend all of Tuesday [illegible] of Wednesday with corpswomen classes at Tongue Point Job Corps center.

Blumfield whose specialty is working with young people in encouraging appreciation of music and the arts, also spoke at a Tongue Point student assembly Tuesday afternoon.

Wednesday at 4 p.m. he will present a short concert at Clatsop Community college.

For Tuesday night's free concert sponsored by the Job Corps as a community service for the Astoria area, Blumfield will play selections by Chopin, Prokofieff, Mendelssohn and Back-Busoni.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
Cir. D 6943

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Cook Book Sale By Corpswomen To Help YMCA

The Astoria Business and Professional Women's club is sponsored by corpswomen of Tongue Point center at conducting a [illegible] to help finance the YMCA World Service program.

The corpswomen will be selling the book, [illegible] and Salads," at [illegible] under supervision of Mrs. [illegible] Vocational instructor [illegible] at the Job Corps center. [illegible] selected and organized [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Mrs.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
NOV 27 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpswomen Learn Swimming at Y

About 100 Job Corps trainees are taking swim instruction at the YMCA. Photo shows Astoria Y instructor Mrs. Otto Browning teaching prone float to Louella Zeno, who floats in rope lane visible in photo. In front are Mrs. Browning (white cap) and Miss Zeno. From left rear are Lucy Moore, Hazel Brooks, Actovia Kulliaule, Shirley Hopkins.

Santa Rosa, California
Press-Democrat
(Cir. D. 44,290 - S. 46,821)
DEC 5 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corpswomen To Head Home

ASTORIA (Special) — Tongue Point Job Corps reported 356 of the 474 Corpswomen there would begin trips home for Christmas Friday and would continue departing until Tuesday. They will return between Jan. 3 and 8.

Job Corps officials said travel was arranged to provide minimum interference with other holiday travel.

Classes will continue for the approximately 400 who will spend the holidays at the center.

Of those going home, 205 are entitled to government paid transportation because they have been at the center at least six months. The other 151 are paying their own way.

Santa Rosa, California
Press-Democrat
(Cir. D. 44,290 - S. 46,821)
DEC 5 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

County Women Job Corps Grads

Special to The Press Democrat

ASTORIA, Ore. — Two Sonoma County women are scheduled to graduate soon from the Tongue Point Jobs Corps Center in Astoria, Ore.

Theresa Brooks, 9640 Old Redwood Highway, Windsor, is receiving on-the-job training at Merri-Crest Convalescent Hospital in Everett, Wash.

Miss Brooks was transferred to the hospital after completing a course in nurse-aid training at Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Astoria, Ore.

Also from Sonoma County, Linda Mambretti, Cotati, has completed a course in food services and is engaged in further training at Seattle, under a Job Corps - Young Women's Christian Association project.

Although still enrolled in the Job Corps, she will spend two to six months practicing the skills she has learned, prior to graduation at the Tongue Point center.

Oregon Journal
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D. [illegible])
DEC 13 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

ProgramSlated On Child Care

ASTORIA — A child care program will be developed at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, Director Dorothy Burns told the center's Community Relations Council.

The program, to train the girls as child care aides and to care for their own future families, will be organized when new facilities are completed for home and family life classes.

Dr. Burns said about 250 of the approximately 650 corpswomen will be eligible for Christmas home leave traveling between Dec. 15-19 and returning between Jan. 5-8.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

38 Corpswome Get Certificates

Thirty-eight corpswomen will receive course completion certificates at a formal graduation ceremony Tuesday at Tongue Point Job Corps center, and five others will be awarded GED certificates, equivalent to high school diplomas.

The 37-piece St. Mary's high school band from Portland, directed by Sister Frances Jean, will play Christmas selections, and the Tongue Point chorus will sing. The public is invited to attend the ceremony, beginning at 3:30 p.m.

Principal speaker will be Mrs. William Catron, art department instructor. Her topic will be "Freedom—Our Responsibility." Center Director Dorothy Burns will preside, and the completion certificates will be presented by Adolph Diebel, drafting; Glynn Price, food services; Kay Fielding, business and clerical; Carl Nemeth, electronics assembly, and Glenna Hall, health occupations.

Student speaker will be Maureen Astroomo. Members of the Civil Air Patrol squadron will present the colors.

Bellingham, Wash.
Herald
(Circ. D. 20,470 - S. 21,315)
NOV 21 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Katherine Haynes Gets Job Training

Miss Katherine Haynes, daughter of E. B. Haynes of Custer, is receiving on-the-job training at Johnston Associates, Inc., Lynnwood, after completing a course in drafting at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, Astoria, Ore.

The off - center training provides practice of skills learned in the Job Corps, for a two-to-four week period under actual employment conditions, prior to graduation from the center.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D 260,582 - S 384,694)
NOV 28 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

JOB CORPSMAN KILLED

ASTORIA (Special) — James Bagley, former Tongue Point Job Corps trainee from West Virginia, has been killed in action in Vietnam, Tongue Point Center officials have been advised. He is the first former member of the men's Job Corps Center to die in Vietnam.

Headlight-Herald
Tillamook, Oregon
Cir W 3,320)
NOV 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

To the Editor —

On behalf of the staff at Tongue Point Job Corps Center, I wish to express our gratitude to the community of Tillamook for the magnificent way they treated our ten Nursing Aide students during their recent stay there. To Mrs. Alice Williamson and her nursing staff for helping and supervising our girls we extend special praise, and to Mr. Boyd Hartman, the hospital administrator, and his fine board of directors; to the Rev. Lester Braddock, president of the Ministerial Association, who enlisted the different families, the Max Honeys, the Rev. and Mrs. White, Mrs. Bruce Hendricks, the Delbert Walpoles, and Dr. and Mrs. Kaliher, our heartfelt thanks.

When Mrs. Williamson and Mr. Hartman assured me of how well the girls had performed, I asked for criticism and they assured me they had none. I questioned the secret of their high performance and Mr. Hartman's answer was, "We just loved everyone of them."

Perahps this is the ingedient that has been too often lacking in their lives. Since their return, I've been amazed at how much more attractive, vivacious and interesting these girls appear. It can be explained, perhaps, by the fact that they responded to the experience of being a part of a wonderful family for one month's time; an experience which seems to have made a difference in their lives already.

Our appreciation goes to the people in Tillamook for making this experience possible.

Mrs. Irma A. Wood
Supervisor, Health Occupations
Tongue Point Job Corps Center

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 8 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS ARE LUNCHEON GUESTS

Forty members of the Astoria-Clatsop County League of Women Voters attended a luncheon at Tongue Point Job Corps center Wednesday. The food was served by members of the center's food service classes, under supervision of Rosalind Vogt, food services instructor. Dr. Lillamas Kopp, associate director of Center Life, spoke and showed color slides of center activities. Mrs. Darrell Demery, League president, presided.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

356 Corpswomen To Go Home For Christmas

There are now 747 corpswomen enrolled at Tongue Point Center and 356 of them will go home for Christmas, Job Corps officials reported Thursday. They will go home during the period from Friday of this week until next Tuesday, and will return during the period January 5-8. Travel schedules were arranged to provide minimum interference with other holiday travel, such as service men coming home on Christmas leave.

Of those going home, 205 are entitled to government - paid transport after being six months at the center. The other 151 are paying their own fare, Job Corps officials said.

For the 400 who will remain through the holidays, classes will continue except for holidays on December 25 and January 1.

Center enrollment climbed to 747 this week when 89 new corpswomen arrived, all from either the west coast or the middle west.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
NOV 17 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Bruce Fraser (right), driver training instructor at Tongue Point Job Corps center, turns over corporate gift of $120 from Philco-Ford corporation, sub-contractor at at the center, to Sydney Thompson, chairman of the public employees division of Clatsop county UGN drive. Philco-Ford employees at the center recorded 100 per cent participation in individual contributions.

Headlight-Herald
Tillamook, Oregon
Cir. W 3,320)
NOV 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Hospital To Continue Job Corps Training

The board of directors of the Tillamook County General hospital Tuesday decided to continue their policy of helping to train girls from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center. Recently ten of the girls completed a four-week training course at the hospital and it was reported at the Tuesday meeting that several of the girls have already gotten jobs as a result of their training.

Directors instructed hospital administrator Boyd Hartman to make necessary arrangements for another group to come here probably in January or February. They live with Tillamook residents during their stay here.

The board also expressed its thanks to the Headlight-Herald and KTIL for the publicity given their original project.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 18 - 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps to Have Child Care Program

Tongue Point Job Corps Center Director Dorothy Burns told the center's Community Relations Council Tuesday night the center plans to develop a child care program when new facilities are completed for the corpswomen's home and family life classes. She said the purpose is to train the girls as child care aides as well as teach them to care for their own future families.

Dr. Burns said about 250 of the approximately 650 corpswomen will be eligible for Christmas home leave, with about 350 remaining at the center for the holidays. Those going home will travel between December 15 and 19, to leave transportation facilities free for service and other holiday travel immediately before Christmas. They will return to th center between January 5 and January 8.

David Jordan, center business manager, discussed the University of Oregon's contracts with the federal Office of Economic Opportunity and with Philco-Ford for operation of the center.

Alice Eubanks, director of the student government, and Kathy Ingalls, chairman of the corps women's community relations committee, reported on corps-women activities.

The council elected new officers. Bill Van Dusen is president; Mrs. Robert Moore, treasurer, and Dan Donham, secretary. Permanent committee chairmen named were Mrs. Stuart Lay, church; Mrs. Paul Baldwin, nominating; Mrs. Brue Pond, volunteer aid, and Mrs. Heimer Lindstrom, home visitations. Mrs. Maurice Hendrickson, Mrs. Pond and Mrs. Baldwin were elected to the executive committee, which also includes the four officers.

A new constitution and by-laws were adopted.

BILL VAN DUSEN

Longview, Wash.
News
(Cir. D. 19,983)
DEC 6 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Poverty Program Tightened

IT TOOK WEEKS and weeks for Congress to reach agreement on the war on poverty programs. Why? There are several reasons. For one thing the record of success so far hasn't been very good. No one can prove that poverty has been reduced much, if any, as a result of the spending of massive amounts of tax money.

Also it is primarily a big city program. Congressmen who don't have big cities in their districts understandably aren't avidly interested in it. The "war's" image has suffered due to some bad management and apparent wasteful use of funds. When a citizen reads, for example, that it costs $17,000 a year to maintain a girl in a job training center, such as Tongue Point in Astoria, he is likely to conclude that the bureaucrats don't know what they are doing.

Hundreds of amendments were proposed in both the House and Senate by members who had a pet gripe against the program. Many were adopted. One placed a limit on "upper-grade" poverty workers (those earning $20,000 a year or more) to one per 100 employes. A large number of high salaried persons working in the poverty area seemed out of place. Another amendment barred the use of poverty program legal services to defend persons accused of unlawful demonstrations. Also poverty workers and recipient of aid were barred from picketing or taking part in demonstrations. This was an attempt to overcome the objection that the program was rewarding those who were fighting the hands that fed them.

Another reason the program had so much trouble in Congress is that the usual political elements were lacking. The poor have no lobby to fight their battle. And the poor are not in any position to deliver votes or to deny them.

The House and Senate conferees agreed to retain the House amendment that eventually would all but put the controversial Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) out of business. This amendment would permit local governments (city hall) to take charge of the community action programs now run by private agencies or the OEO after Feb. 1, 1969.

Thus the war on poverty is to be given a new lease on life but with a few new rules to go by. But we sense that Congress has agreed to its perpetuation with considerable reluctance and still has doubt that government spending can eliminate or substantially reduce poverty. The next two years may be a crucial probationary period.

Longview, Wash.
News
(Cir. D. 19,983)
DEC 16 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

SHERIFF'S OFFICE

Dannie R. Fankell, 21, Walla Walla, has posted $59 bail on a charge of negligent driving.

Maryland H. Pluckett, [illegible]

Tongue Point Job Corps Center, is being held in the county jail in lieu of $100 bail on a charge of shoplifting.

Gladys Lee Roberson, 17, Tongue Point Job Corps Center, is being held in the county jail in lieu of $100 bail on a charge of shoplifting.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 11 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Ex-Job Corps Youths Employed

Two former Job Corps boys, both from North Dakota and both having taken training at the Tongue Point Center, are now working at Phillips-Drucker company. The company manufactures surgical equipment. The two are Larry Grieb, formerly of Rugby, N. D., the son of Mrs. Darlene Larson, who plans a college education; and Quentin Petra, formerly of Jamestown, N. D., who attended both Tongue Point and Clearfield, Utah, Job Corps Centers.

Longview, Wash.
Daily News
(Circ. D. 19,983)
DEC 20 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

SHOPLIFTERS CAUGHT — Two 17-year-old girls from the Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria have been arrested by Kelso police on charges of shoplifting at the Kelso J. C. Penney Store. The girls were lodged at the county jail pending disposition of their cases.

Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 14 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Senior Citizens Center Op

The small recreation center opened by the Job Corps recently at 14th and Duane does double duty—as a Job Corps installation at night and a community center for senior citizens in the day time. Operation of the senior citizens' activity is under the Church Women United, headed by Mrs. Stuart Lay. Churches take it over a month at a time. December is Trinity Lutheran's month. At left are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jauert, Rt. 1, who stopped in while visiting town and enjoyed coffee with Mrs. William Holt and Mrs. Ed Luoma, right, at the Trinity Lutheran staff that mans the center this month. coffee with Mrs. William Holt and Mrs. Ed Luoma, right, of ter are 10-4 Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and 10-2 Fridays.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D. 249,487 - S. 397,553)
DEC 30 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

GOP Freshmen Charting New Role

776

—BY A. ROBERT SMITH
Washington Correspondent, The Oregonian

WASHINGTON — Rep. John Dellenback and his colleagues among the freshman Republicans in Congress are struggling to overcome a doubly-damning identity.

"We are not nay-sayers," declares Rep. Donald W. Riegle, Jr., of Michigan, who is 29 years of age and looks something like Mayor John Lindsay of New York.

To prove that they don't automatically say nay to all of President Johnson's legislative proposals, Reps. Riegle, Dellenback and Edward G. Biester of Pennsylvania compiled the voting records of the 48 new Republican congressmen this year to show that all of them supported such progressive measures as bills for clean meat, clean air, mental health, increased Social Security and a congressional ethics committee.

They were reacting, to be sure, to President Johnson's allegation that his troubles in Congress this year were caused by the nay-sayers in the GOP.

But these new Republicans don't want to be identified as me-too Republicans who go along with everything the Democratic Administration proposes. They emphasize that they voted to limit federal spending on numerous occasions.

"We feel that these problems should not be solved just by the federal government," declared Dellenback. "There is a much more significant role for private enterprise to play."

The basic flaw in the Johnson Administration's approach to domestic problems, as Dellenback sees it, is that it continues to try the methods of the Thirties. A problem is identified, a new federal agency is created to cope with it, an expansive budget is adopted and new spending programs are launched.

The real nay-sayers are those in the Johnson Administration who resist any deviation from this fundamental New Deal approach, claims Rep. Biester.

But there are other nay-sayers, the more conservative members of both parties who still prefer the methods of the Twenties: Hold down government spending, keep taxes low, let private business function with as few regulations from government as possible, and remember that the poor will always be with us.

If the Democratic Party is dominated by men schooled in the dogmatism of the New Deal, the Republican Party has yet to liberate itself from the dogmatism of anti-New Deal reaction.

The freshman Republicans, outnumbered by their conservative brethren, are a minority within a minority, so they have limited power. But they possess a great deal of determination and a strong conviction that they truly represent the mood of America. As they interpret this contemporary mood, it wants answers to current problems and let's not worry about ideology. There is a new political pragmatism that says government and business should stop struggling against one another and start working as allies against the common problems of the nation: Slum housing, crime, polluted air and water, urban congestion, inflation.

A movement in this direction has been underway for some time, as the federal government has entered into contracts with private business and industry for research, development and execution of a growing range of programs. The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria, for example, has been operating under a contract awarded to the University of Oregon, which in turn subcontracted part of the training program to Philco-Ford Corp.

These fresh-faced Republicans with fresh ideas on Capitol Hill realize that they cannot overcome the frustrations of powerlessness unless a like-minded Republican is elected president next year. Rockefeller, Romney or Percy would be their kind of man, a GOP president under whom the new Republican pragmatism could take form and substance.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 20 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Greeting from Corpswomen

776

Tongue Point corpswomen have erected this Christmas greeting in the form of a Job Corps insignia-decorated tree at the entrance to Tongue Point on Highway 30. Student Government Director Alice Eubanks (left), aided by two unidentified corpswomen, places the "decorations" on the center's greeting card to the community.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 19 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees Plan Baby Home Party

776

A Christmas party for youngsters at the Waverly Baby Home in Portland will be sponsored by 20 corpswomen from Tongue Point Job Corps center Sunday, in cooperation with the Astoria Business and Professional Women's club.

A musical group under direction of Claude Keezer, center music instructor, will perform. Gifts of pajamas, made by the girls in their home and family life classes, and packages of cookies will be given the children. Two car washes held at the center raised $24 with which the corpswomen purchased needed kitchen equipment for the Portland institution.

The party is sponsored by the Tongue Point student government with Kathy Ingalls and Nancy Hess as chairmen. Barbara Schumacher, communication skills instructor, will accompany the group to Portland.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D. 249,487 - S. 397,553)
JAN 8 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Myers Books Astoria Visit

776

ASTORIA (Special) — Secretary of State Clay Myers will visit Astoria Jan. 11.

He will speak at Astoria High School, visit Elmore salmon and tuna cannery, have lunch with a group of commercial fishermen, and have dinner at Tongue Point Job Corps Center where his brother Norman is an instructor.

Myers has not yet formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination to succeed himself. House Speaker F.P. Montgomery is an announced Republican candidate.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 6,590)
DEC 28 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Variety Show Billed Saturday At Tongue Point

776

A special Job Corps sponsored variety show will be presented at the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center Saturday at 8 p.m. in the center theater, it was announced today by the center's health, physical education and recreation department.

The public is invited.

The troupe coming to Tongue Point has been making guest appearances at Job Corps centers throughout the west. Professional performers including Leon Peterson, Danny Rees and Ginni Clemmens will be featured during the one-hour program.

Peterson, a vocalist, has made appearances in major cities across the US. He appeared in the musical "Madam Butterfly" and worked with Sammy Davis Jr. in "Jambolai."

Rees offers a variety and comedy routine in the form of magic, music, unicycling and juggling.

Miss Clemmens, a ballad singer, has recorded on Folkways label and has appeared on several television programs including Artists Showcase.

There will be no admission charge.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 3 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Money Goes to Trainees' Homes

776

Job Corps enrollees over the nation helped make Christmas a happier occasion for their families through the Job Corps allotment plan, officials of the Tongue Point center pointed out this week.

In December alone more than $1,475,000 went to needy families of Corps members in the 50 states. Since the first allotment checks went out in March, 1965, more than $29,000,000 has been voluntarily sent home by Job Corps men and women under the Job Corps allotment plan.

For every satisfactory month in the Job Corps, enrollees can receive up to $50 a month in a readjustment allowance held in their name. A corps member is permitted to send up to half of this amount to needy dependents. The Job Corps will then match this voluntary allotment and the total will go to the corps member's family.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 3 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Raise Funds Astoria Education association raised $330 for scholarship purposes with a rummage sale conducted by teachers, with help of many parents, during the Christmas period. A quantity of material remained unsold. Four Tongue Point girls helped pack and ship 15 boxes of clothes and shoes to Fairview home in Salem, and four boxes to Waverly Children's home, Portland.

Oregon Statesman
Salem, Oregon
Cir. D 21,920 - S 22,960
DEC 28 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Learns First Hand Arturo Vasquez (left), a Job Corps graduate, and James Hawkins (center), now participating in the program, explain what the Job Corps is about to Larry Teague, Stayton, who is planning on going into the program, during an informal get-together at the Salem Employment office on Wednesday. Vasquez is a TV repairman and Hawkins plans on going in the Army when he graduates. All are high school dropouts. (Statesman Photo by John Ericksen)

Salem Boys Thank Job Corps For Making Careers Possible

By RON BLANKENBAKER
Staff Writer, The Statesman

"Without the Job Corps I was nothing. Now I've got a chance."

This was the comment of young James Hawkins, a Salem youth who has completed nine months training at the Wolf Creek Job Corps Center near Roseburg.

Hawkins was speaking out to Job Corps graduates, participants and young men planning on going into the program during an informal gathering Wednesday at Salem Employment office.

Home on Leave

Some of the youths attending the meeting, like Hawkins, were home in Salem on holiday leave. Most of the 15 in the room were high school dropouts between 16 and 22 years of age who are thinking about going into the Job Corps. "We called this meeting so these boys could get the full facts about the Job Corps from those who are participating," said G. W. Turner, youth employment representative at the Salem Employment office.

Hawkins hopes to make a career in the Army when he completes his two years in the Job Corps. "Before I got into the Job Corps I couldn't pass the tests to get into the Army," he says.

Couldn't Read or Write

"They've got doggone good teachers — I know — I started without an education. I couldn't read or write. Now I can read up to a junior high level after nine months," says Hawkins. He adds that he was an 11th grade North Salem High School dropout before getting into the Job Corps.

Hawkins' audience ranged from Job Corps graduates like Arturo Vasquez, who is now working as a radio-television repairman in Keizer, to Larry Teague, Stayton, who dropped out of high school last year, or another youth, a red-haired lad with baggy pants stuffed into knee - high rubber boots, who had hitch - hiked up from Klamath Falls earlier in the day to see about getting back into the Job Corps.

Some Quit, Want Back

The Job Corps has its own dropouts. The red - haired boy from Klamath Falls is one of them. He'd given the program a short try at the Tongue Point Center. Now he wants to try again.

Vasquez dropped out of high school in Texas. He joined the Job Corps here in Salem and went to the Gary Job Corps Urban Center at San Marcos, Tex. Two years later he returned to Salem and got a job on his first interview, according to Turner.

Vasquez told the gathering how he received help in math and improved his reading comprehension during his two years while at the same time gained practical experience in his chosen field, radio and television repair. "Some of the boys get into trouble at the Job Corps Center," says Vasquez. "But it is up to you. If you want to be someone you have to work for it."

Vasquez points out that while he is now working at his trade in Salem he is still going to school nights to get his General Educational Development (GED) certificate.

Another youth, who has been participating in the program at the Angel Center near Yachats, said, "You get what you're looking for in the Job Corps. If you're looking for an education you'll get it. If you're lookin for a trade, you'll get it, and you're looking for trouble you get that too."

Lebanon, Oregon
Express
(Cir. 3 x W 3580)
DEC 22 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Rebecca Canavan Is Home For The Holidays

776

Rebecca Canavan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Canavan is home for the holidays from Tongue Point Job Corps Center. Miss Canavan who joined the corps on Aug. 30 reported to Moses Lake but was later transferred to Tongue Point where she is studying business training.

She will conclude her leave on Jan. 8.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 9 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Trainees Return After Holidays

776

Most of the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps trainees who went home for the holidays had returned by Tuesday, a spokesman for the center said. To avoid clogging national travel facilities during the heavy holiday travel period, corps members were not permitted to begin their return trips until January 5.

Of 310 Tongue Point corpswomen who went home for Christmas, 101 paid their own transportation costs because they either had not been enrolled for the necessary six-month period or had already received paid emergency leave. There were 355 remaining at the center during the holidays.

A new group of approximately 50 enrollees is expected at the center Wednesday, coming from Alaska, Oregon, Washington, Hawaii, Arizona, California, Nevada, Florida, South Carolina and Georgia.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 5 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Clay Myers Dates Visit To Astoria

776

Clay Myers, Oregon secretary of state, will visit Astoria January 11, it was learned here Friday.

Myers is expected to announce soon his candidacy for the Republican nomination for re-election. He will be opposed in the primary by F. P. Montgomery, speaker of the House, who has already announced his candidacy.

Meyers will speak at an Astoria high assembly at 9:30 a.m., tour the Elmore cannery, and have lunch with a group of fishermen at the Sea Fare to learn problems of the commercial fishing industry. He will be guest at a tea at 3:30 p.m. in the Flag room of the Astor library, given by Republican women with Mrs. Edward Harvey as chairman, and will visit Tongue Point Job Corps center.

Myers is scheduled for dinner at Tongue Point, where his brother Norman Myers is an instructor in communications skills.

Adelaine Sather with Mayor Steinback signing the proclamation designating October 15-21 as National Business Women's Week.

National Business Womens Week

October 15th Through 21st

Career Opportunities in Astoria . . .

Astoria Beauty College

Danny & Arlene Jones, Owners

MICHELLE PATTERSON — STAR OF THE SEA

Astoria Motel

1356 W. Marine Drive — Crystal Lee, Mgr.

LINDA GUSTAFSON — ASTORIA HIGH

Astoria Cleaners

354-9th Street, Astoria — Dolores Smith, Owner

ESTHER HOUSTON — JOB CORPS

Astoria Apparel

1235 Commercial — Astoria — Blanche Mjelde, Owner

From left to right — Mrs. Ann Washer, Becky Hildenbrand, English teacher at Astoria High; Nancy Wahlbom, home economist at Star of the Sea; Pat Cunningham, staff accountant for Yergen & Meyer.

Welcome Wagon

Ann Washer, Hostess

LUCENDA VOELKER — CLATSOP COLLEGE

Opdyke's Gift & Candle Shop

1361 Duane, Astoria — Ed Opdyke, Mgr.

DIANE STEELMAN — CLATSOP COLLEGE

Utzinger's Book Store

1292 Commercial — Ed Utzinger, Owner

CHRIS BUGAS — STAR OF THE SEA

Clarx

Art and Helen Stromsness, Owners

BECKY SWANSON AND TENA STEINMANN

Bev's Stitch & Sew

2551 4th, Astoria — Bev McRostie (left) and Colleen Hensely (seated)

BECKY DEL RIO — JOB CORPS

Gimre's Shoe Store

Vera Craig, Assistant Manager

VIRGINIA RODRIQUEZ — JOB CORPS

Sea Fare Restaurant

Alice Middleton, BPWC and Louise of the Sea Fare

MARY ROSCO — STAR OF THE SEA

Luce-Layton Funeral Home

Dal Layton, Director

YVONNE HARRIS — JOB CORPS

Ethel Sparks, Secretarial Service

Warrenton, Oregon

LA VERNE KALEIKINI — JOB CORPS

N-U Mart, Inc.

Wes Jacobsen, Owner

ROBIN GRIPPO — JOB CORPS

Mead Upholstery

1139 Exchange — Carl and Corinne Mead, Owners

JAN MOGENSON — CLATSOP COLLEGE

The Fabric Shop

Harriet Garner, Owner

BEVERLY LEDBETTER — ASTORIA HIGH

Pacific Northwest Bell

Marjorie Forness, Chief Operator

GLADYS ROBERSON — JOB CORPS

J. C. Penney Co.

1343 Commercial — Lowell Poup, Mgr.

SHARON BURKHARDT — ASTORIA HIGH

Darigold

Mr. Johnson, Personal Mgr.

SUSAN TIKKA — ASTORIA HIGH

Equitable Savings & Loan

Mrs. Christianson, Mgr.

Teacher-Training Program for Advanced Students

Maddox Dance Studio

Jeanne Maddox Fontabond, Owner

HANNELLE HAKALA and HAROLD BULL — AST. HIGH

Little Denmark Gift Shop

1153 Commercial — Ellen Madsen, Owner

SUE KING — ASTORIA HIGH

Viking Sewing Center

Mrs. Read, Co-Mgr.

SHIRLEY JONES — JOB CORPS

Adelaine's Art & Apparel

Adelaine Sather, Owner-Mgr.

Daily Astorian
Astoria, Oregon
(Cir. D 8,590)
DEC 28 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Job Corps Discussion

The question whether the Job Corps is worth what it costs is still very moot. It is still subject of much discussion, in and out of government.

The current issue of Old Oregon, the University of Oregon alumni magazine, contributes something to the discussion with an article in its current issue about the Tongue Point Center. Written by Lucille Vaughan Payne, associate editor of the magazine, the article finds cost of operation indeed expensive — about $6,000 annually per trainee — but says that the War on Poverty is bound to be expensive.

Mrs. Payne hits at one major weakness of the Job Corps—the lack of any system of measuring results.

Graduates simply sink out of sight and no one knows if they find jobs, manage to keep them, or live more satisfying and productive lives.

Mrs. Payne has noted one of the most serious defects in the Job Corps system here. We simply have no way of knowing what we get for the millions spent on this program.

Mrs. Payne suggests that one major benefit of the program may be the corps of teachers and counsellors who have learned new vocational teaching techniques and methods of directing dropout students back into the channels of education.

Few staff members in Job Corps Centers stay more than two years—they just can't take it any longer, she reports.

"The two year syndrome may be a good thing," she writes. Most of the men and women who succumb to it go back to public school jobs, and they take with them an education they could have received nowhere else in the world."

This corps of trained teachers, skilled in reclaiming youngsters headed for the scrap heap, could be of enormous value if the public school system is overhauled some day to provide more attention to students whose future lies in vocational training rather than college-oriented education.

Mrs. Payne suggests that such an overhauling may be an eventual result of lessons learned in the Job Corps experience.

Certainly vocational training at home is much less expensive than in centers such as Tongue Point.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 4 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

'Color Me Human' Slide Program Proving Popular

The color slide program "Color Me Human," an informational presentation on the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center, was presented on Wednesday afternoon before the Women's association of the First Presbyterian church. Other showings scheduled this month, according to Syd Thompson, center administrative assistant for community services, are Thursday night at the center library, Beta Sigma Phi combined chapter meeting; January 11, 1:30 p.m., Navy Heights community hall, Coast Guard Wives club; January 18, 8 p.m., Astor Library, Jay-C-Ettes.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 8 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

CG Wives Club To Have Lunch At Navy Heights

The color slide program "Color Me Human" an informational presentation on the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center, will be shown at the Coast Guard wives club 11:30 dessert luncheon Thursday at Community Building, Navy Heights.

All Coast Guard wives in the area are invited to attend and are asked to bring any size paper bags to meeting for a fund raiser.

Hostesses will be Mrs. R. C. Boyd, Mrs. Herbert Goodland and Mrs. David Mitchell. A door prize to be awarded and baby sitting is available.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
DEC 29 1967
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tongue Point corpswomen recently completed a successful drive for money and canned goods in cooperation with the Sunrise Division of the Clatsop sheriff's office. Reserve deputy Leslie Cowan visited with Santa, Jackie Spalding, a Tongue Point staffer, and Irene Cox, student body deputy director, who were weighing and boxing canned goods for delivery to the sheriff's office. (Tongue Point Photo)

Pendleton, Oregon
East Oregonian
(Cir. D 9939)
JAN 4 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 9 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

2 Beta Chapters Hear Speaker at Job Corps Center

Gamma Alpha chapter of Beta Sigma Phi were guests of Alpha Preceptor chapter when it held its January meeting at the library at Tongue Point center.

Sydney Thompson was the speaker, giving insight into the center and how it is operated. After a short business meeting, doughnuts and coffee were served.

For their Christmas party, Gamma Alpha members met at the home of Mrs. Thomas Cameron, which was elaborately decorated for the season. Following a potluck supper, games were played, with prizes going to the Mesdames Ron Ricketts, Dale Evans, Charles Anderson and Miss Karen Koy. Special prizes for the evening were awarded to Mrs. Joe Thompson and Mrs. Ricketts.

Tom-and-Jerries were served during a social hour, when secret sister exchange gifts under a shining pink tree were distributed.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 10 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Fewer Students From Federal Families Enrolled

There has been a sharp drop in number of students in Astoria schools from federally-employed families this school year, Superintendent Roy Seeborg reported Wednesday.

Survey of the numbers was made by William Vanek, field officer of federal Office of Education, who was here this week.

Number of students from families living in the federally-owned Navy Heights area fell from 201 last year to 143 this year. The 143 total includes 25 from Coast Guard families who have moved into Navy Heights, so that the number from Job Corps staff families has fallen from 201 to 118.

Number of students from federal families living off federal property fell from 217 to 137.

Reduction of staff that occurred when the Job Corps changed Tongue Point to a women's center is responsible for the drop, Seeborg said.

Last year the school district received $99,900 in reimbursement for educating these students under Public Law 874; this year the estimated receipts will be $80,971.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 4 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Corps Graduate Now Employed

Patricia Sidney, 20, Galveston, Tex., former head of the student government at Tongue Point Women's Job Corps Center, has been employed as a clerk-typist by the American Cancer Society at Los Angeles, according to word received this week by center officials.

Miss Sidney began her training in business and clerical occupations at Tongue Point in March, 1967, and transferred to the JCVW program at Long Beach, Calif., October 23. Under the JCVW program the YMCA provides housing and counseling and arranges on-the-job training for corpswomen. She graduated from the JCVW program December 16, and was immediately offered the position in Los Angeles, at a salary of $305 per month, according to the letter received here from the Long Beach YWCA.

The Oregonian
Portland, Oregon
(Cir. D. 240,487 - S. 307,553)
JAN 19 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

DIRECTOR TO TALK

Dr. Lillanna Kopp, associate director of center life of the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps, will discuss purposes and activities of the center at a noon meeting of the Oregon Social Welfare Association Thursday, Jan. 18, at the Henry Ford's Restaurant.

A. Robert Smith

Freshmen Republicans Claim They're Not Obstructionists

WASHINGTON — Rep. John Dellenback and his colleagues among the freshman Republicans in Congress are struggling to overcome a doubly-damning identity.

"We are not nay-sayers," declares Rep. Donald W. Riegle Jr. of Michigan, who is 29 years of age and looks something like Mayor John Lindsay of New York.

To prove that they don't automatically say nay to all of President Johnson's legislative proposals, Reps. Riegle, Dellenback and Edward G. Biester of Pennsylvania compiled the voting records of the 48 new Republican congressmen this year to show that all of them supported such progressive measures as bills for clean meat, clean air, mental health, increased Social Security and a congressional ethics committee.

They were reacting, to be sure, to President Johnson's allegation that his troubles in Congress this year were caused by the nay-sayers in the GOP.

But these new Republicans don't want to be identified as me-too Republicans who go along with everything the Democratic Administration proposes. They emphasize that they voted to limit federal spending on numerous occasions.

"We feel that these problems should not be solved just by the federal government," declared Dellenback. "There is a much more significant role for private enterprise to play."

The basic flaw in the Johnson Administration's approach to domestic problems, as Dellenback sees it, is that it continues to try the methods of the Thirties. A problem is identified, a new federal agency is created to cope with it, an expansive budget is adopted and new spending programs are launched.

The real nay-sayers are those in the Johnson Administration who resist any deviation from this fundamental New Deal approach, claims Rep. Biester.

But there are other nay-sayers, the more conservative members of both parties who still prefer the methods of the Twenties: Hold down government spending, keep taxes low, let private business function with as few regulations from government as possible, and remember that the poor will always be with us.

If the Democratic Party is dominated by men schooled in the dogmatism of the New Deal, the Republican Party has yet to liberate itself from the dogmatism of anti-New Deal reaction.

The freshman Republicans, outnumbered by their conservative brethren, are a minority within a minority, so they have limited power. But they possess a great deal of determination and a strong conviction that they truly represent the mood of America.

As they interpret this contemporary mood, it wants answers to current problems and let's not worry about ideology. Theirs is a new political pragmatism that says government and business should stop struggling against one another and start working as allies against the common problems of the nation: Slum housing, crime, polluted air and water, urban congestion, inflation.

A movement in this direction has been under way for some time, as the federal government has entered into contracts with private business and industry for research, development and execution of a growing range of programs. The Tongue Point Job Corps Center at Astoria, for example, has been operating under a contract awarded to the University of Oregon, which in turn subcontracted part of the training program to Philco-Ford Corp.

These fresh-faced Republicans with fresh ideas on Capitol Hill realize that they cannot overcome the frustrations of powerlessness unless a like-minded Republican is elected president next year. Rockefeller, Romney or Percy would be their kind of man, a GOP president under whom the new Republican pragmatism could take form and substance.

Trainees Collect Money, Food for Holiday Baskets

Enrollees at the Tongue Point Women's Job Corps center, chose a unique way to assist the Sunrise Division of the Clatsop county sheriff's office in collecting canned goods and raising money to help fill food baskets for the area's needy families for the 1967 Christmas season.

Corpswomen organized themselves into residential teams corresponding to the five residential living units at the center and competed with each other in a "Yule Bowl" football type competition with touchdowns being earned for each 10 pounds of canned goods collected or for each $1 raised.

Teams included Blue Angels, Cobras, Panthers and Bonanza Bombers. Final scores for the residential teams put the Blue Angels (residence 1) in first place with 37 touchdowns; the Cobras (residence 2) in second place with 33 touchdowns; the Panthers (residence 4) in third place with 24 touchdowns; the Bonanza Bombers (residence 5) in fourth place with 10 touchdowns, and residence 3 in fifth place with 3 touchdowns.

Corpswomen collected canned goods on several door-to-door drives in Navy Heights and Astoria. Donations were also collected at the center's choral Christmas concert.

A total of $54.03 and 507 pounds of canned goods were delivered to the sheriff's office as a result of the student government Yule Bowl.

Astoria, Oregon
Astorian
(Cir. D 6943)
JAN 8 - 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

BPW to Entertain State Officers 'Internationally'

The meeting Tuesday evening in the new music room of the Job Corps center at Tongue Point will offer something special for members of the Business and Professional Women's club.

It will mark the visit of Gladys Myers, Springfield, state president of BPW, who will be accompanied on her visit to the Astoria chapter by Betty Alexander, Pacific district director.

Following the all-important meeting with the two state officers, an international "pot pourri" of entertainment will take place, with a fashion show by the attractive models from the Job Corps, an exhibit of foreign lands, international costumes and even the dessert, consisting of foreign confections, served in an international setting.

Members of the Seaside Business and Professional Women's club and of the newly organized BPW club of Clatskanie and Westport will be special guests.

Signal
Seaside, Oregon
(Cir. W 2,470)
JAN 11 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Legion auxiliary hears reports from committees

Guests introduced at the January 5 meeting of the Seaside American Legion auxiliary were Mmes. Harvey Lynch and Ethel Whitesell, new members; Mrs. Delmar Stephens, member, and Mmes. Hosford, Beckman, Dotlusby and Jean Johns. Mrs. Les McFarland made the introductions. Mrs. Glen Lowe presided over the meeting.

Mrs. Mary Littrell, Americanism chairman, asked members to read the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag, the preamble of the American Legion auxiliary, the preamble to the constitution, the American Creed and the Bill of Rights, and the Gettysburg address. She announced that she will deliver flag codes to the schools next week.

Mrs. Fran Hoffman, community service chairman, reported 26 hours work on the Bloodmobile, 24 hours on the dinner for the Job Corps girls and 12 hours on the Christmas basket program.

Mrs. Hoffman reported an additional $14.25 on the bazaar. President Lowe appointed Mrs. Walter Ziegler as new Poppy poster chairman.

The American government class and the eighth grade class of Seaside high school and Broadway school received 239 copies of the pamphlets "How a Thought Becomes a Bill" and "How a Bill Becomes a Law," Mrs. Ansell Morehouse, legislative chairman, delivered the pamphlets.

Mrs. McFarland, rehabilitation chairman, announced a credit of $156.61 on items sent to the veterans' hospital. She reminded members of the sewing session January 18 at 12:30 p.m. at her home. The group voted that she buy flannel material and towels needed to make up articles for the hospital.

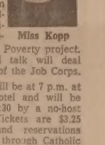
Mrs. Litten stated that 17 girls from the Job Corps center attended the successful dinner held in December. The girls entertained at the dinner.

Mrs. Littrell won the attendance prize. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Elmer Maize and Mrs. John Raniero.

Register-Guard
Eugene, Oregon
(Cir. D 48,512 - S. 48,290)
JAN 20 1968
Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Nun 'on Loan' To Speak At Banquet

Lillanna Kopp, associate directo of the Women's Job Corps at Tongue Point, will be the featured speaker Jan. 30 at the annual dinner meeting of Catholic Charities of Lane County.



Miss Kopp

Miss Kopp, known as Sister Mary Audrey in her order of the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary, is on loan for a year from Marylhurst College to the University of Oregon's War on Poverty project. Her illustrated talk will deal with the work of the Job Corps.

The dinner will be at 7 p.m. at the Eugene Hotel and will be preceded at 6:30 by a no-host social hour. Tickets are $3.25 per person and reservations may be made through Catholic Charities Director Frank Nearing.

Miss Kopp received a bachelor degree from Marylhurst College and holds master's degrees in psychology and sociology from Seattle University and St. Louis University. Her doctorate in anthropology is also from St. Louis University.

She has had a wide range of teaching experience and is in demand as a speaker and lecturer. She has been active in United Good Neighbor fund drives, State Welfare work, juvenile programs and the Christis School.

Change Comes to Job Corps Center

...ment, girls came at Tongue Point Job ...e Center last year. Above, last boy to graduate receives his certificate. Below, first girl arrivals are interviewed.